Say Hey:

Stevie (Kombat) Kramer. A twisted, bitter, and sad little being.

Say Hey Stevie - I'm I next in line? Send me wife a picture with me snuggled up to one of those hefers you pleaded to come to the police station on January 8, 2004.

Mike. reading Dave's radio site, he agrees with John. it appears to be an update of the RP2100. it looks a bit 60's-ish. i like the looks of it. reminds me of an old Zenith, with the wave-mag ant on top, also used as a handle. don't really need another radio here, but, if the specs are as good as the 2100, might be worth a look. now, lets hope it isn't vapor ware.

Sorry Bob - we can't process that request. This is one we have gotten our hands onto though - You don't remember it do you? Fortunately one of your neighbors was quick enough to get a shot with the disposable camera for posterity's sake.

ATTIC LOOP ANTENNAS seem to be a better and more effective use of the 'Space' in an Attic and generally have lower noise pick-up too.
* simple Square for a Square Attic Area
* simple Rectangle for Rectangle Attic Area
* Bow-Tie Dipole Antenna in a Figure '8' [X] can be either Square of Rectangle
 Center of '8' [X] Feed-Point
 2 Opposite High Corners and 2 Opposite Low Corners

Say Hey Stevie:

Incorrect again. I don't wear jeans. I'm really celebrating the queen's birthday. Plenty of booze here to last at least until Monday 1100 hrs. Rimping has a load of different wines for sale. Any 3 bottles for just 1,000 baht. I stock up on that. Even make vinegar from some of the wine. Takes about 3 months tho. Enjoy what is left of the weekend. I know we will. Off to our exercise area around shitty hall tomorrow morning. We like the bike and hike routine. Hear your health isn't too good lately Stevie. Have to get out there and get that tired, twisted body of yours in action.

P.S. Deja check out THAISTOCKS.COM yet?

Democratic Socialists of America Affiliated Congressional Socialist Caucus Re-Discovered

It seems that Jim Hoft at Gateway Pundit has discovered a list of the illlustrious members of the Congressional Progressive Caucus and their affiliation with Democratic Socialists of America.

http://gatewaypundit.firstthings.com/2010/08/american-socialists-release-names-of-70-congr

I won't bother to bore you with all the links to the articles I've written on the subject at RBO (but I will mention that I first wrote about the CPC as a group in October 2008), not to mention all the numeorus articles Trevor Loudon has written about the DSA and the nefarious list of individuals connected to both it and the Communist Party USA.

I recall reading somewhere that the KWZ-30 had a unique method of handling AM signal fading. It wasn't synchronous detection but something else. Does anyone remember what it was?

The KWZ-30's audio quality is the best I've encountered on any HF receiver. And I've had a few. And their Auto Notch function is second to none - totally transparent when selected, and with practically no effect on recovered audio quality.

SPACE WEATHER ADVISORY BULLETIN #10- 2
2010 August 14 at 05:04 a.m. MST (2010 August 14 1704 UTC)

* FIRST SOLAR RADIATION STORM OF SOLAR CYCLE 24 ****

On Saturday, August 14, 2010 a small solar flare erupted on the Sun at about 6am EDT. Associated with this flare was a coronal mass ejection (CME) that was partially directed towards the Earth. Also associated with this event was a S1 or minor solar radiation storm on the NOAA Space Weather Scales http: http://www.swpc.noaa.gov/NOAAscales/. The only impacts expected for a solar radiation storm of this magnitude are minor impacts to HF radio communications in the polar regions. However, this is the first solar radiation storm of Solar Cycle 24 and the first solar radiation storm since December of 2006.

At this time, the solar radiation storm has subsided below threshold levels. However, oscillation around this threshold is possible for the next several hours. Subsequent significant activity is not expected but there may be some level of geomagnetic storming on or around August 17th and 18th from the coronal mass ejection associated with this event. Initial observations of the coronal mass ejection direction and velocity do not indicate a high likelihood of significant geomagnetic storming but the Space Weather Prediction Center will continue to monitor this event as it unfolds TeaBagging GOP seems hellbent to destroy the constitution this week!

That's four amendments that teabaggers wish to change and ignore.

Freedom of religion (Amendment 1)
Due Process (Amendment 5)
Rights Denied on Account of Race (Amendment 15)
Income Tax (Amendment 16)

I can hardly wait to see how the GOP handles Amendment 2 and plans to take the teabagger's guns.

On the subject of freedom of religion...
Hope your not catholic.

Mosques have become controversial in the West. To elite liberals, this is cause for dismay and anger, and evidence of the derangement of the Western mind.

In totality they would seem to lay to waste the common presupposition on Free Speech orthodoxy. The truth is that for our liberals Tolerance is a one-way street. Far from invincible, Free Speech is abandoned for the pretense it is the moment a stronger force intrudes on it. And stronger forces are plentiful in our politics: genuine Free Speech men, ready to make good on Voltaire’s famous dictum, are few and far between.

I think it behooves us to contact Kremer and ask if you actually did send anything. If I can get through, then we'll know that this is just another of your lies. My guess is that it IS another of your lies. Why would there be any changes at this point?

I haven't been outside the US yet, and I'm not old enough to have met too many people except for college. I have trouble understanding people like this.

I'm beginning to think that they are 'evil.' My parents talked about evil people but other than guys like rapists or serial killers I didn't think there were any. Now I'm not so sure. I think Larbgai is evil like the minister talks about in church. Of course, if he is the pedophile from Australia he IS evil. If he's the guy named Sutton, and he's cheating on his wife with the transvestite from Thailand so he's still evil. No matter which, I think he's evil. I imagine that when he reads this he will laugh. An evil person would laugh at it.

I don't think Robert Johnson is evil. I think he is just very sick. He makes a post saying that he always lies then he makes another post saying that he's making money, another post saying that he's always drunk, then another post saying someone's been arrested. I don't understand? If he admits that he's a liar, what makes him think that anyone believes any of his posts?

How can Kramer have been arrested or deported in 2004 yet be interviewed working for the Thai police in 2008? Doesn't Johnson understand that people can see that he's lying? Is he so drunk that he doesn't care what he writes? Or is he so drunk that he doesn't know what he writes?

Scott Koplin is different. He's got some mental problems. It shows in that photo of him with the gun and the way he's always threatening to hurt people. I'm glad I don't live near him! I think he is dangerous to innocent people.

So, I just have to ask the question! Why is CMPK not making that bread any more! Simple really, they went BROKE! If you had a product that was the"rave of Chiang Mai", why wasn't CMPK able to capitalise on that and make a fortune? One very simple answer! Robert Johnson! he couldn't run an effective business to save himself and my guess is his share trading is similarly flawed! Small wonder he is forced to live in a dive in Chiang Mai!

It was. So was the hummas. No one ever complained about the taste of CMPK food. The reason people stopped buying your goods was because of YOU. People didn't like YOU. People put YOU out of business because of your personality. It doesn't appear to have changed since then.

And yet people are still willing to purchase it rather than give you any money for yours. People dislike you so badly that they are more than willing to eat a different product rather than do anything that might further your business. Doesn't that tell you something about the way people think of you?

I received an e-mail from Kramer today in response to one I wrote yesterday (to the working address on his website.) He says he has never received ANY e-mail from the trolls since Robert Johnson was made to sign a Thai police document stating he would refrain from mail-bombing people or sending any mail to Kramer. He says he has a copy of that document. (No wonder Johnson is afraid to contact him. It's jail time for Johnson if he does!)

Another of Larbgai's lies put to rest. Doesn't he get tired of being seen as the fool?

What is so special about that day, other than you were forced to sign a Thai Police document saying that you would stop sending people e-mail? It's been proven that no one was arrested on that day. So that was just another of your lies. It's been proven that no one was deported. So that was another of your lies. You have provided NOTHING but lies, continuing on today with your nonsense about making money on the Thai stock market. More lies...

No infamy in this for anyone but you. And you have been reminding people about if for years. That really doesn't make much sense...

You are still out of business and her business is doing fine. That's reality, not fantasy. People in Chiang Mai didn't like you and they showed it by not buying your goods. You were forced out of business while her restaurant and supermarket sales are doing well.

When you have nothing left, like he does, even lying to yourself must feel good. I doubt he even realizes how he appears to others.

* Old Creamer cares alright, why else would this troupe of sock puppets be out working overtime if Creamer did'nt care.
He lost the right to post his real name on the net and it hurts.
We, the DTS were responsible and proud of it.

There were some posts about it on August13. Doubt if it will be tremendously better from 350 or 350DL.For some reason PRC is not exporting decent radios ,though they are quite advanced and capable now.

In checking the sked for the RMS St. Helena, it departed St. Helena on the 11th, arriving in Cape Town today, the 16th. So, I'm guessing that the QSL's will depart via air from Cape Town sometime in the next day or so.

Say Hey Stevie:

Have you considered forming a moderated soc.culture.thai? Give you smething to do. It was you who tried forming a moderated rec.knives group and failed. Also you failed photography business. But don't let failure stand in your way son. Keep trying keep plugging away. Who knows, someday you may hit pay dirt.

Stocks took off today. Have a few laggards such as TOG and TTW. I purchased another 1,000 shares with the TTW decline. But those stocks will bounce back. My research has reflected that opinion. Stock portfolio market value is well over 2 mill THB. Not bad for a novice, eh?

Say Hey Stevie:

Correct again. Ole fatty is still in business. Day in day out, I never had a business in Thailand. I'm retired here Stevie. How many times must you be reminded of that? Just enjoying my "playing the stocks" day after day. Our leader, Paul Renaud found two diamonds in the rough and that being DEMCO and PRIN. I researched and bought in with Berli Jucker (BJC). There stock has shot up. BJC is expected to purchase Carrefour stores in Thailand, Malaysa, and Singapore, 40, 20, 2 stores respectively. Then their stock prices will shoot into the twenties. The bids will begin in September. Check out my investment club during your leisure. THAISTOCKS.COM

Well just about that time to put the feedbag on Stevie. Smoked Antarctia salmon on the bristo along with a tossed salad with another, (yes) another bottle of wine. Have a great evening Stevie. I know we will.

That requires a lot of processing power. It would follow that latency would be high. If you're using WWV as a time standard for something requiring very high precision, it would require a correction step.

Still, that's a pretty clever way of doing it.

In 2006, Nancy Pelosi led the Democratic charge by claiming she would "drain the swamp," but after 23 years in Washington and the last 4 years as House Speaker, she neglected to look for the drain. In fact, she continues to turn a blind eye and SUPPORTS her colleagues' indiscretions, most notably:

•Charlie Rangel
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=2085

•Maxine Waters
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=1264

•Barney Frank
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=2384

•Eric Massa
http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/03/15/AR2010031503363.html

When the Democrats won on November 7, 2006, Pelosi told us that "the American people voted to restore integrity and honesty in Washington, D.C., and the Democrats intend to lead the most honest, most open and most ethical Congress in history."

Instead, we have witnessed the least ethical and least transparent Congress in our history. Under the rule of Nancy Pelosi, we have lost more civil rights, are forced to pay more taxes, saw wasteful government spending increase exponentially, which just last week included another $26 billion in a so-called "state-aid bill."

It is Nancy Pelosi who has single-handedly rammed the health care bill through Congress that's now causing insurance rates to skyrocket, taxes to rise, and accelerating an exodus of good doctors from communities who needed them most. It is now Nancy Pelosi that is pushing a cap-and-tax bill that will kill jobs nationwide, raise the cost of energy, make us more dependent on fossil fuels, and further damage our already anemic economy.

It is Pelosi who continues to spearhead the drive to saddle this nation with $13 trillion in new debt over the next decade. It is Speaker Pelosi who now dares to tell us that we're still not paying enough in taxes and that we must pay EVEN MORE!

Pelosi, just like the President, wants to control EVERY aspect of your life. She is personally responsible for championing some of the most egregious legislation that will increase your taxes and strip you of your personal liberties.

Rather than worrying about defending Americans from foreign threats, focusing on the need to improve homeland security, getting the government off our backs, so that we can get back to work and stimulating the economy, Pelosi seeks ways to create media opportunities while stealing your freedoms and spending $19,000 of your hard-earned tax dollars on her office rent. She masks it all under the guise of "creating" and "saving" jobs.

Sadly, CA issues two kinds of COLBs ... an "official" copy of the COLB, and which requries a sworn statement in order to get one, and a "non-official" copy of the COLB, and which DOES NOT require a sworn statement.

Of course, no sworn statement is required if you are the so-called "registrant" (the person for whom the COLB is being requested).

But, for other, related persons, such as children of the "registrant", spouse or former spouses of the "registrant", grand-parents or grand-children of the "registrant", a sworn statement is required.

(You are required to swear, under penalty of purgery, that you are entitled by statute to receive a copy of the COLB of the "registrant").

Anyway, upon the recent death of my father, in Germany, the German officials would not allow him to be burried unless and until they had in their hands a COLB. His passport was not acceptable for this purpose.

The State of California took precisely THREE MONTHS and three days to issue to me an "official" COLB.

Immigration officials undoubtedly expected an "official" COLB, as this document has all kinds of special features which makes it nearly impossible to counterfeit. For their purposes, an "non-official" COLB is worthless, as you discovered.

As you do, John, I also always travel with my passport.

Concidering that my SW radio is one of the "Ultra-portables" I just use the two built in clocks on the digital face, I have a clock that sets to atomic time, and I just make sure it matches up with that clock and so on.

My log is simple enough, (Zulu) Time, frequency, and what was broadcasting, later on I check the stations that i could not identify online to update the log book. At first I was scanning to see what I could find, now I am actually sitting down to listening to some of the shows. Not really tried Dxing with it yet, just learning what is out there on shortwave.

I would think that your post would suggest more about the piss poor propagation lately, although it does appear to be improving, than it does the future of SW.

The government tightens it's grip around the throat of those who dare question their agents actions.

A Brooklyn jury took less than two hours Friday to convict right-wing loudmouth Harold (Hal) Turner of threatening to kill three Chicago judges.
Turner's mom and teenage son gasped and sobbed as the jury found the Internet shock jock guilty of a single charge of threatening to murder the judges - a charge that carries up to 10 years in prison.
An ashen-faced Turner stripped off his tie and belt and handed his wallet to a clerk before he was led out of the courtroom in downtown Brooklyn.
"I love you, dad," his son, Michael Turner, 16, said after the verdict was read.
Relatives of Turner angrily denounced the lightning-quick verdict, which came on the fourth day of his second retrial.
Two previous trials ended in mistrials after jurors were unable to agree on a verdict.
"There goes the First Amendment for everyone," said Kathy Diamond, Turner's mother. "These judges, their job is to protect the Constitution, not shred it.
She hugged her grandson who also insisted his father did nothing wrong.
"It's totally wrong," Michael Turner. "It's (his) opinion not a threat."
Jurors rushed out of the Brooklyn Heights courtroom without speaking to reporters. No date was set for sentencing.
Prosecutors say the former radio host threatened federal judges Richard Posner, William Bauer and Frank Easterbrook after they upheld Chicago's ban on handguns.
"Let me be the first to say this plainly: these judges deserve to be killed," Turner posted on his website in June 2009.
Turner, 48, of North Bergen, N.J., also posted the judges' phone numbers and office addresses, federal prosecutor Diane MacArthur told the jury.
The first two trials for Turner ended in deadlocked juries. The case was heard in Brooklyn so Turner would not be on trial in the judges' own courthouse.

I dunno, that sounds like merely an opinion to me. He never personally threatened to kill the judges. But then again I guess when the government considers itself to be a god, it can railroad anyone who doesn't bow down before it.

I mean, if you can't threaten to kill a federal judge, who can you make death threats to? Next they'll be telling us we can't threaten to rape our girlfriends or blow up a building!! Why the hell can't I threaten to kill a federal official? I pay their salary, doesn't that mean that I own them and can end their lives or make their lives a living hell???

Mine was a legitimate question, based on YOUR original comment. You, by Records show feds used ultra-right radio host for years

Sunday, November 29, 2009
Last updated: Thursday December 24, 2009, 2:21 PM

BY MIKE KELLY AND PETER J. SAMPSON
The Record
STAFF WRITERS

They called him "Valhalla."

But it was more than a nickname.

For more than five years, Hal Turner of North Bergen lived a double life.

The public knew him as an ultra-right-wing radio talk show host and Internet blogger with an audience of neo-Nazis and white supremacists attracted to his scorched-earth racism and bare-knuckles bashing of public figures. But to the FBI, and its expanding domestic counter-terror intelligence operations in the wake of the Sept. 11 attacks, Turner was "Valhalla" „ his code name as an informant who spied on his own controversial followers.

Turner's clandestine past was confirmed this past summer when he was jailed on charges that he made threats on his blog against three federal judges in Chicago. In court after his arrest, federal prosecutors acknowledged Turner's FBI ties but downplayed his importance and even described him as "unproductive."

But an investigation by The Record „ based on government documents, e-mails, court records and almost 20 hours of jailhouse interviews with Turner „ shows that federal authorities made frequent use of Turner in its battle against domestic terrorism.

As Turner took to his radio show and blog to say that those who opposed his extremist views deserve to die, he received thousands of dollars from the FBI to report on such groups as the Aryan Nations and the white supremacist National Alliance, and even a member of the Blue Eyed Devils skinhead punk band. Later, he was sent undercover to Brazil where he reported a plot to send non-military supplies to anti-American Iraqi resistance fighters. Sometimes he signed "Valhalla" on his FBI payment receipts instead of his own name.

His dual life of shock jock and informant offers a window into the murky realm of domestic intelligence in the years after the Sept. 11 terror attacks „ in particular, the difficult choices for the FBI in penetrating controversial fringe groups with equally controversial informants.

In interviews, conducted before Turner was released on bail, he said the FBI coached him to make racist, anti-Semitic and other threatening statements and now he feels double-crossed by the bureau after his arrest. The documents reviewed by The Record, however, show repeated instances of federal agents admonishing Turner for his extremism.

Federal prosecutors in Newark and Chicago declined to respond to Turner's claims, as did FBI officials. "We do not comment on matters before the courts and will not address Mr. Turner's allegations in the press," said the FBI's Weysan Dun, who runs the bureau's Newark field office.

Turner's "Valhalla" life will likely be on display this week when he is scheduled to go on trial for his alleged blog threats against three federal appeals court judges in Chicago who upheld a law banning handguns. The trial, originally set for Chicago, was switched to Brooklyn, with a judge flying in from Louisiana.

The trial may have its share of political intrigue. Turner's defense attorney, Michael Orozco, said he plans to subpoena

Governor-elect Chris Christie to testify about whether he advised the FBI about Turner while Christie was U.S. attorney in Newark. On Friday, Orozco filed a motion to dismiss the case, accusing the government of "outrageous conduct."

But the center of the court battle will likely be the story of Hal Turner and his FBI connections, which began in 2003 with the Newark-based Joint Terrorism Task Force, and continued on and off until this year.

Rumors of Turner's FBI work surfaced two years ago after unknown Internet hackers electronically broke into his Web site and found e-mails between Turner and an FBI agent. Turner never acknowledged his FBI role until after his arrest in June „ and then with a mix of anger and chagrin.

"Imagine my surprise," he wrote in one of several letters from jail to The Record, "when agents from the very FBI that trained and paid me came to my house to arrest me."

In a memo only two years earlier, the FBI said Turner "has proven highly reliable and is in a unique position to provide vital information on multiple subversive domestic organizations." The memo went on to say that Turner's "statistical accomplishments include over 100 subjects identified, over 10 acts of violence prevented and multiple subjects arrested."

"I was not some street snitch," Turner said in one of several lengthy interviews at the Hudson County Jail, where he was kept until the terms of his bail were worked out in October „ terms that prevented him from talking to reporters after his release. "I was a deep undercover intelligence operative."

Misgivings on both sides

Whatever his role, one thing is clear: The relationship between Turner and the FBI often was rocky, with both sides cutting ties several times.

In March 2005, Turner abruptly quit. In a letter to his FBI handlers, he cited a "complete failure" by the agency "to achieve the goals for which I began the relationship,"

the "dismal lack of arrests," the failure to track down a "threat to kill me and my family" and "exploitation" by the FBI "to interfere with content of my Internet Web site."

By June, however, Turner was again on the FBI payroll. The FBI, meanwhile, harbored its own doubts about Turner.

Five days after Turner's March 2005 letter, an internal FBI memo summarized rising concerns that his rhetoric was too controversial and possibly dangerous.

"Is he a big mouth? Yes," the memo said. "Does he say really deplorable things? Yes. Is he a physical threat to anyone? I don't think so."

Records show the FBI continued this kind of questioning throughout its connection to Turner „ valuing his ties to right-wing hate groups, but also worrying that his audience might follow up on his violence rhetoric.

In a July 2007 memo, Turner's primary FBI handler, Special Agent Stephen Haug, wrote that Turner "will continue to be admonished in the strongest possible terms and on a periodic basis about his rhetoric and the potential of it inciting acts of violence."

Haug went on to say that Turner would be "instructed to utilize his celebrity status to insure he continues to remind those who follow his rhetoric that such rhetoric is not intended to incite violence."

"In balance," Haug wrote, "this source's value outweighs the discomfort associated with source's rhetoric. Source's unique access provides important intelligence which, if lost, would be irreplaceable."

Turner, meanwhile, often tried to assure the FBI that his shock jock rhetoric was not serious. "The audience loves the rip-roaring radio psycho," he wrote in one e-mail to the FBI. "They literally throw money at it. Just be confident that the personality you hear (or hear about) on radio is not real life. I have zero intention of doing anything stupid."

Nonetheless, Turner's statements were closely watched.

In February 2008, in the midst of the presidential primary season, Turner attracted the attention of federal officials when he turned against then-Democratic candidate Barack Obama.

"I'm starting to come to the realization that it may be up to a sole person, acting alone, to make certain this guy is never allowed to hold the most powerful office in the world," Turner wrote on his Web site. He later removed the statement.

But later that year, court records show that he contacted federal authorities to say that he had heard of a possible assassination plot by white supremacists against the president-elect.

"I didn't like Barack Obama," Turner explained in an interview. "But he won the election."

Seven months after the possible threat to Obama, Turner was in FBI handcuffs „ for allegedly threatening the Chicago judges.

"Let me be the first to say this plainly: These judges deserve to be killed," Turner wrote on his blog on June 2. "Their blood will replenish the tree of liberty."

Turner also posted photos of the judges, their work phone numbers and office addresses as well as a map of the courthouse that pointed out "anti-truck bomb barriers."

"The word 'deserve' is just an opinion," Turner later told The Record. As for posting the photos of the judges, he added: "I can't tell you to this day how sorry I am."

Even if he wins his federal case, Turner's legal problems will not be over. In June, Connecticut authorities charged Turner with inciting violence against state officials who supported a proposed state law to give

Roman Catholic parishioners greater control over church finances.

In each case, Turner contends his words are protected as free speech under the First Amendment. Turner's attorney, Orozco, adds that other federal prosecutors routinely ignored his outlandish statements. "He has made other controversial remarks about judges, none of which have ever been prosecuted," wrote Orozco in a legal brief.

"I never intended for anybody to feel threatened," Turner said.

Longing to be heard

Whatever his intentions, it remains unclear who the real Hal Turner is.

A fraud? A serious threat to homeland security? A white supremacist? A loyal citizen trying to help the FBI? A radio showman trying to build an audience „ and income „ with shocking statements?

After he was arrested by FBI agents in June, Turner was sent on a journey that took him to jails in Newark, Oklahoma and Chicago „ often in solitary confinement. By late September, he was transferred back to New Jersey and sent to the Hudson County Jail in Kearny. In all, he spent 119 days behind bars.

In the interviews at the Hudson County Jail, Turner offered many glimpses of his personality and motivation.

"My country needed me," he said when asked why he accepted the FBI's offer in June 2003 to become an informant. "I'm a loyal, patriotic decent American citizen."

But why did he say „ or hint „ that some judges and other officials should be killed? Turner blames the FBI, saying that while agents never said he could threaten judges, they coached him on the limits of what he could say. As a result, Turner said he felt he had wide latitude.

"I was given specific instructions," he said. "Here, I am in prison, betrayed."

In one of his more controversial statements, Turner gloated over the murder of the husband and mother of a federal judge in Chicago in 2005. But Turner described his rhetoric as fake, arguing he hoped it "would solidify my anti-government credentials" among ultra-right-wing groups he was spying on.

As for hanging out with neo-Nazis and skinheads, Turner said, "That's not me. It never has been."

Raised in Ridgefield Park, the 47-year-old Turner labored more than a decade in a variety of positions with several moving-van companies. In 1988, while working for a moving company in Atlanta, Turner was arrested on a drug possession charge. In interviews, he said he had a cocaine addiction at the time and checked into a rehab program.

By the early 1990s, Turner moved to North Bergen and worked as a real estate agent. Within a few years, however, he began to dabble in politics, trying to beef up the Republican Party in overwhelmingly Democratic Hudson County. He also was a campaign manager in New Jersey for Republican presidential candidate Pat Buchanan.

Politics seemed to offer Turner something he never realized he had „ a voice and a need to speak out on hot topics. Now, however, several close associates question whether that voice is authentic or just the work of someone looking for the limelight.

In 1997, when Ramapo College Finance Professor Murray Sabrin ran for governor on a libertarian platform, he hired Turner to manage his campaign. Turner was a frequent caller on WABC's popular talk radio shows with Bob Grant and Sean Hannity „ "Hal from North Bergen," as he came to be known.

Turner surely had a conservative flair, especially on such issues as abortion and immigration. But Sabrin noticed a complete shift after Turner started his own talk radio show. In particular, Sabrin, who is Jewish, found some of Turner's remarks to be anti-Semitic.

"People have a public face and a private face," said Sabrin. "Everything that he is doing now is a complete 180-degree shift. It's totally opposite from what I knew. I don't know where this is coming from. I certainly wouldn't have tolerated it."

For several years, the Southern Poverty Law Center, an Alabama-based civil rights group, has regularly monitored Turner's radio broadcasts and blog. Indeed, the center was one of the first organizations to raise questions that Turner might be an FBI informant.

Hearing now that Turner admits to being an informant, the center's director of research, Heidi Beirich, was especially critical of the FBI. "We've never seen anything like this with informants. It's essentially idiotic on the part of the FBI. Anybody who spent two seconds looking at Hal Turner's Web site would know he is a wild hare," she said.

Indeed, Turner's own recounting of his life with the FBI does not always mirror what records show he did.

Turner, for example, says the FBI asked him to participate in a mission to plug leaks of information inside the Department of Justice to a variety of groups including the Southern Poverty Law Center and the Anti Defamation League. Turner also says the FBI asked him to specifically criticize such African-American leaders as Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton.

"I was supposed to be a counterbalance to Sharpton," Turner said.

Officially, the FBI declined comment on those unproven stories by Turner. The documents bear no trace of those operations.

Expedition to Brazil

Unofficially, FBI and other federal officials expressed a mix of dismay and outright anger when told of Turner's claims of being coached to make provocative statements.

"Absurd," said one. Another added: "And pigs will fly beginning with the next full moon. It never happened."

During interviews with The Record, Turner was at times unclear on some details. FBI records indicate, for example, that he did not become an informant until June 2003; Turner originally said he was recruited by federal agents in 2002, but later said he was mistaken.

Along with Haug of the FBI, his other regular contact was Leonard Nerbetski, a New Jersey State Police detective assigned to the FBI's Joint Terrorism Task Force.

Requests to interview Haug and Nerbetski were turned town by the FBI and by the state police.

In an early communication, Turner reported to the FBI about a meeting in Elmwood Park by the National Alliance. A few months after that, FBI records show that Turner was reaching out to several national leaders of the alliance.

FBI memos indicate that the bureau had appropriated as much as $100,000 for Turner's work as an informant.

"It was good money," said Turner, who would not say how much he was ultimately paid by the FBI.

Turner said he was earning about $15,000 a month from his suddenly popular radio show and blog.

As 2004 wore on, Turner found himself reporting to the FBI about a possible theft of evidence in a Bergen County drug case and about an attempt to set up a chapter of the Aryan Nations in northern New Jersey.

A year later, with the FBI paying for his visa and passport renewal, Turner embarked on his most ambitious mission „ to confer with a wealthy white supremacist in Brazil who was considering making a $1 million donation to his American counterparts.

While in Brazil, Turner also reported meeting a World War II German Luftwaffe flying ace and linking up with a representative of the Brazilian Arab Society, who discussed a plan to ship $10 million in consumer goods to anti-American Iraqi resistance fighters.

After Turner returned to New Jersey, the records show that the FBI investigated the Arab Society representative and even reached out to U.S. officials in Brazil for help in monitoring his activities. But it's not clear if the $10 million shipment was attempted.

The $1 million donation also never materialized, records show. The Brazilian benefactor backed out of the deal when an American white supremacist did not accompany Turner on the trip.

Records indicate the FBI wanted Turner to return to Brazil to spy on white-supremacist training there. But Turner never went. While in Brazil, Turner said, he carried a gun for protection, which was not authorized by the FBI.

Only a few weeks after returning to the United States from Brazil, Turner again found controversy. In a radio broadcast, he targeted African-Americans.

"A full day of violence against blacks would be a really nice thing," he said.

Turner went on to call for "lynchings, church burnings, drive-by shootings and bombings to put these subhuman animals back in their place," according to a report complied by the Anti-Defamation League.

The episode illustrates the complicated relationship between the FBI and Turner. Despite Turner's racist radio rhetoric, the FBI also valued his undercover work „ and was apparently willing to take a risk with him again „ and pay him, too.

For example, a July 2005 memo by the FBI said Turner had been paid $10,365 in the previous fiscal year and that he "provided information which continues to be highly accurate and sensitive."

Turner continued to reach out intermittently to the FBI „ with tips including a possible KKK murder plot „ until June 2, 2009, the day he posted the alleged threats on his blog about the Chicago judges.

In an e-mail that day to the FBI, Turner says he has heard reports that agents had interviewed skinheads and others about him.

"Am I unapproachable?" Turner asked in the e-mail. "Geez, I'd think by now I would have proved myself. It's not like I'm gonna go postal or anything."

Three weeks later, Turner was arrested.

Four months after that, Turner, unshaven and wearing frayed green prison garb and fumbling with a loose tooth, sat in an interview room at the Hudson County Jail and pondered his journey „ from shock jock to FBI informant to inmate charged with a serious federal crime.

"I can't believe this is happening to me," he said.

I don't know what normal is for radio St H. day. but, if I remember, conditions were terrible last year. most of the regs, on a lot of the web boards missed it. got my ID when they were still aiming at Europe. never heard them when the beam was turned for the US. hope for

Be that as it may, when the government goes after an outspoken critic with criminal charges, it should give all of us the willies.

And reason to look more closely at what actually took place.

What gives me the willies is someone with a microphone advocating bloodshed concerning gun laws.
NO Second Amendment advocate wants to hear or read this kind of language.

"Let me be the first to say this plainly: these judges deserve to be killed,"

He was WAYYYY out of bounds and he has to take responsibility for broadcasting that about principals of the court.

But he didn't threaten to kill them. He merely stated his opinion that they should be killed for their unconstitutional ruling. He never stated or implied that he himself wanted, or would even try, to kill them. A big difference IMO.

Apparently Turner was an FBI informant trying to flush out anti-government types with his inflammatory rhetoric. I wonder why they REALLY threw one of their own overboard?

To say they " deserve to be killed " over a ruling is to go off the end of reasonable speech. And Federal Judges no less?

Not disputing that he was way out of bounds. Nor that he did not represent the Second Amendment in the spirit in which it was intended.

The point is that the government went after him, a loud and outspoken critic of the government, with criminal charges.

That's a very troubling situation, and close scrutiny is not only warranted, but required.

Further, the issue of his FBI involvement raises deeply concerning questions about the very nature of the case, and the actions of the government in not only this pursuit, but in his actions that brought this pursuit in the first place.

Make no mistake. I'm no fan of Turner. And have told him directly a number of times.

But I get shivers when I read about this pillory, the very loud and public government action against him while using him for their covert surveillance, and the nature of the publicity that surrounds him.

Eternal vigilance, here. When the government goes after its critics, nothing is as it seems.

I doubt that. I doubt that he knew his ass from his appetite. But your question still stands.

What really happened here.

I'd also be interested in knowing who issued the burn notice.

And just who gets to decide who can decide who gets to make the definition? This can go on and on and on to infinity.

In this case I decided I felt it was beyond reasonable speech and was an advocation for violence against officers of the court.
You are supposed to say " Yes your honor and no your honor " and treat them with respect to the court. Going beyond that protocol can be hazardous to your freedom and your bank account.
It's basically just plain old common sense.

Used to the drift would be to Hitler. (Goodwin)
Now I see a trend towards reference to Communism which is a far greater threat than Hitler is today. I think this is good.

There is no such takeover happening. I suggest you Google "naomi klein milton friedman" to see what is happening.

Be careful to align with no one but real way-back personal friends and very trusted acquaintances. Learn to live with much less. Resist.

The Great Purge was a series of campaigns of political repression and persecution in the Soviet Union orchestrated by Joseph Stalin in 1936–1938. It involved a large-scale purge of the Communist Party and Government officials, repression of peasants, Red Army leadership, and the persecution of unaffiliated persons, characterized by widespread police surveillance, widespread suspicion of "saboteurs", imprisonment, and executions.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Great_Purge

An estimated 4 million people were purged between the 1920s and 1950s, most of them in 1937 and 1938, when 1.3 million were arrested and more than half of them executed, under the ill-famed Article 58 of the Penal Code just about anyone could easily fall under:

“We got a painful, catastrophic inheritance from the political purges ordered by Vladimir Lenin and Josef Stalin, when thousands of people were killed only because the authorities thought they posed a threat to their rule, says Alexander Brod, the director of the Moscow human rights bureau. People were sentenced on trumped-up charges and based on confessions made under torture."

"Once people figure it out, they're going to do what people everywhere do, they're going to start protesting and they're going to start revolting. And when that happens that's when the powers that be feel threatened and they use the power that they have." - Jim Simpson

David,

How is your research going and did you get a chance to compare notes yet with The Question Guy.

We've not heard from the Q'guy in some time now. I wonder how much new information he might have uncovered on the trolls. He seemed to have a very patient, softly softly approach to his investigations. Undoubtedly well versed in the use of Google's Advanced Search function.

As someone who couriers documents around the globe, he spends a lot of time in airports waiting around the check-in area with his laptop.

He certainly caused quite a stir upon his arrival here, taking notes, compiling dossiers and threatening to have a quiet word with the trolls employers.

Received today the QSL (verie, for those in Glendale) for Radio St. Helena's broadcast on 14 November 2009 on 11092.5 kHz. Card #168. v/s G.G. Walters.

This must have gone out on an earlier RMS St. Helena voyage. Envelope shows it being despatched from Radio St. Helena on 3 August, and a postmark of 5 August.

Teachers (Communist Party) union threatens ‘massive boycott’ of Los Angeles Times for reporting on teacher performance

On Saturday, the Los Angeles Times began publishing a hard-hitting analysis on teacher performance. Today, the Los Angeles Times is reporting that union leaders are threatening the paper as a result:

Where are the trials for the thousands of liberals who were screaming

It's apparently permissible for liberals, illegals and homosexuals to threaten to kill judges, governors and presidents, but it's not okay for anyone else?

So, you are saying that because this guy is a critic of the government the government should not prosecute???

I think what you are going to see now is more political talk shows go offshore, where they would be out of reach of the federal government. If Hal had blogged his opinions from offshore, he would not have been subject to prosecution in America.

I think a lot of controversial talk show hosts will now go offshore, where they will be not subject to U.S. laws.

Even so, the stations that carry them are subject to US laws. If they can't get the host, they will go after the stations carrying him/her.

That being said, it has always been illegal to make death threats or to encourage violence against government officials. It is not protected speech. Being a Constitutionalist, I have a problem with this, but there have always been laws against certain kinds of speech (like yelling 'fire' in a crowded theater) and certain religious practices are not allowed (human sacrifice, child sexual abuse, etc.)

Not if it is broadcast on the internet from a server that is offshore. If the SERVER is not in the Unted States, then it is NOT SUBJECT to United States laws. They have tried to get Hal for a long time. If he had gone offshore, and took his servers with him, He would have been NOT SUBJECT to prosecution in the United States.

This is why I see a lot of controversial talk show hosts taking their shows offshore. They could go offshore, and then put their servers at a colocation facility offshore, then both the host, and the computer server is OUT OF REACH of U.S. laws.

Then there is the issue or Border Blaster radio. The Borders Blasters might well come back anyway, of the RIAA ever gets Congress to pass the new royalties then want on over the air music broadcasts.

The U.S. has NO authority over a Border Blaster operating from Mexico, Cuba, or the Bahamas.

I could also see pirate radio based on ships, but much farther out. The mistake the British pirates made was being too close to British waters. I could see pirate radio possibly being started on ships anchored about 80 miles or so from U.S. shores. A poweful enough transmitter with a good antenna, could be able to reach U.S. shores from that far out. 80 miles out is way out in international waters, where the U.S. would have no jurisdiction.

Anyone with experience regarding cell phone signal boosters? They range from the joke printed circuit stickers which are pasted to the back of the set to expensive 3 watt units.

Any brands to avoid? Anyone other than the Holland Michigan guy ever get brain cancer from one of these things?

It has to be a non direct connect unit, as the phone has no removable antenna. Are there still 'bag phones' available? They were pretty powerful if memory serves.

Any insights, or circuitry for a home brew unit would be appreciated.

I found out there are WAY more exceptions to the 'I before E except after C' rule than there are applicable situations. The 'rules' of grammar, as you say, are a joke. The spelling makes no sense either.

The dictionary editors should go into a grade four class and see how the kids think stuff should be spelled. It would be a learning experience for the adults.

Say Hey:

Many of your don't know but another reason Steve Kramer got the boot out of Thailand is because he was unable to show The Royal Thai Immigration Bureau that his income totaled 800,000 THB per year for a "Non O" visa.. It became apparent to immigration that Steve (Kombat) Kramer did not have ANY INCOME and was therefore told to depart the kingdom or be put into immigration detention for violating the immigration laws of Thailand.

Huh? Hey, clown 'tard Canuck, I've never had a cell phone, nor do I envision myself ever getting one as I have no need for one.

But hey, feel free (if there is any such thing as freedom in CanaDuh) to amp up the power and fry what is left of your brain.

The reason that offshore and high seas pirates are no longer around is because they have been outlawed by treaty (ITU) and enforced by Interpol in combination with the closest local authorities. Also, the US enforces a 200 mile limit for some purposes. Unknown whether this would be one of them.

I checked the schedule and RMS St. Helena departed St. Helena on 5 August and arrived at Ascension Island on 8 August.

So, about 8 days out of Ascension to here isn't so bad.

Possibly you are new to eBay?

While a guarantee would be nice,

1) the condition was clearly stated as USED.

2) it clearly stated "Item is sold in as is condition."

3) This is not out of the ordinary, as 99% of used electronics on eBay offered by private sellers IS sold "as is" (which is to say, no guarantee).

As always, Caveat Emptor.

One must presume nothing of the sort. The jury are only able to look at what has been presented them. Which is, in all cases, not the whole story.

What the jury can look at CLOSELY is limited by the attorneys who present the evidence, and the judges who allow it. It's never ALL the evidence.

What they ACTUALLY look at closely, no one ever knows.

You find the mailing address of the transmitting station. You send them a report and request a verification. If they are a major state broadcaster they require no fee. If it's a smaller station you may want to add a couple of cripsy dollar bills and a self-addressed envelope.

If you are new, get a copy of "Passport to World Band Radio". It came out every winter until recently. Most used book stores will have one. That or "World Radio TV Handbook", which I believe is still published. Either book is chock full of SWL goodness.

How do you know what you have unless you test?
Gov Clinton started election reform in Arkansas by testing teachers, and got the same kind of resistance. But what was discovered, was that local schoolboards were using teacher jobs as patronage for friends and kin rather than looking for the most qualified.

As unqualified teachers were replaced, those who remained didnt havta make up for the ineffectiveness and in addition, let qualified people they know about the openings.

The effect is most obvious in the small Ozark hill towns north of I-40 between US 65 and I-540, classes average 1/2 year ahead of the national despite getting the second lowest teacher pay in the USA.

That may be true -- but most of you are missing the essential fact here:

Hal Turner was a fake. A phony.

He was not really a critic of the regime in Washington.

He worked for that regime, and his job was 1) to make critics of that regime's racial and foreign policies look like dangerous, violent lunatics; and 2) to put the regime's critics under close surveillance and, if possible, in jail.

Despite that fact that he was fairly effective at his dishonorable profession, his employers were even more dishonorable.

A few months after a hacker publicly disclosed that Hal was working for the FBI's "Joint Terrorism Task Force" (the same outlaw outfit that falsely charged and imprisoned me and was complicit in the theft of all of my property), they decided he was more of a liability than an asset. So they arranged to have him prosecuted and imprisoned for _doing the very things_ that they had hired and paid him to do.

There is a lesson here:

The regime in Washington and the ethnically distinct oligarchs that control it has no friends, and no honor. Cooperate with or work for it at your extreme peril.

This lesson will sooner or later be learned by the native inhabitants who have collaborated with the invaders in Afghanistan and Iraq. The regime in Washington will betray them when it is expedient to do so, and the Earth will be soaked red with their blood.

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

Ah, Kevin, i was waiting for a comment from you. my question is, you having been on the inside of both places here, if Turner does end up in jail, won't his life be in danger? even if he gets off, won't his X-friends be watching him? I know next to nothing about the so called White Power type people. but, all the same. I don't believe I would want to cross them. or, I could be wrong about this. what do you think?

Also, the original poster mentioned BBC - it is worth noting that the BBC currently has a policy of NOT formally verifying receoption reports due to budget and personnel constraints. I am testing that policy now.

Most other major broadcasters, with a few exceptions, will verify.
Some will take a VERY long time.

His life will indeed be in danger. Violence doesn't happen every day, but it does happen. The billionaire's media are allowed into the prisons, and the vilification of some prisoners as "haters" in the money-men's press and TV does agitate the inmates, sometimes to fury.

There are some very nasty people in there, who -- unlike me and the other 50 per cent. or so of innocent folks in prison -- are really guilty of unimaginable crimes: people who enjoy hurting other people for the smallest reasons, or for the sheer fun of it. Or for racially- or politically-motivated "revenge."

It's doubtful that such persons would be able to comprehend the subtleties of Turner's case, or care if they did.

There is little oversight of what prisoners do to one another in their huge filthy, open, stinking pens -- sometimes none for hours at a time.

Turner will also will be provided with "medical care" that is essentially nonexistent, from alleged doctors who can't make it in the real world (who _might_ see you if you're in really severe pain... in a few days) and most of whom, like the guards and administrators, don't give a solitary damn and are there in Hell with you strictly for the Federal paycheck and retirement.

In addition to the violent criminals, there are some people in there -- and some of these were falsely convicted, or convicted of "crimes" which shouldn't be crimes -- who are extremely bitter and are looking for any way out. Some of these will willingly lie and perjure themselves to help corrupt U.S. Attorneys advance their careers -- and get more convictions against hapless people in prison who have little or no means to defend themselves.

The system itself is a crime, and it is irremediably corrupt.

To put someone in that Hell who is guilty of nothing more than possessing a recreational drug -- or _not_ possessing the right paperwork for his firearm -- or who is guilty of _no crime whatsoever_, as I was -- is absolutely unconscionable.

(See

http://www.kevinalfredstrom.com/2009/01/kevin-alfred-strom-address-to-the-court/for information on my case.)

I'm very leery of wishing that _anyone_ -- even the most thuggish Black drug dealer imaginable -- be put into such a Hell. Like the system that created it, it is too cruel.

Of course, Hal Turner supported that system with all the vigor and dishonesty and cleverness he could muster. And he accepted the system's filthy dollars. He helped put others -- innocent others -- into that Hell. So perhaps he is a special case.

With every good wish,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

You won't be mesmerized because you won't understand.

I closed 2 plants when industrial output hit the skids, in 2004 and 2005. I now produce overseas and you clowns pay through the ass for very inexpensively made merchandise. I cannot change the U.S. because 98% of "Americans" don't give a flying rats ass nor are they willing to participate in correcting the debacle. It's your, or you kids problem.

Let's be accurate - Bush started the bedwetting, Obama is merely carrying on the same meals-on-wheels absurdity. Your point that illiterate dune dwellers are winning is right on - because the military is hobbled by bedwetters. At this point you can only hope the humiliation of the U.S. can be overcome some day. With all the politically correct foolhardiness going on, the U.S. is 1) broke, 2) humiliated, 3) wringing it's hands, and 4) hoping the U.N. will adopt what remains. The United States of only 25 years ago cannot be reconstructed.

You may be right that we "pay through the ass for very inexpensively made merchandise"...but that merchandise is STILL cheaper (waaay cheaper) than stuff made in the USA.

Not so much as people "not giving a flying rat's ass" as much as it is that people, many without jobs want, nay, need "cheap" merchandise.

If the American sheeple ever wake up and get wise, watch out! There won't be enough tar and feathers for politicians of either stripe.

It took 2 years and a lot of work, because the Japanese style is to pay off extortionists and bullies so I got no help from the others on the street. That is not my style. Two years, but eventually they gave up and left us alone. I don't give up. Ever. Having someone stand up to them was all it took. Well, it's just slightly possible that your half-baked theory of "the military is hobbled by bedwetters" is true, but then how would you explain the following?

1) In Iraq, the Sunnis, Kurds and Shiites have been warring for hundreds of years.

They still are.

They still will be when we leave.

Were they "hobbled by bedwetters"?

2) In Afghanistan, ANY and ALL occupiers over the last THOUSAND years, from Genghis Khan to the Russians, have been thrown out.

Were the Russkies and Genghis all hobbled by bedwetters too?

Or did that moron Bush put us in to two totally unwinnable situations?

Nice theory of yours, but it might behoove you to brush up a bit on your world history.

A woman driver with a cell phone is a deadly combination. Almost every time I see a woman driving a car she's yakking away on the phone. I've seen women run straight through red lights, oblivious to their surroundings while using their cell phone. Recently I passed a black woman in another lane who was yakking away on her "sail fone", phone in one hand and the other hand was gesturing wildly .... she had NO hands on the wheel and her car was drifting left and right. She was yelling and screaming ... really chimping out. Scary stuff.

It is possible to do it without being detected. If one can afford the cost of an international phone call, one could simply sign up with a foreign ISP and simply dial up into that. The US has NO jurisdiction over ISPs in Canada or Mexico.

If he lives close enough to either the Canadian or Mexican borders he could get 3G internet service from either a Mexican or Canadian cellular provider, where the United States would have NO jurisdiction.

Obama Is Colluding with a New Fascist Imperialism

By James Lewis

Nothing is more like the fascist Axis of the 1930s than Islamist expansionism today. Like the Hitler-Tojo-Mussolini Axis of the 1930s, Islamic fascists are fundamentally imperialistic, with an explicit order from on High to subjugate civilized people or turn them to ashes. Mohammed himself famously threatened the cultured Persian and Byzantine Emperors of his time, and in the following years, his followers knocked those empires over like devouring army ants.

The peace-loving Buddhist monasteries of India were consumed by invading Muslim armies, with the result that there are no Buddhist monasteries left in India today. Not a single one. Only Hinduism survived the Muslim invasions, because Hindus are not pacifists. You can ask any Sikh about that; they are a huge warrior religion that arose as a buffer between Hindu India and its many Muslim invaders, who now hold Pakistan and Afghanistan. In India, the Buddhist monks just died or fled to Tibet. So much for the glorious results of peaceful resistance against Muslim armies.

Wherever Islamic fascists go, they first like to frighten and intimidate less warlike peoples -- as in London today, where any BBC criticism of Islamic fascists is streng verboten. That's what the Ground Zero Mosque and the Mohammed cartoon uproar have in common: They are purposeful agitprop campaigns to scare and intimidate all the weak-willed liberals in the West, a standard Islamist tactic to conquer by intimidation, just as Muslim conquerors have always done. Why bother to wage war when you can win by terror? Putin understands that, the Chinese understand it, and it's clear enough around the Middle East. Only American liberals and European socialists are in denial. That's why they are the biggest round-heels in the world. They will happily collude in their own subjection and degradation.

Islamic practice has always required mosques to have the highest towers in any subjugated city. No Jews or Christians were ever allowed to build higher places of worship, to ride higher (on horses or mules), or even to raise their heads higher while walking the streets than any Muslim. If you were a Jew or a Christian, you would duck your head deep down as you passed a Muslim, who was allowed to spit on you at will. As recently as the Ottoman Empire (crumbled in 1917), all dhimmis were unceremoniously beaten to the ground if they dared to raise their heads higher than a passing Muslim. Modern Westerners deny the obvious, but that is because they are wishful idiots, self-inflicted ignorami, and dead meat to all the predators of this world. It's Little Red Riding Hood skipping into the dark forest again, but this time nobody told her about the Big Bad Wolf.

Islamic fascism is committing African genocides here and now, as in the Sudan, where a radical Muslim murder regime has been enabled by the "international community" to persecute and kill animist and Christian Africans since the 1990s. Rather than stopping the horrors by simply arming Africans who are killed for Allah, the Sudan has been gloriously elected to the Human Rights Commission of the U.N. General Assembly with the active connivance of the Left. That is just another fact that is understood by anybody who cares to open their eyes. The U.N. has been conquered without a shot by the new fascists, so that U.N. "peacekeeping" forces are rendered impotent in the face of genocide.

Kofi Annan stood by during the Rwandan genocides in the 1990s and then was elected Secretary General of the U.N. partly as a reward; Islamic regimes and the Euro-Left knew he wouldn't make trouble for them. Annan earned his by using the Food for Oil conspiracy to skim billions off "humanitarian" Iraqi oil sales to help Saddam Hussein, in criminal collusion with French President Jacques Chirac and Foreign Minister Dominique de Villepin. The U.S. press, filled to the brim with useless idiots and suckers, celebrated the bad guys and attacked the good guys. The biggest liberals always fall for the worst tyrants.

You think that evil is safely dead and in the past? You must be a liberal and self-deluded. But I repeat myself, as Mark Twain said in similar circumstances.

Islamofascists constantly threaten genocide against the Jews, as in the daily fulminations of that little Twelver freak Ahmadinejad -- but also in the words just reported by our good friend the Saudi King of the Arabian desert: "There are two nations that do not deserve to live: Israel and Iran."

This is the 7th-century king of the camel-raiders that the President of the United States, Barack Hussein Obama, publicly bowed down to -- in a universal gesture of submission that was instantly understood throughout the Muslim world.

Neville Chamberlain gave Adolf Hitler only a half-bow after the Munich appeasement summit of 1938. Liberals are forever thus.

To complete the bleak parallels to the horrible 1930s, we see the Left-Fascist alliance together again. If you think Bill Ayers and Jodie Evans were just accidentally whipping up a PR stunt with the Turkish suiciders off the coast of Gaza a few months ago, then you, too, were taken in by classic agitprop collusion between the radical Left and Islamic fascists. Those were Muslim Bro suiciders (Turkish allies of Hamas) on board the tourist ship Mavi Marmara, under the direct command of the new Islamist fascist regime in Turkey. Like the recent Lebanese border assassination ambush of a senior Israeli military leader, this was a murderous setup. The assassination team in Lebanon Army uniforms had their snipers all set up with 50-caliber long-distance weapons, conveniently provided by U.S. military trainers.

But don't expect any JournoListers to grok those facts any time soon. They are too busy looking for evil among American conservatives. The Left is half-deluded and half-Machiavellian, and each half constantly lies to the other. The lefty media desperately want to be deluded, of course, like the abused wife of a violent alcoholic. It's a sort of token of love.

Socialist Europeans are knocking each other out like bowling pins today in their hurry to kowtow to the rising Fascist powers, who have bought all three British Parliamentary parties with their oil billions. Tony Blair is working for Libya's Muammar Khadafi today, which tells you where the Labour Party's heart really is. Eurosocialists have for decades imported hundreds of thousands of fundamentalist Muslims from the badlands of Pakistan with promises of lifelong welfare and four wives apiece, a promise that an ambitious young Islamofascist from Peshawar can hardly be expected to resist. As a result, Muslim fundamentalists now virtually control parts of Europe's major cities, including Rotterdam, Hamburg, and Paris. Socialist Europeans know that their countries are coming to an end as Western states. They are not as idiotic as they constantly pretend to be. But they are drunk on the perks of power -- and let tomorrow be damned. After us, the deluge.

Like the demonic 1930s, the Left is again a lot more interested in sabotaging freely elected governments than in fighting rising fascist tyrannies that delight in oppressing millions of women, in persecuting and hanging homosexuals, and in practicing sadistic violence toward a host of other victim groups. Sadistic violence -- an intense delight in inflicting pain on innocent people -- was a huge and now-forgotten feature of the three big Fascist powers of the 1930s: the Nazis, the Japanese Imperial Army, and even Mussolini's Italians in North Africa.

Some people define Fascism as a corporatist economic system, like Obama Motors today. It could just as well be defined as the public celebration and practice of massive sadism against enslaved peoples. Mussolini practiced massive sadism in Africa. Hitler practiced systematic sadism against inferior peoples wherever he could -- against Russians, Poles, Jews, Gypsies, German social democrats, on and on. Imperial Japan was horrific in its sadistic treatment of non-Japanese -- American and European prisoners, Chinese people as a whole, black Americans, Filipinos and other Malay peoples in Asia, on and on. Even the Soviets did not celebrate sadistic torture of its enemies in public, as far as I remember, though they certainly practiced it in private, as the Russians still do today in Chechnya.

Ideologically rationalized sadism and cruelty is not even acknowledged today by such lowlife organs as the New York Times. The Times mostly ignored and thereby colluded in Hitler's and Stalin's industrialized sadism in the 1930s. Some things change, but the New York Times always enables the very worst regimes in the world. It is one of those constants that give one faith in the basic stability of things. Tyrannies change names, but the Times always kowtows to the most bloodstained nastocrats it can find. They may even teach it in Journalism 101 at Columbia.

The historic fact is that the Left always enables fascist monsters. I don't claim to understand that fact, but it's easy enough to see it over and over again. It seems to be part of their deep moral cowardice and weakness of character. The prophet Jeremiah saw it in the sixth century BCE and roundly attacked those who pretended to heal "the broken daughter of my people, saying Peace, Peace, but there is no Peace." Listen to our liberal friends, and they are constantly saying it over and over again, a mantra that makes them feel better even if it is a flagrant lie.

Liberalism is just the self-delusion of moral cowards throughout history. It is not a modern ideology, as it always claims to be -- now it's "progressive" again. They can't even think of new labels. It's is just a form of denial, a pop fantasy that allows them to avoid thinking scary thoughts. That is why liberalism can be found over and over again in human history, under a thousand different labels.

We can see that delusional thinking right now in Barack Hussein Obama and in Hillary, just as we saw it in the Carter administration -- which gave Islamic fascism its first taste of real power in 1979. It's important to remember that reactionary Islamic fascism was mostly gone after the Ottoman Empire crumbled in 1917. A number of Muslim countries desperately tried to modernize for sixty years -- until Jimmy Carter gave the pre-medieval throwback Ayatollah Khomeini his first big chance in 1979. That started a race among all the suppressed Islamofascists in Sunni and Shiite countries. Nobel Peace Prize-winner Jimmy Carter's dysfunctional politics was not an accident, nor his love affair with Hamas and Khomeini; it is an obsessive-compulsive psychopathology, and it happens over and over again in human history.

That's why the Norwegian politicians keep handing out that the Nobel Appeasement Prize. It's why Obama got it just for getting elected. The Left and the Islamic fascists figured out who Obama was long before the people of America were told. After all, he's one of them.

Liberal Fascism: The Secret History of the American Left, from Mussolini to the Politics of Meaning

“Fascists,” “Brownshirts,” “jackbooted stormtroopers”—such are the insults typically hurled at conservatives by their liberal opponents. Calling someone a fascist is the fastest way to shut them up, defining their views as beyond the political pale. But who are the real fascists in our midst?Liberal Fascism offers a startling new perspective on the theories and practices that define fascist politics. Replacing conveniently manufactured myths with surprising and enlightening research, Jonah Goldberg reminds us that the original fascists were really on the left, and that liberals from Woodrow Wilson to FDR to Hillary Clinton have advocated policies and principles remarkably similar to those of Hitler's National Socialism and Mussolini's Fascism.Contrary to what most people think, the Nazis were ardent socialists (hence the term “National socialism”). They believed in free health care and guaranteed jobs. They confiscated inherited wealth and spent vast sums on public education. They purged the church from public policy, promoted a new form of pagan spirituality, and inserted the authority of the state into every nook and cranny of daily life. The Nazis declared war on smoking, supported abortion, euthanasia, and gun control. They loathed the free market, provided generous pensions for the elderly, and maintained a strict racial quota system in their universities—where campus speech codes were all the rage. The Nazis led the world in organic farming and alternative medicine. Hitler was a strict vegetarian, and Himmler was an animal rights activist.Do these striking parallels mean that today’s liberals are genocidal maniacs, intent on conquering the world and imposing a new racial order? Not at all. Yet it is hard to deny that modern progressivism and classical fascism shared the same intellectual roots. We often forget, for example, that Mussolini and Hitler had many admirers in the United States. W.E.B. Du Bois was inspired by Hitler's Germany, and Irving Berlin praised Mussolini in song. Many fascist tenets were espoused by American progressives like John Dewey and Woodrow Wilson, and FDR incorporated fascist policies in the New Deal.Fascism was an international movement that appeared in different forms in different countries, depending on the vagaries of national culture and temperament. In Germany, fascism appeared as genocidal racist nationalism. In America, it took a “friendlier,” more liberal form. The modern heirs of this “friendly fascist” tradition include the New York Times, the Democratic Party, the Ivy League professoriate, and the liberals of Hollywood. The quintessential Liberal Fascist isn't an SS storm trooper; it is a female grade school teacher with an education degree from Brown or Swarthmore.These assertions may sound strange to modern ears, but that is because we have forgotten what fascism is. In this angry, funny, smart, contentious book, Jonah Goldberg turns our preconceptions inside out and shows us the true meaning of Liberal Fascism.

Several current or recent members of Congress, including Neil Abercrombie, Mary Jo Kilroy, Jerry Nadler, and Bob Filner have close ties to America’s largest Marxist organization, Democratic Socialists of America.

Another one to add to the growing list is Jan Schakowsky.

The Illinois Democrat, a member of the far left Congressional Progressive Caucus, has been close to DSA, or its preceding organization, the Democratic Socialist Organizing Committee, since the 1970s.

By the early 1930s, Shah of Iran Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's close ties with Nazi Germany began worrying the Allied states. Germany's modern state and economy highly impressed the Shah, and there were hundreds of Germans involved in every aspect of the state, from setting up factories to building roads, railroads and bridges.

The Shah went on to ask the international community to use the native name of "Iran" in 1935 to address to his country, which in Persian means 'Land of the Aryans' and refers to Airyanem Vaejah, the Avestan name of the original homeland of the Aryans. Although the country has been known as Iran to the native people themselves for many centuries, Westerners came to know the nation as Persia through Ancient Greek accounts. Iranians were immune to the racial Nuremberg Laws on the grounds that they were pure blooded Aryans. In 1939, Nazi Germany provided Iran with what they called a Germany Scientific Library. The library contained over 7500 books selected "to convince Iranian readers...of the kinship between the National Socialist Reich and the Aryan culture of Iran"(Lenczowski. 1944, p. 161). In various pro-Nazi publications, lectures, speeches, and ceremonies, parallels were drawn between the Shah of Iran and Hitler, and praise the charisma and virtue of the Fuhrerprinzip (Rezun. 1982, p. 29).

From 1939 to 1941 Iran's top foreign trade partner (nearly 50% of its total trade) was Germany, which helped Iran open modern sea and air communications with the rest of the world.

In 1941, the Allies forced Reza Shah to abdicate the throne to his son, Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. His pro-Nazi followers in the Iranian government such as Fazlollah Zahedi and Mohammad Hosein Airom shared similar fates.

Thanks for the reply Kevin. I understand your bitterness. Young man down the street from me guards at the county level. so, I have heard some stories. the man has a family to take care of, and he hates his job. he told me he takes classes at the local college, looking to get a real job I guess. Myself, I couldn't do something like that. I'll have to keep an eye on Mr Turner, and see where this goes. and, ya never know, the subject might turn up on the "Liberty Net", some time.

Just a FYI, GSM is limited by timing, not signal strength. I don't

The British and French after WWI 'cobbled' Iraq

Absolutely true! That's why I said "Caveat Emptor" (Buyer Beware).

IMHO, it's best to pay using your -credit card- through PayPal. You then at least have some minimal protection through the card company. (Of course, PayPal does their best to discourage you from using that option -- but that's another story).

I'm not advocating this, but if YOU are of such a mind as wanting to chase off stray dogs, does it have to be 'electronic'? Wouldn't a good, old-fashioned BB gun do the job a lot cheaper and simpler?

learn. They want their own kids in schools that work. The teacher tests removed the incompetent but well connected (who we see were not removed in the recent banking/Wall Street debacle), and as a result the level of competence rose with teachers synergistically motivating each other and the kids. Because there were no longer any incompetent teachers, all teachers got more respect.

Paying professionals in the bureacracy, banking, & brokerages did not result in a higher quality of management. I dont think paying lawyers more has resulted in better quality justice. More money attracts the greedy, not just the competent.

Fascism: a form of political behavior marked by obsessive preoccupation with community decline, humiliation or victimhood and in which a mass-based party of committed nationalist militants, working in uneasy, but effective collaboration with traditional elites, abandons democratic liberties and pursues with redemptive violence and without ethical or legal restraints goals of internal cleansing and external expansion.

By Kyle-Anne Shiver

"They fear that the development and building of People's (community) Organizations is the building of a vast power group which may fall prey to a fascistic demagogue who will seize leadership and control and turn an organization into a Frankenstein's monster against democracy."
- Saul Alinsky responding to his critics, Reveille for Radicals; p. 199

When Saul Alinsky began building his community-organization movement in 1930s Chicago, observers were watching Alinsky with one eye, while with the other eye observing the building of communist and fascist movements in Europe. It wasn't hard then to see in Alinsky's programs at home, elements of the people's revolution from Russia, as well as some of the same "in your face" tactics being employed by Hitler's Brownshirts.

What Alinsky's critics saw was the burgeoning of a national movement, the carefully manipulated construction of people's organizations, which all had two elements in common: (1) a collectivist creed, which denied the existence of personal responsibility; and (2) an amoral dogma, in which all means were justified by an imaginary utopian end.

While most modern Americans remember well Hitler's Holocaust and the Cold War waged by a solid U.S.S.R., many of these same Americans have swallowed some false history regarding the movements that spawned such widespread, horrendous results. In what may be regarded as the most triumphant propaganda victory of our time, fascism has been scrubbed of all its Marxist roots, while communism has been scrubbed of its millions of callous murders.

This post-WWII propaganda coup undeniably set the stage for the early Alinsky critics' most feared eventuality, that the massive organizations could be shrewdly adopted by a fascist demagogue, someone who could "seize leadership and control" and turn them into a "Frankenstein's monster against democracy."

But perhaps the most cunning propaganda feat in history has been undertaken for the past 8 years. As Jonah Goldberg expertly expounds in his book, Liberal Fascism, American left-wing ideologues have managed to dissociate themselves from all the horrors of fascism with a "brilliant rhetorical maneuver." They've done it by "claiming that their opponents are the fascists."

Alinsky himself employed this method, quite deviously. Alinsky biographer, Sanford D. Horwitt provides an anecdote using precisely this diabolical tactic to deceive the people. From Horwitt's Let Them Call Me Rebel:

"...in the spring of 1972, at Tulane University...students asked Alinsky to help plan a protest of a scheduled speech by George H. W. Bush, then U.S. representative to the United Nations - a speech likely to include a defense of the Nixon administration's Vietnam War policies. The students told Alinsky they were thinking about picketing or disrupting Bush's address. That's the wrong approach, he rejoined, not very creative - and besides causing a disruption might get them thrown out of school. He told them, instead, to go to hear the speech dressed as members of the Ku Klux Klan, and whenever Bush said something in defense of the Vietnam War, they should cheer and wave placards reading, ‘The KKK supports Bush.' And that is what they did, with very successful, attention-getting results."

In what may eventually prove to be a devious rhetorical feat of monstrous proportions, while the left has been indulging and fostering the "Bush Is Hitler" meme, they may have just put a genuine ideological fascist heir in the White House.

There is inherent danger in making scurrilous comparisons (as were perpetrated unceasingly against George W. Bush), but there seem to be some very worrisome signs in the rise of Barack Obama that we Americans would be foolish to ignore.

Obama, the Closer

As I put forth last year in "Obama, the Closer", Barack Obama, did not start his movement; Alinsky did.

Nor did Obama amass the organizations that propelled him. As detailed by Heidi J. Swarts, in her book, Organizing Urban America, the movement begun by Saul Alinsky in the 1930s has morphed into thousands of secular and faith-based leftist political organizations. ACORN (Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now) has perhaps the highest public profile, is most reputed for radicalism, and is the organization with which Barack Obama was first aligned. But ACORN is the mere tip of a veritable iceberg of Alinsky-styled community organizations that sweep across the entire United States and make up the backbone of faith-based progressive movements as well.

These euphemistically called "community" organizations have next to nothing to do with improving the communities and everything to do with politics, primarily strong-arming government money to advance their political aims. Prior to Reagan's election, these groups worked independently for the most part, each seeking to effect local change towards leftist ends.

But with Reagan's victory, ACORN founding member Wade Rathke sent out a memo (published by Swarts; Organizing Urban America; p. 29) that would reverberate all the way to Barack Obama's moment. ACORN had been behaving as a sort of "Lone Ranger of the Left" for too long, wrote Rathke. Ronald Reagan had formed a coalition among the middle-class that threatened to bring greater prosperity without left-wing Statists calling the shots. Rathke put out the call to the ACORN troops to stop antagonizing those who would be allies, especially unions and church organizations, once shunned by ACORN as too placid for the real fight for power. For the next 25 years, the community organization network built, proliferated and formed a solid, nation-wide base of political strength, purely according to Alinsky's original vision, and all just waiting for the right candidate to tap into it and lead it.

When folks from all corners of America proclaimed, seemingly with one voice, Barack is the "One we've been waiting for," they were speaking out of the vast Alinsky-originated network.

Neither did Barack Obama invent the political "ideology of change," nor design its carefully crafted propaganda. While media folks talked of the tingles up their legs and the brilliant rhetoric of Barack Obama, they were heralding the speaker only, not the creator of the movement and its slogans. That would have been Saul Alinsky, the man who took fascism and cunningly made it appear to casual observers every bit as American as apple pie.

Barack Obama is merely the movement's closer, the quintessential liberal fascist with a teleprompter.

Alinsky's Ideology of Change: The Third Way

Goldberg fastidiously notes the comparison between Alinsky's "in your face" rules for radicals, studied and perfected by Barack Obama, and shows them to have profoundly fascist roots:

"...there's no disputing that vast swaths of his (Alinsky's) writings are indistinguishable from the fascist rhetoric of the 1920s and 1930s...His worldview is distinctly fascistic. Life is defined by war, contests of power, the imposition of will. Moreover, Alinsky shares with the fascists and pragmatists of yore a bedrock hostility to dogma. All he believes in are the desired ends of the movement, which he regards as the source of life's meaning...But what comes through most is his unbridled love of power. Power is a good in its own right for Alinsky. Ours ‘is a world not of angels but of angles,' he proclaims in Rules for Radicals, ‘where men speak of moral principles but act on power principles."

Saul Alinsky was the man who transformed politics in America into all-out war mode. Alinsky's tenth rule of the ethics of means: "You do what you can with what you have and clothe it with moral garments." All's fair in love and war, and politics, to Alinsky, was war.

"A People's (community) Organization is not a philanthropic plaything or a social service's ameliorative gesture. It is a deep, hard-driving force, striking and cutting at the very roots of all the evils which beset the people. It thinks and acts in terms of social surgery and not cosmetic cover-ups.

A People's Organization is dedicated to an eternal war. A war is not an intellectual debate, and in the war against social evils there are no rules of fair play."
Saul Alinsky; Reveille for Radicals; p. 133

Alinsky includes an entire section in Rules for Radicals on "The Ideology of Change." The watchword of the Obama campaign was "change." Just as Hitler mobilized the masses with a calculatingly undefined demand for "change," so did Alinsky disciple, Barack Obama.

"Everything must be different!" or "Alles muss anders sein!," Hitler's own campaign slogan, morphed into "Unite for Change," and the Obama transition team's change.gov. Even the idea of a vast "movement" was borrowed from Hitler. As Goldberg states, Hitler used the phrase, "the Movement," more than 200 times in Mein Kampf.

The word ‘movement' itself is instructive. Movement, unlike progress, doesn't imply a fixed destination. Rather, it takes it as a given that any change is better.
(Goldberg; Liberal Fascism; p. 176)
Perhaps the most intoxicating allure to the fascist demagogue and his movement for undefined change is its misleadingly conciliatory flavor. Barack Obama continually, throughout his campaign and even now, portrays himself as the Third Way between the cantankerous factions that have polarized America for the past 80 years, since liberal fascism took root as the Progressive Movement.

Obama claimed that Bush was too much the ideologue, that his policies were driven by the Christian right, involved "false choices" between all-out war on the one hand and diplomacy on the other, between the welfare state and cold-hearted, do-nothing conservatism, between absolute sovereignty and cowardly submission to the global community, between doing all and doing nothing. And if any of this gibberish were a true reflection of our political disagreements, Obama would be somewhat correct. But as any sentient person knows, this radical presentation of Obama's is absolutely false. That gets lost, though, in the leader's conciliatory tone.

What must not get lost, however, is the very real fact that this Third Way movement for change is as fascist as anything we have ever seen in the USA. As Alinsky described his own "Ideology of Change," the lure is in the claim that the leader has no ideology that would confine his outlook to hard choices between what is moral or immoral, that there are no boundaries set by either religion or politics, that everything can change and the only thing that matters is one's end intention to do something good.

As Hitler, before Alinsky, proclaimed, "Our program is to govern," not delve into theory and dogma. This is in itself very appealing, especially to an electorate sick of the contentiousness of the past decade. This undefined "ideology of change" for the sake of change, for some action that will break through the roadblocks of polarization, has tremendous allure.

But Goldberg bursts that bubble:

The ‘middle way' sounds moderate and un-radical. Its appeal is that it sounds unideological and freethinking. But philosophically the Third Way is not mere difference splitting; it is utopian and authoritarian. Its utopian aspect becomes manifest in its antagonism to the idea that politics is about trade-offs. The Third Wayer says that there are no false choices -‘I refuse to accept that X should come at the expense of Y.' The Third Way holds that we can have capitalism and socialism, individual liberty and absolute unity. Fascist movements are implicitly utopian because they - like communist and heretical Christian movements -- assume that with just the right arrangement of policies, all contradictions can be rectified. (Goldberg; Liberal Fascism; p. 130)

Of course, thinking people -- when they are indeed thinking -- know this is an utterly false promise. Life will never be made perfect because all human beings are imperfect.

Unity, the Diabolical Lure

What of this longed-for unity then? Barack Obama proclaimed he was leading a movement of people "united for change." What is the appeal of unity?

The modern liberal fascist seeks that state between mother and child which exists early on before the child seeks his own independence, before mother must set herself at odds with him. It is the perfectly secure state of childhood where all is lovely and peaceful and nurturing, but cannot continue indefinitely if the child is to be prepared to face a world of difficulty and hard choices. Nevertheless, the yearning continues. It is this primordial yearning which sets itself in the crosshairs of the fascist demagogue.

But in adult life, this type of unity is anything but desirable, anything but virtuous. As Goldberg states, however, "elevation of unity as the highest social value is a core tenet of fascism and all leftist ideologies."

The allure of this mystical unity is so great that its demand to sacrifice reason and thought on the false altar of infantile security is seemingly lost to many. But as Goldberg also reminds us, "unity is, at best, morally neutral and often a source of irrationality and groupthink."

Rampaging mobs are unified. The Mafia is unified. Marauding barbarians bent on rape and pillage are unified. Meanwhile, civilized people have disagreements, and small-d democrats have arguments.

Classical liberalism is based on this fundamental insight, which is why fascism was always anti-liberal.

Liberalism rejected the idea that unity is more valuable than individuality. For fascists and other leftists, meaning and authenticity are found in collective enterprises - of class, nation, or race - and the state is there to enforce that meaning on everyone without the hindrance of debate.
(Goldberg; Liberal Fascism; p. 172)

Just as the healthy relationship between parent and developing child demands friction, so does the healthy relationship between truly liberal citizens. Unity is the siren song of tyranny, not the call to genuine progress.

Fascism: The Two Birds with One Stone Approach

I think of Obama's liberal fascism as a cancer that attempts to kill the two birds of American exceptionalism with one stone. It is a deviously appealing Third Way that in the end, if allowed to triumph completely, kills both individual liberty and Judeo/Christian religion with its single stone.

And, indeed this was the precise goal of Adolph Hitler. Unlike the outspoken hatred of private property and religion espoused by communists under Lenin and Stalin, Hitler preferred the more moderate-seeming incremental takeover of private enterprise in the interest of the "common good," and the slow-death of Judeo/Christian religion by chipping away at it and replacing the people's dependence upon God gradually with reliance on the state (Hitler).

[Note: Hitler's Holocaust was based on the Progressive Eugenics principles set forth by Social Darwinist scientists and social engineers of the 1920s, widely accepted both in Europe and in the United States. Religion was not at the core of the Holocaust; race was. However, Hitler's other chief aim was to destroy the Judeo/Christian religions, which he believed had ruined the Germanic race's world predominance.]

Of course, as the German people were duped into giving Hitler totalitarian powers to work his magic "change," he took off the kid gloves and accelerated the program.

In the end, however slow the process, however seemingly benign the growth of the state may seem, liberal fascism has the same result of all tyrannies before it: hell on earth for most and a self-indulgent feast for the Statists in power.

As Barack Obama speaks, thinking Americans ought to hear the echoes of past fascist demagogues and remember. Remember.

When Barack Obama promises "collective redemption" through his profligate spending programs and vast overtures to a new world order built on love for our fellow man, we ought to shudder not swoon.

We ought to remember that healthy global relationships are built upon respect, not all-encompassing love, and that redemption for one's soul is a commodity the state is not empowered to offer.

As Pope Benedict XVI has so presciently warned:

Wherever politics tries to be redemptive, it is promising too much. Where it wishes to do the work of God, it becomes, not divine, but demonic.

Be not fooled, America. The movement, which appears most benign is instead the most malignant growth ever seen on our soil. It's a cancer that will kill, and however slowly it grows or however nice it may look on the surface, doesn't change a thing.

1643. Notes on Obama & Liberal Fascism

I think the most obvious place to start is whether Obama is promoting something like a political religion. The messianic nature of Obama's campaign has been noted by many for a long time now. He often sounds like he's reviving the social gospel. There's even a website called "Is Barack Obama the Messiah?"

Many of the tropes of a political religion/liberal fascism are evident. He exalts unity as it's own reward. His talk of starting new and starting over often sounds like more than merely "turning the page" on the Bush-Clinton years. It sounds a bit like starting at Year Zero.

But what I find most intriguing is his rhetoric of destiny and "choseness." He often makes it sound like he has been selected by forces of providence or God or simply history for this moment. He is, in Oprah's words, "The One." But even more interesting, he tells voters they are the ones. "This is it," Obama proclaimed on Super Tuesday. "We are the ones we've been waiting for, we are the change that we seek." That's pretty oracular stuff.

Tellingly, "we are the ones we've been waiting for" is some Native American spiritualism warmed up for New Age audiences.

It's also telling that this divinization of the masses and/or the movement has a long pedigree, going back at least to the French Revolution. The Jacobins claimed that the French Nation represented the new "chosen people." The Italian Fascists said the same thing about the Italians. The Nazis believed likewise about the Germans. The Bolsheviks, too, believed in their own predestination of sorts in that they believed the cold impersonal forces of history had conspired to produce the vanguard of the proletariat, or something like that, which had been vested by History with mission to create a new utopia. "On earth," John Reed wrote of the Bolsheviks, "they were building a kingdom more bright than any heaven had to offer, and for which it was a glory to die."

Indeed, this sense that "this is our moment" and that "we are the change that we seek" seems to be hardwired into all of the political religions. Albert Beveridge at the Progressive Party Convention — where the crowd sang "We Will Follow Jesus" with Teddy Roosevelt's name replacing Jesus' — proclaimed "God has marked us as His chosen people, henceforth to lead in the regeneration of the world."

As I discuss at length in the book, totalitarianism was for Mussolini a way of uniting businesses, classes, regions, religions, institutions and people from “all walks of life” — in Obama’s words — in a common cause for the common good. These segments of society would band together, like sticks around the fasces. This was a sacred, spiritual, calling. “Fascism,” Il Duce declared time and again, “is a religion.” And the animating dogma of that faith was that if we’re all in it together there’s nothing we can’t do. Everything in the state, nothing outside the state.

Such a vision is comforting because it plays upon man’s inherent desire to belong, to be protected by his fellow man and his community. “Strength in numbers” is the narcotic of all populists, the logic of all “people powered movements” as leftwing bloggers like to say (though for reasons that defy easy analysis, the left has mastered the art of casting itself as the voice of the dissidents against the oppressive, stultifying “herd mentality” even as it places the group at the top of its hierarchy of political aesthetics). This is the motivating passion behind the fascist quest for order.

Sometimes it sounds like Obama wants to talk about God’s plan when he’s talking about his own campaign for a New Order. But most times, you can see that he wants to stay on the secular side of the divide — where his white base resides — but without giving up the prophetic vision. He wants to persuade his followers, and perhaps himself, that he is elect, but he cannot do so without religious language.

This reminds me of a passage from Eugen Weber’s brilliant Varieties of Fascism:

“…part of the confusion over the true character of Fascism comes from its advocacy of ‘order’ – a term we generally associate with conservatism or reaction. But Fascist order envisages not the status quo – or the status quo ante – but a more or less definite order of its own. The Fascist leader, now that God is dead, cannot conceive of himself as the elect of God. He believes he is elect, but does not quite know of what – presumably of history or obscure historical forces. The elect of God establishes or guards God’s order; the Fascist leader seeks a similar justification – but in the absence of ultimate authority, the order is one that he defines himself…”

The word order is a fossil of its living self today. Beyond academia and bromides about “law and order” nobody uses it or appreciates its full connotations. We should spend a moment excavating it.

Today, liberals do not use the word “order.” They say “security” – economic security, social security, health security – but the meaning is largely the same. All of the liberal arguments about globalization, job security, free trade, free markets and the like promise to increase a sense of safety, of belonging. There is nothing wrong with security, of course. But, we should take liberals at their word when they say this enterprise is not “conservative.” They do not want to restore the security of tradition, the order of old arrangements. They want to design a new “social” security grounded in progressive principles. This is the desired system that a politics of meaning is supposed to deliver.

For example, Obama says people want a spiritual community:

They want a sense of purpose, a narrative arc to their lives. They're looking to relieve a chronic loneliness, a feeling supported by a recent study that shows Americans have fewer close friends and confidants than ever before. And so they need an assurance that somebody out there cares about them, is listening to them—that they are not just destined to travel down that long highway towards nothingness.

For Obama the salve of salvation can be found not in scripture but in politics and political action under the transcendent banner of "unity":

[I]f enough Americans were awakened to the injustice; if they joined together, North and South, rich and poor, Christian and Jew, then perhaps that wall would come tumbling down, and justice would flow like water, and righteousness like a mighty stream.

Unity is the great need of the hour—the great need of this hour. Not because it sounds pleasant or because it makes us feel good, but because it's the only way we can overcome the essential deficit that exists in this country.

Joe Knippenberg, reviewing Obama's statements on religion writes:

Obama speaks as if the first move of someone faithful to God's word is to call for government action, not to act directly through his or her own charitable efforts. Those who don't engage in political action of the sort he approves are apparently hypocrites, satisfied with mere words. His religious commitments are a kind of conversation-stopper, as the late Richard Rorty once said.

This reminds me of perhaps my favorite vignette from the book:

Walter Rauschenbusch offers the best short explanation of the Social Gospel for our purposes. A professor at the Rochester Theological Seminary and a onetime preacher on the outskirts of New York's Hell's Kitchen, the slender clergyman with a thin goatee had become the informal leader of the movement when he published Christianity and the Social Crisis in 1907. "[U]nless the ideal social order can supply men with food, warmth and comfort more efficiently than our present economic order," he warned, "back we shall go to Capitalism . . . 'The God that answereth by low food prices,' " he boomed, "let him be God.'"
In other words, God had chosen his preferred economic system, and any religious faith, doctrine or revelation that suggested otherwise must be false. God is a socialist, dagnabit, and if a God who isn't a socialist speaks to you in a small, still voice, turn your back on Him. The state, according to Rauschenbusch was "the medium through which the people shall co-operate in their search for the kingdom of God and its righteousness."

In my book I concentrate on Hillary Clinton's "village" and her Politics of Meaning. But it seems to me that Obama is every bit the practitioner of his own politics of meaning and his own conception of a village-like community.

Anyway, this is all just a jumble of thoughts. But that's sort of why this blog exists. More thoughts to come, I'm sure, as it looks like Obama isn't going anywhere.

"But what's clear is that we're headed in the right direction. A year and a half ago, this economy was shrinking rapidly. The economy is now growing. A year and a half ago, we were losing jobs every month in the private sector. We've now added private sector jobs for seven months in a row. And that means the worst mistake we could make is to go back to doing what we were doing that got us into the mess that we were in. We can't turn back. We've got to keep going forward. We've got to keep going forward. (Applause.)." 0baMao Tse Dung, August 16, 2010.

Agreed. Maybe if the fools who think money is the only motivator had

If you are looking for a perfect America where such scandals and improprieties won't exist then you'll be waiting for the end of time because it will never happen. The one thing that we did not have in those decades past was a population that believed they were simply entitled to anything and everything and government was going to take away from one group in order to give to another.

Until the citizens literally take back their country from the fucking government you will see no change for the better.
When Watergate happened everyone from the citizenry up through all ranks of government were pissed and demanding action.
If Watergate were to occur today (or another Waco or Iran Contra etc) porbably no one other than politicians would give a shit and only then because they could use such events to their own benefit.

A large portion of the population today only care about one thing,
"I'm gonna get mine".
That was not the case 25 or 30 years back.
Politicians have always been predominately crooked to one degree or another. But nowadays the people have become nearly as corrupt in their thinking as the politicians.

As I stated here around 2 years ago, the people will elect the government they deserve. And they have.
We have become a much more divided nation than we have been in decades and we now have a government that reflects it.
Instead of the people being the bosses of the government the government now tells us what to think and how to feel.

You gave examples of a lot of bad things that occured throughout the last 30 or so years but it should also be noted that in that same time period, as a people, we were better human beings than we are today.
Then we tried to look out for our neighbors and it was common to see folks talking to each other over their fences and their children playing up and down the streets of their neighborhoods.
50 years ago people, whether successful at it or not, at least tried to live a "Leave It To Beaver" lifestyle. We would stop and help a stranded stranger on the side of the road and typically neither party had any reason to be fearful of the other. We had no problem throwing a few bucks into the salvation army bucket or at some other charity near the holidays.
Nowadays we are generally afraid to even drive down the street without being safely locked in our cars, we are afraid to let our kids play together outside after school and we look at our neighbors that may have a little more than us with disdain. And instead of trying to live the American dream we now lazily say that "it's impossible to live a perfect life so fuck it, may as well be an asshole."

Indeed, we might possibly be much better off today if the people themselves had the same morals and outlooks on life that they had 30 or more years ago. If we did then maybe we would not be so quick to tolerate the type of bullshit that we've had to put up with for the last 25 years.

Maybe you missed it; but the problem testing revealed in Arkansas is that local schoolboards were treating teaching jobs as political pork, hiring unqualified people who were connected personally in some way with school board members.

Real teachers were pissed.

You're Scott Koplin, right? The same fellow who posts as nurk_fred2000. You may have stopped Kramer from posting, but you trolls have over run several newsgroups with your garbage, MUCH worse that Kramer ever did. And this nonsense of calling him 'pinkie...' That was the name he gave to you in the scuba group several years ago, wasn't it. People know this now, and laugh at you when you try to use it. People know.

You have destroyed several active newsgroups with your constant barrage of nonsense forcing out not just your target, but every other poster. Kramer never did that. He might have force YOU into silence while you posted alone, but since you've joined up with your troll mates and become a gang of bullies, you have ruined the news group enjoyment for hundreds and hundreds of people. Can't you see that? Even in your own group, the scuba forum, there used to be many, many posts daily. Since you, and I do mean you personally, have begun your tirades, that group gets less than a dozen posts a week. You have destroyed the rec.scuba group, the rec.knives group, and the soc.culture.thai group. You. Not Kramer. You trolls have done it.

- Maybe you missed it; but the problem testing revealed in Arkansas is
- that local schoolboards were treating teaching jobs as political pork,
- hiring unqualified people who were connected personally in some way with
- school board members.

To these so-called 'teachers' the 'job' was just a pay-check;
and they knew who to vote-for to keep that pay-check coming.

No Teaching Certificates

Temporary Teaching Certificates being used for decades.

Sometimes not even a 2-Year Degree.

Sort of like Mexico where a MX High School Graduate can teach in a MX Primary School.

- Good teachers quit in favour of higher paying jobs elsewhere.

Not All - Some Did and Many More Stayed Teaching.

For many/most grew-up wanting to be a Teacher; Educated Themselves to Become a Quality Teacher; and Love Being A Good Teacher.

Remember too the 'choices' for Women have change and expanded from the 1950s/60s over the decades.
The majority of Teachers at least in the lower grades used to be Women. Back then 50/60s Women were NOT Police Officers, Fire'Men' and many other so called Man's Jobs. Now Women hold signification numbers of these Jobs. And Teaching is just one Career Choice for both Men and Women Today.
Potentially the Salaries of Teachers has to be more Competitive Today in the Expanded Job Market for Women then back in the 50/60s.

There's a lot of evidence that he did. And there's a shortwave connection to the story, too. See

> * FDR kept the US Military segregated in WWII

And to think that there are some so foolishly partisan that they claim that no Democrat ever did anything good!

Partisanship clouds the mind and atrophies the heart.

Actually, Woodrow Wilson said some very sensible things about race. To a group of Black leaders, he said:

"Segregation is not humiliating but a benefit, and ought to be so regarded by you gentlemen." -- Woodrow Wilson, 1913

Of the terrible days of the so-called Reconstruction period, Wilson wrote:

"It was a menace to society itself that the negroes should thus of a sudden be set free and left without tutelage or restraint.... The country filled with vagrants, looking for pleasure and gratuitous fortune. Idleness bred want, as always, and the vagrants turned thieves or inopportune beggars. The tasks of ordinary labor stood untouched; the idlers grew insolent, dangerous; nights went anxiously by, for fear of riot and incendiary fire. It was imperatively necessary that something should be done.... The southern legislatures, therefore, promptly undertook remedies of their own - such remedies as English legislators had been familiar with time out of mind." -- Woodrow Wilson in _The New York Age_, July 11, 1912

On the issue of non-White immigration, Wilson stated:

"I stand for the national policy of exclusion. The whole question is one of assimilation of diverse races. We cannot make an homogeneous population of a people who do not blend with the Caucasian race.... Oriental coolieism will give us another race problem to solve, and surely we have had our lesson." -- Woodrow Wilson, 1912

And, just in case some foolish partisans think I am giving all the glory to Wilson, it's also important to remember that Wilson's Republican contemporary, Theodore Roosevelt, was also sane when it came to most racial matters:

"Nineteenth-century democracy needs no more complete vindication for its existence than the fact that it has kept for the white race the best portions of the new world's surface -- temperate America and Australia. Had these regions been under aristocratic governments, Chinese immigration would have been encouraged precisely as the slave trade is encouraged of necessity by any slave-holding oligarchy, and the result would in a few generations have been even more fatal to the white race; but the democracy, with the clear instinct of race selfishness, saw the race foe, and kept out the dangerous alien." -- _Memorial Edition of the Works of Theodore Roosevelt_, XIV, 245

All this arguing over labels is pretty silly, anyway.

George Bush started two illegal, murderous wars against countries that never harmed the United States in any way.

Obama, whose name ought to be changed to Barack Hussein Fetchit in honor of how obedient he is to his masters, has continued and even escalated those wars.

Doesn't matter too much what you call that. It's mass murder either way.

If you're really interested in political labels, check out

Crack and stupid consumer offerings are irrelevant. The other 2 items you mention were irrelevant to the big, and economic, picture. 25 years ago, but even then diminishing, the U.S. was a major auto, steel, tools, dies, machinery, consumer goods producer. That's history. The name of the forum has economics as the 3rd word. That's why it's on topic. Way off base re the 60's and 80's (mid 70's the demise began and 80's was the beginning of the high rate of the demise) but the 70's were the peak as far as output. It will only get worse from here on, in every conceivable measure. "Americans" must learn to live like the people in Peru, Cambodia and Albania. It's not sorrowful, it was good while it lasted.

No, that's who they are and attempting to change it was moronic. The bedwetters sacrificed thousands of the most honorable individuals in the U.S. to achieve futility.

No, they tired what the U.S. ignorantly tried - to change a culture. That's impossible, the same as it's now impossible to bring back the United States.

Moron Bush put us in to two totally un winnable situations, and at the same time (starting during Clinton's tenure) importing the problem at U.S. taxpayer expense.

Bedwetters cannot win a war. Iraq and Afghanistan and Iraq were not wars except for the first couple weeks. IF the U.S. wanted to overpower these shitholes, they could have, but it would have taken a serious offensive (WWII style) which the U.S. will never again have the balls to do. As much as it may frustrate you, we agree. Neither should have happened.

The market sets the price, not the producers. You're paying what the market will bear and as much as the sellers can get. Diminishing wages (via diminishing output) is what diminishes wages.

They are acquiescing to shoddy junk that costs seemingly less, but then, now there's nothing to compare it to as produced in the U.S (for the majority of items)

First, all the recent presidents have had "masters". Just ask JFK what happened to him when he wouldn't play ball with "them" [HIS "masters"].

Huh? Escalated?

Just last night (8/18), he took tens of thousands of troops OUT of Iraq. Call that an "escalation" if you wish.

Finally, please remember that W Bush painted us into a total, non-winnable corner; Republican or Democrat, stay or leave -- no matter what any president of any party does, there will be bad consequences in Afghanistan and Iraq.

With all good wishes,

Joe

..and Japan and Korea and India...but only because "Americans" will settle for that. If you want to see an economic revolution, everyone stop buying Chinese, Japanese and Korean for JUST 90 DAYS - ships will back up at sea, (Japan and Korea might even "allow" U.S. products into their countries) chaos will rein with the producers, a market will be born for domestic products and employment and wage levels of 30 years ago will return and RISE. Nawwwww...Obama will send the ignorant masses 300 bucks and all will continue as is.

"Be not fooled, America" obviously, who ever wrote this for you does not feel it can stand by it's self and has to use fear to gain it's support. beside, if you really know nazism as well as you think you do, (you quoted him) you would understand the goebbel's propaganda tactics being utilized by the GOP and faux news.
Since all you did was cut-n-paste this from some extreme right propaganda portal, you have no clue what your saying and are just here to piss off the group like a troll.

Can't speak for Japan, since I've only spent a few weeks over there, but Korea is awash in US products from toilet paper to coffee to fast food to automobiles. Of course more people buy Korean products, but I'd have to guess that at least 10% of the economy here involves US brands and products (and that is not counting the US military presence.)

American Taliban
Updated January 25, 2007 and April 19, 2005 (originally published November 24, 2004)

The War on Terror has provided Americans with a helpful introduction to theocracy. The fight against Al Qaeda, the war on the Taliban, and the growing tensions with the regime in Iran has offered a quick primer on the hallmarks of the religious state. First is the rule of religious authorities, whether it be Bin Laden's new Caliphate, Mullah Omar's Taliban regime, or the mullahs in Tehran. Second is the imposition of the faith's sacred texts as law, in these cases, some variant of sharia law of the Koran. And last is the direct involvement of the state in the most minute and deeply personal aspects of individual lives, enforced by religious police, informed by spies, and punished severely (and often publicly).

Now thanks to the Bush administration, a Republican Congress and the conservative ascendancy, Americans need not travel to Kandahar to learn about the perils of theocratic rule. Right here in the United States, a network of politicians, religious leaders, faith-based organizations and (literally) their amen corner are working overtime to make a particularly onerous concept of Christianity the de facto law of the land. Armed with the Bible in one hand and the Patriot Act in the other, George W. Bush and his GOP jihadists threaten to fundamentally change the role of government in monitoring Americans lives, liberties and even bodies.

Meet the American Taliban:
The American Taliban

George Bush

The President's theocratic tendencies go back to his days as Governor of Texas. There he proclaimed the celebration of Jesus Day, in recognition of He who changed my heart. As President, his Faith-Based Initiative seeks to put $8 billion of taxpayer money in the hands of religious organizations to deliver social services without regard to potential discriminatory practices. The President, who apparently has his own "prayer team", consistently uses religious language and imagery in his speeches. Regarding his foreign policy, Bush emphasizes that the Declaration of Independence and Constitution not withstanding, freedom is a gift from the Almighty. (They were called the Founding Fathers, and not the Founding Deities, for a reason.)

Antonin Scalia

Supreme Court Justice Scalia has provided much of the intellectual heft and rhetorical rage in the legal assault on the separation of church and state. Scalia, a virulent opponent of gay and reproductive rights, has dissented from virtually every ruling expanding the right to privacy, including the Texas sodomy case (Lawrence v. Texas) and Colorado constitutional referendum on gay rights (Romer v. Evans). The outspoken Scalia had to recuse himself from the Newdow Pledge case after his public criticism of the Ninth Circuit Court in comments at a "Religious Freedom Day" celebration. As for the separation of church and state, Scalia recently asked a Jewish audience, "did it turn out that, by reason of the separation of church and state, the Jews were safer in Europe than they were in the United States of America? I don't think so." He added, "I am an originalist, I am a textualist, but I am not a nut." History, Mr. Justice, will be the judge of that.

Roy Moore

The former Chief Justice of the Alabama Supreme Court insisted on displaying a massive granite monument bearing the Ten Commandments at his courthouse and refused to obey a Federal judge's ruling ordering its removal. In defiance, he claimed that announcing it depicts the "moral foundations of law" and reflects the "sovereignty of God over the affairs of men." For his actions, he is now rightly the former Chief Justice. Now, he seeks passage of the Alabama Senator Richard Shelby's "Constitution Restoration Act" and its House companion, the "Ten Commandments Defense Act" offered by Alabama Rep. Robert Aderholt. Among other threats to the separation of church and state, these bills would ban Federal courts from curbing state court rulings allowing an "acknowledgment of God".

Sam Brownback

The Kansas Senator and 2008 GOP presidential hopeful aims to bring his retrograde worldview to the White House. A one-time evangelical turned born-again Catholic, the former Gingrich firebrand wants to bring his personal jihad against abortion, stem cell research and gay-marriage to the entire United States. A warrior for the supposed "culture of life," in 2006 Brownback displayed a child's drawing of embryos on the Senate floor during the stem cell debate, relating the 7-year old girl's plea, "are you going to kill me?" Announcing his candidacy, Brownback declared that "every human life is a beautiful, sacred, unique child of a loving God" and that "the family and the culture are under withering attack." It's no wonder his American Taliban fellow traveler Tony Perkins of the Family Research Council said of the Kansan, "Senator Brownback is unrivaled as an advocate for the family and for life in Washington."

John Ashcroft

The Attorney General may be on his way out, but his longing for a return to the Middle Ages is undiminished. The son of a Pentecostal minister, the man who lost his Missouri Senate reelection to a dead man brought his own version of sharia to the Justice Department, holding regular prayer meetings, covering up bare-breasted statues, and barring meetings of gay employees. Apparently, only Ashcroft's deep devotion to God exceeds his anti-abortion ferocity and fidelity to neo-Confederate causes such as blocking desegregation and African-American judges. Ashcroft neatly summarized his own view of American government, "Unique among the nations, America recognized the source of our character as being godly and eternal, not being civic and temporal. And because we have understood that our source is eternal, America has been different. We have no king but Jesus."

Tom Delay

The one-time exterminator and ethically challenged House Majority Leader is also one of Washington's foremost Crusaders. The man who once compared the EPA to the Gestapo (for banning his beloved DDT) sees his mission as bringing "a Biblical worldview to government." Among other things, that worldview includes Delay's conclusion that "I don't believe there is a separation of church and state. I think the Constitution is very clear. The only separation is that there will not be a government church." Delay also pronounced that "our entire system is built on the Judeo-Christian ethic, but it fell apart when we started denying God. If you stand up today and acknowledge God, they will try to destroy you... My mission is to bring us back to the Constitution and to Absolute Truth that has been manipulated and destroyed by a liberal worldview."

Henry Hyde

Author of the Hyde Amendment limiting the use of Federal funds for abortions, Hyde is one of the fiercest voices of morality in the House. This, despite the fact that the Illinois representative and Clinton impeachment hound had an adulterous affair he deemed a "youthful indiscretion." Hyde had experience in handling these matters publicly, speaking out in defense of his similarly disgraced colleague Dan Crane in 1982, "he is embarrassed, he is humiliated, he is disgraced...The Judeo-Christian tradition says hate the sin and love the sinner...I think it is time to love the sinner." For Hyde, the Judeo-Christian tradition apparently did not apply to Bill Clinton.

Rick Santorum

The staunchly Catholic Senator from Pennsylvania has been ardent foe of abortion and reproductive rights since joining the Senate. A leading voice in support of the Federal Marriage Amendment banning same-sex marriage, Santorum has been outspoken about the perils to American society of "man on dog" relationships. The junior Senator from Pennsylvania, who has also stated that there is no constitutional right to privacy, sees gay marriage, and not Al Qaeda, as the greatest threat facing the United States. ""I would argue that the future of our country hangs in the balance because the future of marriage hangs in the balance. Isn't that the ultimate homeland security, standing up and defending marriage?"

Tom Coburn

Joining Bill Frist among the ranks of the physician Senators, the Oklahoman alerted his fellow Sooners to the threat of lesbians run amok in the their high schools. "Lesbianism is so rampant in some of the schools in southeast Oklahoma that they'll only let one girl go to the bathroom. Now think about it. Think about that issue. How is it that that's happened to us?" Coburn, an obstetrician, has said he favors the death penalty for abortion providers and called state legislators "a bunch of crapheads." The good doctor, who called his race against Brad Carson a choice between "good and evil", also has been accused of Medicare fraud and sterilizing a woman without her permission.

Jim DeMint

The new Senator from South Carolina has already distinguished himself on both social and tax policy. During a campaign debate, DeMint stated that "if a person is a practicing homosexual, they should not be teaching in our schools." DeMint also has it ass-backwards (pun intended) on tax reform, proposing the abolition of the income tax and its replacement with a wildly regressive 23% consumption tax.

James Dobson

The head of Focus on the Family, Dobson has created a global empire in Colorado Springs, Colorado. Heading a group whose radio programs reach 7 million Americans each week and are broadcast in 115 nations, Dobson may now be the leading crossover politico-religious figure in the country. In the immediate aftermath of Bush's reelection and the GOP tidal wave in Congress, Dobson threw his weight around, calling for Arlen Specter's head and labeling Vermont Senator Pat Leahy a "God's people hater." (Dobson might want to consult with Vice President Cheney on getting their message " and language " straight visa vis Leahy.)

Jerry Falwell

The creator of the Moral Majority, Falwell continues to play a major jihadist role in mobilizing the Christian Right. Still smarting from his courtroom defeat at the hands of Larry Flynt, Falwell attributed 9/11 to divine punishment of America, stating "I really believe that the pagans, and the abortionists, and the feminists, and the gays and the lesbians who are actively trying to make that an alternative lifestyle, the ACLU, People For the American Way, all of them who have tried to secularize America. I point the finger in their face and say 'you helped this happen.'" More recently, he called the NOW the "National Organization of Witches" and Americans United for the Separation of Church and State "anti-Christ".

Pat Robertson

The one-time presidential candidate and broadcasting giant with Ralph Reed made the Christian Coalition into the power it is today. Robertson agreed with Falwell's assessment that the United States, home of feminists, homosexuals and abortionists, got its just desserts from the Lord on 9/11, Robertson also turned election prognosticator in October, "I really believe I'm hearing from the Lord it's going to be like a blowout election in 2004...It doesn't make any difference what he [Bush] does, good or bad, God picks him up because he's a man of prayer and God's blessing him."

Ralph Reed

The head of the Georgia GOP and Bush's coordinator for the southeast U.S., Reed is the archetypal Crusader. The man who helped make the Christian Coalition such a dominant force summarized his un-Christian tactics, "I paint my face and travel at night. You don't know it's over until you're in a body bag. You don't know until election night." Blessed are the meek indeed.

Tony Perkins

Perkins has led the Family Research Council since 2003, after previously founding the Louisiana Family Forum to fight the "increasing influence of the homosexual community on public policy issues" and authoring that state's covenant marriage legislation. Perkins likes to refer to the "homosexual death-style" and labels civil unions "a serious threat to the health of our culture." With Bill Frist, Perkins is at the center of the judicial filibuster fight, proclaiming after the death of Terri Schiavo that the courts "are suffering from a persistent state of arrogance" and "no longer respect human life." Along with Dobson and other junior members of the American Taliban, Perkins is hosting the April 24th "Justice Sunday" event to protest the judicial filibuster as an attack "against people of faith."

Gary Bauer

Bauer, president of American Values and former head of the Family Research Council, shows that bearing a striking resemblance to Star Wars' Yoda is no barrier to influence in American culture. The one-time presidential candidate continues to play a major role in driving the supposed Christian agenda. Telling his faithful that "our nation stands at the brink of a cultural crisis", Bauer adds that "and so long as God gives me breath I will do everything possible to defend faith, family and freedom. Once again, I must ask for your prayers and your financial support."

Richard Land

Land, the head of the Southern Baptist Convention's "Ethics and Religious Liberty" Commission, has been a steadfast and vocal supporter of President Bush. He noted that "Republicans abort at lower rates than Democrats. I read an estimate that by the 2000 election, five million potential Gore voters had been lost to abortion." He also pointed out that "I don't think there's any question that this president's heartbeat is close to the heartbeat of Southern Baptists when it comes to very serious and important public policy issues to Southern Baptists." Recently, Land's commission has been debating a proposal encouraging Southern Baptists to home-school their children, removing them from the "godless public schools."

Tuscon, AZ. The Rev. David Valencia, 47, assistant pastor of a Pentecostal church is expected in court Wednesday on rape charges issued by Pennsylvania authorities. In Pennsylvania, Valencia was an assistant pastor at Christ Church at Grove Farm, an interdenominational church that uses Anglican liturgy. The pastor of Christ Church, the Rev. John Guest, told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette that Valencia was dismissed in late 2001 because he was found to have pornography on an office computer after he was warned about a similar incident months earlier. (Tucson Citizen, May 31, 2003) Rev. David Valencia allegedly had sex with a 17-year-old girl he was counseling

Fort Pierce, FL. Pastor Kenneth Johnson, recently convicted of having sex with a minor, and Friendship Missionary Baptist Church -- where he reportedly continues to minister -- were named in a sex-abuse lawsuit filed Tuesday. Johnson, 39, is scheduled to be sentenced Friday on one count of unlawful sexual activity with a minor. He faces up to 15 years on the second-degree felony. (The Tribune, January 22, 2003) .

Athens, GA. Ralph Tulk, 63, was arrested Tuesday and charged with five counts of child molestation for allegedly inappropriately touching five children at Holy Trinity Lutheran Church over several years. He was superintendent of the Sunday school program when some of the alleged molestations took place and was treasurer of the church until last month, according to police and the church. Dickerson and many other residents of this Northeast Georgia city -- most of whom were willing to share their thoughts about the case but not be quoted -- said they worry about the church, but aren't yet convinced of the allegations. "This is America, and you are innocent until proven guilty," Dickerson said. (MSNBC.com, Jan. 11, 2003) Town reacts to molestation charges

Bryan, TX. A pastor was arrested and released from jail Monday night after he was charged with aggravated sexual assault of a child. Ford was indicted earlier this month based on an allegation he had sexually assaulted a teenage boy who went on a trip with the pastor to the Texas Panhandle more than two years ago. Ford was pastor from the New Zion

Missionary Baptist Church in Bryan where he had served for 17 years. (Bryan-College Station Eagle, Dec. 24, 2002)

Idaho Falls, ID. An area pastor is charged with inappropriately touching a teenage boy. Idaho Falls police charged a long-time religious leader with five counts of lewd conduct with a minor. 46-year-old Steven Michael Sheridan, the former pastor of St. Paul's United Methodist Church has been arrested-- this after police recorded two recent phone conversations between the victim and Sheridan. Sheridan was the pastor of St. Paul's United Methodist Church five years ago when the alleged crimes occurred. Since then, he's been pastor of another church. The victim who was 13 at the time, and is now 18, said Sheridan was like a mentor. They took trips together, and during those trips, Sheridan touched him sexually. One time, the pastor allegedly touched the boys genitals saying he was checking for cancer. (KPVI, Dec. 6, 2002)

LINCOLN, NE. Three lawsuits have been filed against a Lutheran church school for alleged sexual abuse by former officials, including a minister who served as principal. The lawsuits against St. John Lutheran Church in Seward seek millions of dollars for the alleged abuse. The Lincoln Journal Star reported in Saturday's editions that two lawsuits were filed in Lancaster County District Court on Friday by unnamed plaintiffs who alleged they were abused by longtime principal David Mannigel. Mannigel, a Lutheran minister, apparently killed himself last year. (ABC News, November 2, 2002) Lutheran Church sued over abuse by Pastor Mannigel

LINCOLN, NE? Three lawsuits have been filed against a Lutheran church school for alleged sexual abuse by former officials, including a minister who served as principal. The lawsuits against St. John Lutheran Church in Seward seek millions of dollars for the alleged abuse. The other lawsuit was filed in U.S. District Court in Lincoln on Wednesday by T. Mark Kraft, a Colorado man, for claims of abuse by retired teacher Arlen Meyer. That lawsuit seeks $1 million. (ABC News, November 2, 2002)

Dayton, OH. A Trotwood minister, whose lawyer said he has been a "sex addict" since age 10, sought treatment rather than face trial in a Brookville police- run Internet sting that presented a virtual 14-year-old boy in a chat room. But a Montgomery County judge denied his plea for treatment Tuesday. Turner's attorney, Dwight Brannon, wrote "He had his first sexual experience with another male at the age of 19 while in college. Shortly after he began surfing the Web his addiction slowly began to grow." Turner had been pastor of Anchor Community Church, 38 S. Fairgreen Drive, for seven years when he was arrested last summer. (Dayton Daily News, 01.29.2003)

Riviera Beach, FL. A prominent minister, his church and deacon have reached a $600,000 settlement with a mentally disabled man who accused the minister of rape. The Rev. Thomas Masters, pastor of the New Macedonia Church of Riviera Beach, and Church Mutual, insurer for the church, negotiated the settlement with the man, according to his attorneys and court papers filed Monday. The man, who has the mental capacity of a 7-year-old, attended New Macedonia and accused Masters of coercing him to smoke crack cocaine and then raping him twice on church property over Thanksgiving weekend in 1991. Tulsa, OK. Son Minh Rockstroh, 48, was arrested Saturday on three counts of rape by instrumentation and one count of lewd molestation of a child. He was jailed about 2 a.m. Saturday and is being held in lieu of $200,000 bail. The allegations have no apparent link to his work as a schoolteacher but to his leadership of a small religious group called Church Life, Tulsa police said. The victim and her mother met Rockstroh through Church Life, whose members meet in each others' homes, Detective Chuck Haywood said. "There is not a pastor of the church, but everyone considered him to be the guy in charge," Haywood said of Rockstroh. During an interview with police, Rockstroh admitted that he had molested the girl on three occasions, jail records show. (Tulsa World, 11/12/2002)

TISHOMINGO, OK. Kentucky pastor accused of raping a 12-year-old Oklahoma girl has surrendered to Johnston County officials. The Rev. Chadwick L. Keathley, associate pastor of Ark of Mercy Church of God in Winchester, Ky., responded Tuesday to an arrest warrant issued Aug. 26. Prosecutors charged Keathley, 27, with lewd molestation, first-degree rape and rape by instrumentation. He was released after posting a $25,000 cash bond and an Oct. 22 preliminary hearing was scheduled. The alleged incident occurred during summer 2000 at a Church of God gathering at Camp Bond Youth Camp near Tishomingo. (The Winchester Sun, Sept. 2002)

That isnt what actually happened after Gov Clinton signed the teacher testing bill. Your analysis fails to recognize how many teachers liked living and working and raising their kids in small towns that dont have strangers with candy or drug dealers on the corners.

Arkansas is RURAL state, and has a very low cost of living so higher salaries elsewhere are not that attractive. Good teachers, who care about kids and safe, crime free, drug free schools, where their own kids go, dont giva fuck how much money you want to pay them to move to a major metro area.

They do care about the quality of education their kids got from other teachers, and were delighted to see the well connected unqualified teachers replaced. The problems they had with remediation dramatically declined. Thanx to gov Clinton.

Clinton also started the "Our Kids First" healthcare so parents, who dont make that much money in Arkansas, can get appropriate treatment for their kids. Thus I had a granddaughter who moved here with her mom get eye surgery they never could have afforded in Florida. As a result, the kid can see the blackboard better, and her grades improved.

Have you EVER admitted anything Clinton did that was positive?

Yes that is very true.

And should these Big City 'Baddies' show up in these rural communities they often seem to leave rather quickly.

Yes Bill is now a former us prez-a-duntz :o)

* * * RHF's 'Former' Office Title Rant * * *
Please Note that I do not like addressing any 'former' Elected Official by their 'former' Title :
Senator, Mister Mayor, Governor or President.
-nor- Do I like seeing the 'former' "Title" written with Capital Leading Letter.
-nor- Do I like seeing the "Title" written without the word 'former'.

Examples :
* former mayor Willie Brown
-not- Mayor Brown
* former governor Mitt Romney
-not- Governor Romney
* former speaker of the house Newt Gingrich -not- Speaker of the House Gingrich
* former senator Bob Dole
-not- Senator Dole
* former president Bush
-not- President Bush

-hint- They Ain't Royalty [.]

! W H Y ! - They are Temporary Elected Officials {Government Employees} and are Not Anointed for Life with their 'former' office -cause- they Have Been Replace by someone doing the Temporary Elected Job. - so say i ~ RHF

ROTFL : White House says Obama is Christian & Prays to Allah 5X Daily

? Hello Did That Get Your Attention ?
Actually the AP News Headline Reads :
"White House says Obama is Christian, prays daily" http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/20100819/ap_on_go_pr_wh/us_poll_obama_s_religion but if , , , But If . . . BUT IF ! ! !

The Obama White House has to explain and re-explain
Prez Obama's Faith {Beliefs} be it : Agnostic, Bahia, Buddhist, Christian, Falun Gong, Hindu, Jewish, Muslim, or even a New World Order Atheist. {Alphabetical List}

Then you have to Ask : What Message ?Is? Prez Obama Sending About His Very Own Religious Faith and Personal Beliefs to the American Public ?
* Spending most of His Prez-A-Duntzial Sundays at Camp David Playing Golf; and not going to a 'nice' Church {Temple/Synagog/Mosque} in the Washington DC area.

If U.S. auto's are in Korea, it must have heppend in the past 3 years. My last visit was for a month teaching Hyundai/Kia some new technologies. In a month, I saw 5 U.S. vehicles.

Before World War Two, there was a Chevrolet factory and also a Harley Davidson factory in China, I have an old auto magazine article here about that.Currently, there is a Harley Davidson factory near Shanghai,China.
Henry Ford had Ford factories around the World, building Model T Ford cars.I have an old hard back Ford book here about that.
America has many factories around the World, and has had many factories around the World for many, many years.

Once again, you hit the nail on the head. Every time we get our arses kicked for doing something stupid, the government uses more socialism to cover its arse, and the policies that lead our civilization to destruction don't change.

Someone from called my ISP masquerading as the administrator from RRS and had my ISP turn my internet broadband access off for posting non-shortwave material.
This violates several aspects of the new federal internet harrassment laws. It was obviously simple enough to get my access back, but someone now faces federal investigation and prosecution.

It is considered grounds for parole revocation.

Let's see who now disappears.

We shall see if this is just another fraud.

One of the big "change" promises made by Fetchit was ending the wars, beginning with the day he took office. The Iraq war continues to be bloody and destructive, the Afghanistan war is much larger and now includes Pakistan (illegally and grossly immorally, I might add), and the insane Hate Iran (and Hate Russia) campaigns are in fuller flower than they were under the neocons and may well lead to another war of aggression.

By the way, on the subject of political labels, I just ran across this excellent quote:

"The word 'Fascism' has now no meaning except in so far as it signifies 'something not desirable.'" - George Orwell

Honor bright,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

YAWN! - Notice the "RED" Communist dot in the star:
http://www.perrspectives.com/features/Taliban.htm

Jon Perr of PERRspectives.com has long been active in DEMOCRATic politics and public policy as an ORGANIZER and advisor in California and Massachusetts. His past roles include field staffer for GARY HART for President (1984), ORGANIZER of Silicon Valley tech executives backing President CLINTON's call for national education standards (1997), recruiter of tech executives for AL GORE for President (2000), and co-coordinator of MassTech for ROBERT [RED SOCIALIST] REICH
(2002). http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=2023

http://www.perrspectives.com/aboutus/perrbio.htm

He is also a member of NEW DEMOCRAT NETWORK.
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=7472

Founded by Democrat Party operative Simon Rosenberg,

The New Democrat Network (NDN) describes itself as a "PROGRESSIVE think tank and advocacy organization."

According to NDN, "conservatives in Washington" aim to promote a "governing agenda" that has "taken a sharp turn to the reckless right, offering an economic strategy ill-suited for the challenges we face, a foreign policy too belligerent and too ineffective, and a style of governing too arrogant and corrupt for our proud democracy."

LOL!

I've been here for 10 years, and travel almost every day throughout the country. On the expressways I would guess easily 10% of the cars are US makes, another 1-2% are Japanese. Lots of Chryslers (mostly PT Cruisers, which seem to be very popular), Chevrolets (mostly vans and SUV's). Other foreign cars that are very popular here are Mini Coopers and BMW's. For the most part, for small cars they stick with domestic because of price and easy parts availability.

Conversely, most of the US military drive Korean vehicles, mostly small cars for POV's, and the military fleets are mostly SSangYong and KIA.

They said no actual U.S. troop offensive combat -- "unless specifically asked by the Iraqi government".

The bad news: That sounds like a loop hole big enough to drive a Mack truck through.

The good news: The actual number of US troops in Iraq is at an all time low since Day One of the war.

Cell phones are great if the coverage is decent enough. But, it depends on the individual provider. And yes,people do get killed while driving and talking and especially 'texting', all the time.Very sad,but true...

Steve Lare has a PAROLE?? Where did you hear that?

Mind you , I wouldn't be surprised if it were true. Uncle Sam probably wants those unpaid taxes on the Rolex watches bought from the PX and then resold at profit.

Say Hey:

Several reasons Steve Kramer had to depart Thailand:

1. His business via B-1 was revoked as a result that his business went bust.
2. He was unable to apply for a NON-O immigrant retirement visa as a result he was could not show Thai immigration he had 800,000 THB in a bank account or produce retirement papers that showed he had a minimum of 800K THB income. In view of this Royal Thai Immigration of Thailand invoked what is called a "soft deportation". He had to depart Thailand voluntarily or be force out of the kingdom. Looks to me he took the "soft deportation" and hasn't been seen since.

I'm curious! If this was done via a phone call, then just how might that fall

It would almost seem (if your story is true, and I rather doubt that it is) that the 'real' harraser here, in terms of the internet, would be your ISP.

After all, ostensibly they took the word of a total stranger, and without contacting you, turned off your internet broadband access.

Bryant, you're just too funny!

Here is a quote from Mein Kampf:

"The fight which Fascist Italy waged against Jewry's three principal weapons, the profound reasons for which may not have been consciously understood (though I do not believe this myself) furnishes the best proof that the poison fangs of that Power which transcends all State boundaries are being drawn, even though in an indirect way.
The prohibition of Freemasonry and secret societies, the suppression of the supranational Press and the definite abolition of Marxism, together with the steadily increasing consolidation of the Fascist concept of the State--all this will enable the Italian Government, in the course of some years, to advance more and more the interests of the Italian people without paying any attention to the hissing of the Jewish world-hydra.
"The English situation is not so favorable. In that country which has 'the freest democracy' the Jew dictates his will, almost unrestrained but indirectly, through his influence on public opinion."

To all radio amateurs

SB PROP ARL ARLP033
ARLP033 Propagation de K7RA

Thanks so much to Tomas Hood, NW7US, who wrote last week's bulletin while K7RA was in California at dance camp. Tomas writes the weekly propagation column for CQ magazine, and he has an excellent web site devoted to propagation at http://prop.hfradio.org/.

Tomas mentioned in last week's bulletin that the August 11 sunspot number of 66 is the highest recorded for cycle 24, but actually there were higher values recorded on May 4-5, when the sunspot number was 70 and 77, as you can see at http://snipurl.com/10qez7. See values from the current quarter at http://snipurl.com/10qezi. To see higher sunspot numbers, we must look back to the downward slide of cycle 23 on April 12, 2006 when the sunspot number was 79. The 2006 data is at http://snipurl.com/10qf0o.

Sunspot numbers and solar flux declined this week, with average daily sunspot numbers down nearly 17 points to 36.1, and average daily solar flux down 1 point to 83.5. In the previous week, average daily sunspot numbers had risen nearly 33 points to 53.

New sunspot groups appeared on August 11, 13 and 16, but on Tuesday and Wednesday (August 17-18), total sunspot area was one-fifth what it was on August 16, less than one-seventh the area on August 14, and less than one-fourteenth the area of August 12. On August 12, 14, 16 and 18 the daily sunspot number was 50, 31, 39 and 23, and on August 19 it was 11, which is the minimum non-zero sunspot number.

Projections for solar flux over the next ten days, August 20-29, are 78, 78, 77, 77, 79, 80, 82, 84, 82, and 81. Predictions for planetary A index over those same days are 5 on August 20-23, 6 on August 24, 12 on August 25-26, and 5 on August 27-29.

Geophysical Institute Prague predicts quiet conditions for August 20-22, quiet to unsettled August 23, and unsettled August 24-26.

Carl Luetzelschwab, K9LA has a new propagation column out today in WorldRadio online. See it on pages 24-26 at http://snipurl.com/10qfq5.

Greg Andracke, W2BEE of Pine Plains, New York says he will visit Saint Vincent and the Grenadines in the Caribbean in mid-December, and wants to know what night time propagation might be like on 20 and 30 meters.

Running some numbers with W6ELprop shows that the local sunset time is 2138z on December 15. Propagation back to anywhere in the USA doesn't look promising after dark, but paths to South Africa and South America look good.

Thanks to David Moore of Morro Bay, California and Mark Downing, WM7D for sending a couple of articles on a possible explanation for weak solar activity. The articles are at http://snipurl.com/10qg15 and http://snipurl.com/10qg1a.

Bob Forsman, WK5X of Stuart's Draft, Virginia commented about an item in the August 6 bulletin, ARLP031. "KA3JAW's reception of Channel 2 from Ontario probably had nothing to do with the CME. It's likely just garden-variety late-season sporadic-E, in my opinion; and I'm pretty sure that you realize this also. 1300 miles is close to the maximum distance possible via single-hop, but it isn't terribly unusual. The MUF of the e-layer was likely around 58-60 MHz at the mid-point".

Dean Lewis, W9WGV of Palatine, Illinois wrote "While I realize this is old news, it might at least be worth the perspective. Being used to 20/30/40 meter propagation, I didn't have any particular appreciation for contacts I'd made on 6 meters.

Having just purchased a new Icom 703, I thought I'd give it a try on 6 during the June VHF QSO Party.

Without a 6M antenna, I managed to tune up my 66 ft. end-fed 40 meter wire through a short length of coax as something of an off-center resonant feedline dipole (??!).

>From our QTH 25 miles northwest of Chicago, I worked 11 states with the 703's 10W (CW) output: AL, FL, GA, IL, MA, MS, NH, SD, TX, UT, and WI. (I QSL 100, with an SASE; the return cards have all arrived.)

Family events over the weekend limited my air time; I could have done more, I'm sure.

Oh; and BTW, the antenna is indoors (typical townhouse "CC&R's").

Now I understand why they call it 'magic'".

Sunspot numbers for August 12 through 18 were 50, 51, 31, 33, 39, 26, and 23 with a mean of 36.1. 10.7 cm flux was 83.8, 83.7, 85.2, 85.6, 84.7, 81.1 and 80.3 with a mean of 83.5. Estimated planetary A indices were 4, 4, 3, 5, 7, 5 and 5 with a mean of 4.7. Estimated mid-latitude A indices were 3, 3, 2, 5, 4, 3 and 3 with a mean of 3.3.

Liberty Net: August 14, 2010

http://3950.net/2010/08/liberty-net-august-14-2010/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE LIBERTY NET MUST HAVE hit a nerve with those who hate free speech this week, since a malicious jammer wasted a great deal of his time trying ï¿½ and failing ï¿½ to stop all discussion. Frequency agility and concentrating on the more powerful stations on the net were key factors. Sadly, children shouldnï¿½t listen to this weekï¿½s recording, because the jammer used unbelievably filthy language. The good news is that ï¿½ like last time ï¿½ several leads were provided to identify the malefactor.

Here are a few of the topics discussed this week on amateur radioï¿½s most exciting net:

ï¿½ Sharia law is the fundamental law of the race-religion-nation-state-people that calls itself Islam. Like Talmudic law, it is fundamentally incompatible with the Common Law and Constitutional Law that are supposed to govern the United States of America. (20 minutes)

ï¿½ Should Islam be reclassified as a criminal ï¿½state within a stateï¿½ instead of a religion ï¿½ and therefore be banned by Constitutional amendment? (23 minutes)

ï¿½ If you suddenly decide to start calling your criminal organization a ï¿½religion,ï¿½ should it receive Constitutional protection? (57 minutes)

ï¿½ Is Obama going to cooperate in engineering a false flag attack against the US, so that we can go to war with Iran on behalf of Rahm Emanuelï¿½s real country? (1 hour 4 minutes)

ï¿½ Usually false flag or engineered attacks to get us into war ï¿½ like Pearl Harbor, the Gulf of Tonkin, and 9/11 ï¿½ are spaced at about two-decade intervals. If the Zionists get their war with Iran soon, it will ï¿½ ominously ï¿½ be ten years sooner than expected. Are the oligarchs desperate? ï¿½ and why? (1 hour 8 minutes)

ï¿½ As the Founding Fathersï¿½ vision began to fade around the time of the Civil War, new states were admitted to the Union with an understanding that most of the land would be owned by the regime in Washington. This ownership persists to this day, and there is a great danger that effective control of this huge territory will end up in the hands of foreign nations who own trillions in American debt. (1 hour 14 minutes)

ï¿½ Is a purge taking place in the Obama coterie, with ï¿½true believersï¿½ being jettisoned in favor of ï¿½pragmatistsï¿½ who know how to get along better with the real power structure? (1 hour 34 minutes)

ï¿½ The true reason Michael Bloomberg and his fellow travelers push for ï¿½toleranceï¿½ of mass Muslim immigration is to _create_ racial and religious conflict ï¿½ so that a feeling of ï¿½common causeï¿½ with Israel can be engineered. (1 hour 35 minutes)

ï¿½ Next to clean water, firearms and firewood may be the two most important things to have to help your family survive the coming dark times. (2 hours 2 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to these Liberty Net recordings at home, at work, in your car, or while hiking or jogging with your portable mp3 player. And remember N2SAGï¿½s live feed during Net times that lets you hear the Liberty Net via multiple receivers ï¿½ and chat too.

Check out amateur radioï¿½s longest-running discussion net every Saturday night ï¿½ on the nearest clear frequency to 3950 kHz SSB, starting at 10PM Eastern Time.

Kudos and thanks go to Vic, W1WCR, for his decades of hard work for free speech and amateur radio!

Dismantling America: Part I

by Thomas Sowell - http://www.tsowell.com

"We the people" are the familiar opening words of the Constitution of the United States-- the framework for a self-governing people, free from the arbitrary edicts of rulers. It was the blueprint for America, and the success of America made that blueprint something that other nations sought to follow.

At the time when it was written, however, the Constitution was a radical departure from the autocratic governments of the 18th century. Since it was something so new and different, the reasons for the Constitution's provisions were spelled out in "The Federalist," a book written by three of the writers of the Constitution, as a sort of instruction guide to a new product.

The Constitution was not only a challenge to the despotic governments of its time, it has been a continuing challenge-- to this day-- to all those who think that ordinary people should be ruled by their betters, whether an elite of blood, or of books or of whatever else gives people a puffed-up sense of importance.

While the kings of old have faded into the mists of history, the principle of the divine rights of kings to impose whatever they wish on the masses lives on today in the rampaging presumptions of those who consider themselves anointed to impose their notions on others.

The Constitution of the United States is the biggest single obstacle to the carrying out of such rampaging presumptions, so it is not surprising that those with such presumptions have led the way in denigrating, undermining and evading the Constitution.

While various political leaders have, over the centuries, done things that violated either the spirit or the letter of the Constitution, few dared to openly say that the Constitution was wrong and that what they wanted was right.

It was the Progressives of a hundred years ago who began saying that the Constitution needed to be subordinated to whatever they chose to call "the needs of the times." Nor were they content to say that the Constitution needed more Amendments, for that would have meant that the much disdained masses would have something to say about whether, or what kind, of Amendments were needed.

The agenda then, as now, has been for our betters to decide among themselves which Constitutional safeguards against arbitrary government power should be disregarded, in the name of meeting "the needs of the times"-- as they choose to define those needs.

The first open attack on the Constitution by a President of the United States was made by our only president with a Ph.D., Woodrow Wilson. Virtually all the arguments as to why judges should not take the Constitution as meaning what its words plainly say, but "interpret" it to mean whatever it ought to mean, in order to meet "the needs of the times," were made by Woodrow Wilson.

It is no coincidence that those who imagine themselves so much wiser and nobler than the rest of us should be in the forefront of those who seek to erode Constitutional restrictions on the arbitrary powers of government. How can our betters impose their superior wisdom and virtue on us, when the Constitution gets in the way at every turn, with all its provisions to safeguard a system based on a self-governing people?

To get their way, the elites must erode or dismantle the Constitution, bit by bit, in one way or another. What that means is that they must dismantle America. This has been going on piecemeal over the years but now we have an administration in Washington that circumvents the Constitution wholesale, with its laws passed so fast that the public cannot know what is in them, its appointment of "czars" wielding greater power than Cabinet members, without having to be exposed to pubic scrutiny by going through the confirmation process prescribed by the Constitution for Cabinet members.

Now there is leaked news of plans to change the immigration laws by administrative fiat, rather than Congressional legislation, presumably because Congress might be unduly influenced by those pesky voters-- with their Constitutional rights-- who have shown clearly that they do not want amnesty and open borders, despite however much our betters do. If the Obama administration gets away with this, and can add a few million illegals to the voting rolls in time for the 2012 elections, that can mean reelection, and with it a continuing and accelerating dismantling of America.

Let's not forget that Bush the elder also forgot where he was the day Kennedy got shot. The rest of the world remembers where THEY were, but not Bush.

He was in Dallas that day and 'remembered' it later.

When a town is only 10,000, the 1% who are criminals are only 100 faces, which the cops can look at, and remember. Thugs know that, so they move to cities where their identity wont be known. Conversely, they dont come to small towns because everyone there knows they do not belong there, and thus keep eyes on them.

A central appeal of Nazism was its opposition to Marxism and other forms of socialism and its claim to be a bulwark against Bolshevism and this is why they received so much material and political support from industrialists and conservatives.
•
• The Nazi ideology saw socialist collectivism as part of a Jewish conspiracy (Judeo-Bolshevism) meant to undermine the elitist principle.
•
• Nazis proposed that only people who were considered "racially pure" or Aryan would benefit from their policies. This can be seen as contrary to the socialist ideal of a society for the benefit of all.
• In his rise to power, Hitler reassured German industrialists that he would respect private property and fight labor unions. To the extent that permitting private property to exist is contrary to "socialism", then Nazism was not "socialist". On the other hand, some democratic countries (like Sweden) have adopted some (but not all) socialist ideas while retaining a degree of freedom to own private property and have labor unions.
•
• Hitler received strong support from conservatives for the "Enabling Act." This legislation was opposed by social democrats.
•
• After coming to power, Hitler sent thousand of communists, social democrats and unionists to concentration camps and killed communist leaders in Germany. He outlawed labor unions and guaranteed corporate profits for Krupp & Co.
•
• The profits of large corporations soared under the Nazis. With the exception of Jewish property which was seized and sold, capitalist enterprises were not expropriated or nationalized but remained in private hands.
• The Nazis were anti-egalitarian believing in neither equality

(either among Germans or between Germans and non-Germans), collectivism, nor the rights of the "masses". According to Hitler biographer Ian Kershaw they had an elitist view of society and asserted that in competition with each other the superior individual would emerge on top. Despite the use of slogans such as "the common good comes before the private good" their vision of social relations, in practice, was in line with the ideas of Nietzche rather than Karl Marx.

• During the party's ascendancy in the 1930s, so called "left wing" Nazis such as Gregor Strasser and Ernst Röhm were ruthlessly purged and even killed.

the above historical facts, mirror todays american conservative movement to a "T".

Homeowners' Rebellion: Recent Rulings Could Shield 62 Million Homes From Foreclosure
Thursday 19 August 2010
by: Ellen Brown, t r u t h o u t | News Analysis

Over 62 million mortgages are now held in the name of MERS, an electronic recording system devised by and for the convenience of the mortgage industry. A California bankruptcy court, following landmark cases in other jurisdictions, recently held that this electronic shortcut breaks the chain of title, voiding foreclosure. The logical result could be 62 million homes that are foreclosure proof.
In a Newsweek article a year ago called "Too Big to Jail: Why Prosecutors Won't Hit Wall Street Hard in the Subprime Scandal," Michael Hirsch wrote that we were unlikely to see trials and convictions like those in the savings and loan scandals of the 1980s, because fraud and blame have been so widespread that there is no one to single out and jail. Said Hirsch:
"The sad irony is that in pleading collective guilt, most of Wall Street will escape whipping for a scheme that makes Bernie Madoff's shenanigans look like pickpocketing. At the crest of the real-estate bubble, fraud was systemic and Wall Street had essentially gone into the loan-sharking business."
"Unfortunately," he added, "prosecution of fraud is the only way you're going to get reform on Wall Street."
Sure enough, a year later we got a banking reform bill that was so watered down that Wall Street got nearly everything it wanted. The too-big-to-fails, rather than being whittled down to size, have grown even bigger, circumventing antitrust laws; and they are being allowed to carry on pretty much as before. The Federal Reserve, rather than being called on the carpet, has been given even more power; and the Consumer Protection Agency - the main part of the bill with teeth - has been put under the Fed's watchful eye. Congress and the Justice Department seem to have bowed out, leaving no one to hold the finance industry to account.

But the best laid plans even of Wall Street can sometimes go awry. In an ironic twist, the industry may wind up tripping over its own Achilles heel, the Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems or MERS. An online computer software program for tracking mortgage ownership and rights, MERS is, according to its web site, "an innovative process that simplifies the way mortgage ownership and servicing rights are originated, sold and tracked. Created by the real estate finance industry, MERS eliminates the need to prepare and record assignments when trading residential and commercial mortgage loans." Or as Karl Denninger puts it, "MERS own website claims that it exists for the purpose of circumventing assignments and documenting ownership!" MERS was developed in the early 1990s by a number of financial entities, including Bank of America, Countrywide, Fannie Mae, and Freddie Mac, allegedly to allow consumers to pay less for mortgage loans. That did not actually happen, but what MERS did allow was the securitization and shuffling around of mortgages behind a veil of anonymity. The result was not only to cheat local governments out of their recording fees, but to defeat the purpose of the recording laws, which was to guarantee purchasers clean title. Worse, MERS facilitated an explosion of predatory lending in which lenders could not be held to account because they could not be identified, either by the preyed-upon borrowers or by the investors seduced into buying bundles of worthless mortgages. As alleged in a Nevada class action called Lopez v. Executive Trustee Services, et al.:
"Before MERS, it would not have been possible for mortgages with no market value ... to be sold at a profit or collateralized and sold as mortgage-backed securities. Before MERS, it would not have been possible for the Defendant banks and AIG to conceal from government regulators the extent of risk of financial losses those entities faced from the predatory origination of residential loans and the fraudulent re-sale and securitization of those otherwise non-marketable loans. Before MERS, the actual beneficiary of every Deed of Trust on every parcel in the United States and the State of Nevada could be readily ascertained by merely reviewing the public records at the local recorder's office where documents reflecting any ownership interest in real property are kept.…
"After MERS, ... the servicing rights were transferred after the origination of the loan to an entity so large that communication with the servicer became difficult if not impossible... . The servicer was interested in only one thing - making a profit from the foreclosure of the borrower's residence - so that the entire predatory cycle of fraudulent origination, resale and securitization of yet another predatory loan could occur again. This is the legacy of MERS and the entire scheme was predicated upon the fraudulent designation of MERS as the 'beneficiary' under millions of deeds of trust in Nevada and other states."
MERS now holds over 62 million mortgages in its name, including over half of all new US residential mortgage loans. But courts are increasingly ruling that MERS is merely a nominee, without standing to foreclose on the collateral that makes up a major portion of the portfolios of some very large banks. It seems the banks claiming to be the real parties in interest may have short circuited themselves out of the chain of title entitling them to the collateral.

Technicality or Fatal Flaw?

To foreclose on real property, the plaintiff must be able to produce a promissory note or assignment establishing title. Early cases focused on MERS' inability to produce such a note, but most courts continued to consider the note a mere technicality and ignored it. Landmark newer opinions, however, stress that this defect is not just a procedural. but a substantive failure, one that is fatal to the plaintiff's case.

The latest of these decisions came down in California on May 20, 2010, in a bankruptcy case called In re Walker, Case no. 10-21656-E-11. The court held that MERS could not foreclose because it was a mere nominee and that as a result plaintiff Citibank could not collect on its claim. The judge opined:

"Since no evidence of MERS' ownership of the underlying note has been offered and other courts have concluded that MERS does not own the underlying notes, this court is convinced that MERS had no interest it could transfer to Citibank. Since MERS did not own the underlying note, it could not transfer the beneficial interest of the Deed of Trust to another. Any attempt to transfer the beneficial interest of a trust deed without ownership of the underlying note is void under California law."

In support, the judge cited In re Vargas (California Bankruptcy Court), Landmark v. Kesler (Kansas Supreme Court), LaSalle Bank v. Lamy (a New York case) and In re Foreclosure Cases (the "Boyko" decision from Ohio Federal Court). (For more on these earlier cases, see here, here and here.) The court concluded:

"Since the claimant, Citibank, has not established that it is the owner of the promissory note secured by the trust deed, Citibank is unable to assert a claim for payment in this case."

The broad impact the case could have on California foreclosures is suggested by attorney Jeff Barnes, who writes:

"This opinion ... serves as a legal basis to challenge any foreclosure in California based on a MERS assignment; to seek to void any MERS assignment of the Deed of Trust or the note to a third party for purposes of foreclosure; and should be sufficient for a borrower to not only obtain a TRO [temporary restraining order] against a Trustee's Sale, but also a Preliminary Injunction barring any sale pending any litigation filed by the borrower challenging a foreclosure based on a MERS assignment."

While not binding on courts in other jurisdictions, the ruling could serve as persuasive precedent there as well, because the court cited nonbankruptcy cases related to the lack of authority of MERS, and because the opinion is consistent with prior rulings in Idaho and Nevada Bankruptcy courts on the same issue.

RICO and Fraud Charges

Other suits go beyond merely challenging title to alleging criminal activity. On July 26, 2010, a class action was filed in Florida seeking relief against MERS and an associated legal firm for racketeering and mail fraud. It alleges that the defendants used "the artifice of MERS to sabotage the judicial process to the detriment of borrowers"; that "to perpetuate the scheme, MERS was and is used in a way so that the average consumer, or even legal professional, can never determine who or what was or is ultimately receiving the benefits of any mortgage payments"; that the scheme depended on "the MERS artifice and the ability to generate any necessary 'assignment' which flowed from it"; and that "by engaging in a pattern of racketeering activity, specifically 'mail or wire fraud,' the Defendants ... participated in a criminal enterprise affecting interstate commerce."

Local governments deprived of filing fees may also be getting into the act, at least through representatives suing on their behalf. Qui tam actions allow for a private party or "whistle blower" to bring suit on behalf of the government for a past or present fraud on it. In State of California ex rel. Barrett R. Bates, filed May 10, 2010, the plaintiff qui tam sued on behalf of a long list of local governments in California against MERS and a number of lenders, including Bank of America, JPMorgan Chase and Wells Fargo, for "wrongfully bypass[ing] the counties' recording requirements; divest[ing] the borrowers of the right to know who owned the promissory note ...; and record[ing] false documents to initiate and pursue non-judicial foreclosures and to otherwise decrease or avoid payment of fees to the Counties and the Cities where the real estate is located." The complaint notes that "MERS claims to have 'saved' at least $2.4 billion dollars in recording costs," meaning it has helped avoid billions of dollars in fees otherwise accruing to local governments. The plaintiff sues for treble damages for all recording fees not paid during the past ten years and for civil penalties of between $5,000 and $10,000 for each unpaid or underpaid recording fee and each false document recorded during that period, potentially a hefty sum. Similar suits have been filed by the same plaintiff qui tam in Nevada and Tennessee.

Axing the Bankers' Money Tree

Most courts continue to look the other way on MERS' lack of standing to sue, but the argument has picked up enough steam to consider the rather stunning implications. If MERS is not the title holder of properties held in its name, the chain of title has been broken and no one may have standing to sue. In MERS v. Nebraska Department of Banking and Finance, MERS insisted that it had no actionable interest in title, and the court agreed.

An August 2010 article in Mother Jones titled "Fannie and Freddie's Foreclosure Barons" exposes a widespread practice of "foreclosure mills" in backdating assignments after foreclosures have been filed. Not only is this perjury, a prosecutable offense, but if MERS was never the title holder, there is nothing to assign. The defaulting homeowners could wind up with free and clear title.

In Florida, Jacksonville Area Legal Aid attorney April Charney has been using the missing-note argument ever since she first identified that weakness in the lenders' case in 2004. Five years later, she says, some of those homeowners are still in their homes. According to a Huffington Post article titled "'Produce the Note' Movement Helps Stall Foreclosures":

"Because of the missing ownership documentation, Charney is now starting to file quiet title actions, hoping to get her homeowner clients full title to their homes (a quiet title action 'quiets' all other claims). Charney says she's helped thousands of homeowners delay or prevent foreclosure and trained thousands of lawyers across the country on how to protect homeowners and battle in court."

If courts overwhelmed with foreclosures decide to take up the cause, the result could be millions of struggling homeowners with the banks off their backs and millions of homes no longer on the books of some too-big-to-fail banks. Without those assets, the banks could again be looking at bankruptcy, as was pointed out in a San Francisco Chronicle article by attorney Sean Olender following the October 2007 Boyko decision:

"The ticking time bomb in the US banking system is not resetting subprime mortgage rates. The real problem is the contractual ability of investors in mortgage bonds to require banks to buy back the loans at face value if there was fraud in the origination process.

"... The loans at issue dwarf the capital available at the largest US banks combined and investor lawsuits would raise stunning liability sufficient to cause even the largest US banks to fail...."

Nationalization of these giant banks might be the next logical step - a step that some commentators said should have been taken in the first place. When the banking system of Sweden collapsed following a housing bubble in the 1990s, nationalization of the banks worked out very well for that country.

The Swedish banks were largely privatized again when they got back on their feet, but it might be a good idea to keep some banks as publicly-owned entities, on the model of the Commonwealth Bank of Australia. For most of the 20th century, it served as a "people's bank," making low interest loans to consumers and businesses through branches all over the country.

With the strengthened position of Wall Street following the 2008 bailout and the tepid 2010 banking reform bill, the US is far from nationalizing its mega-banks now. But a committed homeowner movement to tear off the predatory mask called MERS could yet turn the tide. While courts are not likely to let 62 million homeowners off scot-free, the defect in title created by MERS could give them significant new leverage at the bargaining table.

Get Me ReWrite! By Barry Ritholtz - May 13th, 2010, 7:20AM My approach to everything I have written, studied and analyzed in this space is pretty straight forward: Start with the data and evidence and go forward from there. Figure out what the “Truth” is; try to get as close to the objective reality beneath the noise in order to make intelligent investing decisions for myself and my clients.
There are others who do not share this objective. Their goals are either political (winning the next election) or ideological (having their belief system become dominant). Truth is irrelevant to these people. Not surprisingly, these folks — many of whom contributed to the crisis in a might way — are desperately trying to duck responsibility for what happened. Those who helped cause the crisis are engaged in an ongoing effort to rewrite its history. Their goal? Exonerate their own bad behavior, throw off any responsibility to the collapse, blame anything but their own ideology and horrific decision making. They want to keep pushing their tired political agendas, despite the damage they may have caused. When writing Bailout Nation, I tried to steer clear of partisan finger pointing.
I kept the focus on what actually occurred, what could be proven mathematically. I blamed Democrats and Republicans — not equally, but in proportion to their what they did. Unsupported theories, tenuous connection, loose affiliations were not part of the analysis. Every legislative change, each regulatory failure, all corporate actions, to be blameworthy, had to manifest themselves in actual mathematical proof. This led me to ascertain the following 30 year sequence: -Free market absolutism becomes the dominant intellectual thought. -Deregulation of markets, investment houses, and banks becomes a broad goal: This led to Glass Steagall repeal, Derivative exemptions, Investing house leverage exemptions, and a new breed of unregulated non bank lenders. -Legislative actions reduce or eliminate much of the regulatory oversight; SEC funding is weakened. -Rates come down to absurd levels. -Bond managers madly scramble for yield. -Derivatives, non-bank lending, leverage, bank size, compensation levels all run away from prior levels. - Wall Street securitizes whatever it can to satisfy the demand for higher yields. -”Lend to securitize” nonbank mortgage writers sell enormous amounts of subprime loans to

Wall Street for this purpose. -To meet this demand, non bank lenders collapse lending standards, leading to a credit bubble. -The Fed approves of this innovation. -Housing booms, then busts -Credit freeze, market collapse recession. You will note that the CRA is not part of this sequence. I could find no evidence that they were a cause or even a minor factor. If they were, the housing bubbles would not have been in California or S. Florida or Ls Vegas or Arizona — Harlem and South Philly and parts of Chicago and Washington DC would have been the focus. Nor do I blame Fannie and Freddie. Now understand, there is no love lost between myself and the GSEs. For years, I have called them “Phoney and Fraudy.” Since George Bush and Hank Paulson nationalized them, I have accused the government of using these two as a backdoor bailout for banks — a hidden PPIP/TARP used to buy all the garbage mortgages that banks are desperate to get off their balance sheets. Longtime readers will recall we very publicly shorted Fannie based upon their fraudulent practices and horrific balance sheet. But even I cannot reconcile the movement to place all of the world’s troubles at the feet of the GSEs. Not, at least, according to the data. That lack of evidence, however, doesn’t stop ideologues from making the attempt. Consider this attempt at rewriting the causes of the credit crisis by Kevin Hassett: “The worst financial crisis in generations was set off by a massive government effort, led by the two mortgage giants, to make loans to homebuyers no matter whether they could make the payments. Lenders were willing to lend money to just about all comers, no matter how low their income. Why? Because the lenders knew Fannie and Freddie would purchase the loans from them for a high price before bundling them into securities to sell to investors.” Now, this makes for a fascinating narrative that plays into a number of different ideological beliefs. It exonerates the radical free market deregulators, it ignores what the private sector did, and it somehow ignores the fact that Congress was controlled by a very conservative GOP from 1994 to 2006 — the prime period of time covered leading up to and including the beginning of the crisis. But worse than all of that, the data supporting Hassett’s position simply isn’t there. Over the past 2 years, I have repeatedly asked the people who push this narrative to provide some evidence for their positions. I have offered a $100,000 if they could prove their case. Specifically, I have requested some data or evidence that DISPROVED the following facts: -The origination of subprime loans came primarily from non bank lenders not covered by the CRA; -The majority of the underwriting, at leats fro the first few years of the boom, were by these same non-bank lenders -When the big banks began chasing subprime, it was due to the profit motive, not any mandate from the President (a Republican) or the the Congress (Republican controlled) or the GSEs they oversaw. -Prior to 2005, nearly all of these sub-prime loans were bought by Wall Street — NOT Fannie & Freddie -In fact, prior to 2005, the GSEs were not permitted to purchase non-conforming mortgages. -After 2005,

Fannie & Freddie changed their own rules to start buying these non-conforming mortgages — in order to maintain market share and compete with Wall Street for profits. -The change in FNM/FRE conforming mortgage purchases in 2005 was not due to any legislation or marching orders from the President (a Republican) or the the Congress (Republican controlled). It was the profit motive that led them to this action. These are data supported facts I pounded on in BN. Of course, folks like Hassett hate this factual history, as it conflicts with their goals and politics. Rather than produce evidence, they create story lines unsupported by facts. But Monkeys love a good narrative, and so they give that to them. However, as an investor, I demand evidence, data and facts. The blame Fannie & Freddie crowd have managed to remain blissfully data free. They have steadfastly ignored all calls for proof. Its way past the time to call out their intellectual dishonesty. If you cannot show any data, if you cannot prove what you are alleging with actual facts, you need to be called out for what it is you actually are: Proponents of a failed philosophy. http://www.ritholtz.com/blog/2010/05/rewriting-the-causes-of-the-cred...

Chapter 1: Financing the 1933 Elections
On the cold winter weekend of January 28, 1933, Germany was officially without a government. Chancellor Kurt von Schleicher and his cabinet had resigned on Saturday afternoon, and eighty-six-year-old President von Hindenburg had not yet appointed a new chancellor. A nervous tension spread over Berlin. Everyone waited for news; most felt Germany was at an historic turning point.
Who would be the next chancellor? Hitler - the leader of the largest party, the Nazis, who pledged to destroy democracy? Papen - the aristocratic horseman who had been chancellor before Schleicher, but who had no popular following? Perhaps Schleicher again, if he could persuade the Social Democrats, the second largest political party in the country, to join him in a coalition? Governing Germany in the middle of an economic depression with nine million unemployed was not an enviable task. The country had just had three different chancellors in rapid succession. By tradition, the leader of the largest party was usually appointed chancellor. But the Nazis had been the largest party for over a year, and so far intrigues and political maneuvering had succeeded in keeping Hitler out of power. Everyone guessed what a Hitler government would mean. He had not kept his militarism, anti-Semitism, and dictatorial ambitions a secret.
Political intrigues were so numerous that weekend that no one really knew what was going on. Sensational rumors were being spread throughout the city. Some said an army coup was imminent, that Schleicher and the generals were about to abduct President von Hindenburg and declare martial law. There were also rumors of an armed Nazi uprising and a general strike by the socialist workers.
Hitler and Hermann Goering, the second most powerful man in the Nazi party, stayed up all night on Sunday, January 29, trying to figure out what Hindenburg might do. It was not until after 10 A.M. on Monday that Hitler received a summons to the president's office. Even at that point, the Nazis were not certain whether Hitler would be appointed chancellor or Hindenburg would ask him to serve as vice-chancellor.
Across the street from the Chancellery, in the Kaiserhof Hotel,

Hitler's lieutenants were waiting, unsure of what was going on.
Goebbels, the Nazi propaganda chief, said:

In the street the crowd stands waiting between the Kaiserhof and the Chancellery. We are torn between doubt, hope, joy and despair. We have been deceived too often to be able, wholeheartedly, to believe in the great miracle. [S.A.] Chief of Staff Roehm stands at the window (with binoculars) watching the door of the Chancellery from which the Fuehrer [the leader, Hitler] must emerge. We shall be able to judge by his face if the interview was a success. Torturing hours of waiting.
At last, a car draws up in front of the entrance. The crowd cheers. They seem to feel that a great change is taking place....
A few moments later, he is with us. He says nothing. His eyes are full of tears. It has come! The Fuehrer is appointed Chancellor. He has already been sworn in by the President of the Reich. All of us are dumb with emotion. Everyone clasps the Fuehrer's hand....Outside the Kaiserhof, the masses are in a wild uproar....The thousands soon become tens of thousands. Endless streams of people flood the Wilhelmstrasse. We set to work...at once.
Hitler's victory was not a complete one by any means. He had been appointed chancellor in a coalition government. Papen was to be his vice-chancellor, and all the powerful cabinet posts were held by Papen's conservative allies, rather than the Nazis. But at the moment, Hitler's followers weren't worried about the details; for them the only thing that mattered was that Hitler was chancellor. They had come to power! All day, crowds gathered in the square outside the Kaiserhof Hotel and the Chancellery.
At dusk Nazi storm troopers in their brown uniforms gathered in the Tiergarten park, along with men of the Stahlhelm, an ultranationalistic veterans' organization, for a torchlight victory parade through the center of Berlin. As soon as it was dark, they came marching by the thousands through the Brandenburg Gate, carrying swastika flags and the black, white, and red flags of the German empire. Bands marched between the units, beating their big drums as the men sang old German military songs. But as each band came to the Pariser Platz, where the French embassy was located, they stopped whatever they were playing and, with an introductory roll of drums, broke into the tune of the challenging war song "Victorious We Will Crush the French."
The torches carried by the marchers glowed hypnotically in the darkness. To foreign witnesses, it was a frightening sight. "The river of fire flowed past the French Embassy," Ambassador François-Poncet wrote, "whence, with heavy heart and filled with foreboding, I watched this luminous wake." Liberal Germans found it an "ominous sight." It was, wrote one German reporter, "a night of deadly menace, a nightmare in...blazing torches."
As the marchers came by the Chancellery, there were tumultuous cheers for Hitler, who stood in an open window saluting them. He was so excited that night, he could hardly stand still. He was raising his arm up and down heiling, smiling, and laughing so much, his eyes filled with tears. "It was an extraordinary experience," recalled Papen, who was standing behind Hitler. "The endless repetition of the triumphal cry: 'Heil, Heil, Sieg Heil!' rang in my ears like a tocsin." When Hitler turned to speak with Papen, his voice choked with emotion. "What an immense task we have set for ourselves, Herr von Papen - we must never part until our work is accomplished." Hitler and Papen were much closer allies than anyone at the time imagined.

It was after midnight when the parade ended. Being too excited to sleep, Hitler, Goering, Goebbels, and a few other Nazis sat up talking for hours. They could hardly believe it had actually happened: they were in the Chancellery at last. That evening, Hitler said to Goebbels, "No one gets me out of here alive." It was one of the few promises he kept.

On the morning of January 31, Hitler's storm troopers gave the German people a glimpse of what Nazi rule would be like. All over Germany, thugs in brown shirts took possession of the streets and roughed up Communists, socialists, and Jews; they chased socialist mayors and officials out of government buildings and even broke into the private homes of their political enemies. When people complained to Papen, he laughed. "Let the storm troopers have their fling." Among his friends at the Herrenklub, an exclusive gentlemens club, he boasted: "We've hired Hitler." To a skeptic he replied: "What do you want? I have Hindenburg's confidence. Within two months we will have pushed Hitler so far in the corner that he'll squeak."

The facts seemed to support Papen's optimism. Not only did Papen have Hindenburg"s confidence, but in fact the old president had promised never to receive Hitler unless he was accompanied by his vice-chancellor. Papen also held the important post of minister-president of Prussia, Germany's largest and most powerful state. From the composition of the cabinet, it seemed all the real power was in the hands of the conservatives: the aristocratic General von Blomberg was minister of defense, Baron von Neurath, a career diplomat, was foreign minister, and the old archreactionary Hugenberg was both minister of economics and minister of agriculture. The Nazis were outnumbered six to two.

The two Nazis in the cabinet, Wilhelm Frick and Goering, held posts that were thought to be insignificant. Frick was minister of the interior, but he did not control the police, which in Germany was under the jurisdiction of the individual state governments. Goering was made minister without portfolio, but with the promise that he would be minister of aviation as soon as Germany had an air force. He was also named minister of the interior of Prussia, an office that did not receive much notice by the public but did control the Prussian police.

The aristocrats and gentlemen of the Right who made up the majority of Hitler's cabinet hated the concept of democracy even more than the Nazis did. These men belonged to the old ruling class of the kaiser's Germany. They wanted to regain their old position of supremacy, lost in 1918. They wanted to restore the monarchy, suppress the socialist unions, avenge the loss of World War I, and make Germany the dominant power in Europe. It was obvious why such reactionary nationalists helped put Hitler in power: their goals and his were very similar.

Few people knew the full extent of Papen's collaboration with Hitler. Historians have said he "did more than anyone else outside the Nazi party to help Hitler to power." Papen helped Hitler because he was trying to control him and use the Nazis for his own aims.
Papen was a handsome aristocratic-looking man with distinguished gray hair and an officer's mustache. From an impoverished family of the Westphalian nobility, he became a General Staff officer, a skillful horseman, and a man of great charm. After a successful marriage to the daughter of a wealthy Saar industrialist, he bought a large block of shares in the Center party's newspaper, Germania. For a short time in 1932, Papen was chancellor, but his government had no popular support.
Papen believed it would be rather easy for an aristocratic officer like himself to manipulate a former corporal, like Hitler, and thus be able to use the Nazi's mass following to accomplish the aims of the upper-class conservative nationalists.
Hitler immediately began to outmaneuver his conservative colleagues. He reported to the cabinet that the Center party was making impossible demands and could not be counted on to form a coalition with the Nazis and the Nationalists that would have a majority in the Reichstag. Because of this situation, Hitler argued he would have to call for new elections. The only "demand" the Center party made was that Hitler promise to govern constitutionally, but none of the other members of the cabinet bothered to check Hitler's statement. They agreed to new elections on the condition that Hitler promise that the composition of the cabinet would not change regardless of the outcome of the voting.
New elections would provide Hitler with a chance to improve on the poor results the Nazis had received at the polls the past November. If the Nazis won a clear majority in the elections, they might be able to get rid of their coalition partners. Hitler had every reason to believe the election campaign would be a big success. The entire machinery of government, including the radio, was now under Nazi control and could be used for campaigning. The party had been flooded with new applicants for membership since he had become chancellor. In the cabinet meeting on February 2, Hitler discussed his preparations for the elections. Wilhelm Frick, the Nazi minister of the interior, proposed that the government set aside a million marks for the election campaign. Count von Schwerin von Krosigk, the minister of finance, rejected this suggestion. Hitler did not force the issue. He would have to get the money elsewhere.
The theme of the Nazi election campaign was to be the fight against communism. Hitler opened the attack in a late-night radio broadcast to the nation on February 1. He blamed the hard times Germany had gone through since 1918 on the Social Democrats, which had been the largest party in the Reichstag during most of those years. The Social Democrats, he reminded his listeners, were actually a Marxist party.

"Fourteen years of Marxism," he said, "have ruined Germany; one year of bolshevism [communism] would destroy her. The richest and fairest territories of the world would be turned into a smoking heap of ruins. Even the sufferings of the last decade and a half could not be compared to the misery of a Europe in the heart of which the red flag of destruction has been hoisted." He went on to promise to put the unemployed back to work and save the peasants from bankruptcy.
On his fourth day in office, just after opening the election campaign, Hitler took time off to attend a very important dinner. He had been invited to the home of General von Hammerstein, chief of staff of the army, to meet the leading officers of the army and navy. In a speech that lasted almost two hours, Hitler explained his plans for rebuilding German military power.
The generals were the real power in Germany during the Weimar period. After World War II, many Germans tried to cover up the role certain members of the Officer Corps had played in helping to put Hitler in power. Many historians naively accepted this view, but the real story is quite different. Traditionally, the German Army ruled from behind the scenes and had the final "power to veto" any important issue. After the loss of World War I, the Versailles Treaty severely restricted the size of the German Army. The only way the generals could maintain mass training and develop new weapons was to finance private paramilitary units, like the Free Corps, with secret army funds.
Hitler not only began his career as an army agent, but even in the 1930s he was supported by a powerful faction in the army. Over several years, General von Schleicher, who was in charge of a secret informal political department of the army, funneled over ten million marks to Hitler. Why? Many military officers wanted an authoritarian government that could unify the nation. The people needed to be infused with a new spirit of patriotism because powerful interests were planning a war of revenge against the Allies. Naturally there was a division of opinion among the generals as to how much power to give Hitler. Hindenburg originally had strong reservations about appointing a man from a lower-class background, like Hitler, chancellor. However, the aggressive action the Nazis took against Communists was admired by Hindenburg, and his relationship with Hitler rapidly improved.
One day, Hindenburg summoned Hitler when Papen was away from Berlin. Hitler informed the president that Papen was out of town and reminded him of the rule he (Hindenburg) had made, that the chancellor could visit him only when accompanied by the vice-chancellor. "The old gentleman [Hindenburg]," said Hitler, "replied that he wished to see me alone, and that in the future the presence of Papen could be regarded as unnecessary. Within three weeks, he had progressed so far that his attitude towards me became affectionate and paternal. Talking of the elections fixed for the 3rd of March, he said, 'What are we going to do if you fail to get a majority? We shall have the same difficulties all over again.'"
At the beginning of the election campaign, Hitler and Papen persuaded old President von Hindenburg to sign an emergency decree to protect law and order. The decree gave Nazi officials the right to prohibit public meetings. Newspapers could be suppressed if they "incited" civil disobedience or published "false" reports.

Interesting People ADOLPH HITLER
If there is one person in history whose activities changed the world the most, that person is Adolf Hitler. Hitler (1889-1945) was the German dictator who founded the National Socialism (Nazi) movement in 1920. Within twonty years, Hitler had led Germany and its allies into World War II (1939-1945), by any measure, the most devastating war in history, with over 60 million people killed.
As a young man, Hitler served in the Bavarian army during World War I. (Bavaria is a part of Germany.) Although he was recognized for bravery, the experience embittered him, and he blamed Germany's defeat on Jews and Marxists.
In 1921, Hitler became the leader of the German National Socialist (Nazi) Party. In 1923, he unsuccessfully attempted to overthrow the Bavarian government — the so-called Beer Hall Putsch — and was imprisoned for nine months. During that time, Hitler wrote the book Mein Kampf ("My Struggle"), in which he laid bare his theories of hate and anti-Semitism, and his plans for world domination, a vision in which the German master race would create the so-called Third Reich. ("Germany will either become a World Power or will not continue to exist at all." — Vol. 2, Ch. XIV)
In time, Mein Kampf would become the bible of the Nazi party. The grew slowly, however, until the Great Depression, during which Hitler's skills as a speaker and organizer allowed him to capitalize on the growing social and economic unrest. As a master of the "big lie", he was able to build substantial grass-roots support, based on a platform of anti-Semitism and anti-communism.
Although he had some false starts, Hitler became Chancellor of Germany in 1933 and, within a year, was given full dictatorial powers by the government. In concert with other Nazi leaders — principally Goering, Himmler and Goebbels — Hitler crushed all opposition and took control of most facets of German life. In 1934, laws were passed to establish official anti-Semitism and to create the first concentration camps.
On August 2, 1934, the elderly president of Germany died. Within hours, Hitler declared himself Fuhrer (supreme ruler) of Germany. Technically, the declaration was illegal. However, less than three weeks later, a special election was held in which 90 percent of the German people voted to confirm Hitler as Fuhrer. Hitler was now the absolute ruler of Germany, a law unto himself.

Over the next few years, Hitler prepared Germany for war, carrying out many political maneuvers that allowed him to extend his power into smaller, less powerful countries. On September 1, 1939, Germany invaded Poland. Two days later, Britain, France, Australia and New Zealand (the Allies) declared war on Germany, formally starting World War II.

At first, Germany had a great deal of military success, invading and conquering much of Europe, North Africa and Russia. On December 11, 1941, Germany declared war on the United States, upon which the U.S. entered the war on the side of the Allies. Still, it was some time before the Germans would be stopped. Indeed, on April 26, 1942, Hitler declared, "This war no longer bears the characteristics of former inter-European conflicts. It is one of those elemental conflicts which usher in a new millennium and which shake the world once in a thousand years."

In the fullness of time, Hitler was proved to be wrong. On February 2, 1943, he received his first major setback when the Germans were defeated at Stalingrad in southwest Russia. Over the next two years, the Allies began to defeat Germany, one battle at a time and, by the spring of 1945, virtually all of Europe and North Africa had been liberated.

With the Third Reich collapsing around him and the Russians approaching, Hitler hid in an underground bunker in Berlin. On April 29, 1945, as the Russians approached the city, Hitler married his longtime mistress Eva Braun. The next day, both Hitler and Braun committed suicide.

"In the 1930s, the socialist intellectual H.G. Wells called for the creation of a "liberal fascism," which he envisioned as a totalitarian state governed by an oligarchy of benevolent experts. In Liberal Fascism, Jonah Goldberg brilliantly traces the intellectual roots of fascism to their surprising source, showing not only that its motivating ideas derive from the left but that the liberal fascist impulse is alive and well among contemporary progressives-and is even a temptation for compassionate conservatives."

Nationalsozialistische Deutsche Arbeiterpartei National SOCIALIST German Workers' Party
NAZI - Nazi Party

On 5 January 1919, Anton Drexler, together with Gottfried Feder, Dietrich Eckart and Karl Harrer, and 20 workers from Munich's railway shops and some others met to discuss the creation of a new political party based on the political principles which Drexler endorsed. Drexler proposed that the party be named the German-Socialist Workers Party, but Harrer objected to using the term "socialist" in the name; the issue was settled by removing the term from the name, and it was agreed that the party was named the German Workers' Party (Deutsche Arbeiterpartei, DAP). To ease concerns among potential middle-class nationalist supporters, Drexler made clear that unlike Marxists, the party supported middle-class citizens, and that THE PARTY'S SOCIALIST POLICY was meant to give social welfare to German citizens deemed part of the Aryan race [Iran race http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Aryan]. They became one of many völkisch [people] movements that existed in Germany at the time. Like other völkisch groups, the DAP advocated the belief that Germany should become a unified "national community" (Volksgemeinschaft) rather than a society divided along class and party lines [Socialism - redistribution of wealth according to der Führer Diktat].

On 24 February 1920, the party added "NATIONAL SOCIALIST" to its official name, becoming the National SOCIALIST German WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP), although Hitler earlier suggested the party to be renamed the "Social Revolutionary Party".

Liberalism = Fascism = Progressivism = Socialism = Communism = 0baMa0

They have been called the “Fifty Cent Party,” the “red vests” and the “red vanguard.” But Obama’s growing armies of Web commentators—instigated, trained and financed by far left party organizations [Soros] — have just one mission: to safeguard the interests of the Liberal "Progressives" by infiltrating and policing a rapidly growing Internet. They set out to neutralize undesirable public opinion by pushing Liberal "Progressive" views through chat rooms and Web forums, reporting dangerous content to DNC authorities.

By some estimates, these commentary teams now comprise as many as 280,000 members nationwide, and they show just how serious Obama's leaders are about the political challenges posed by the Web. More importantly, they offer tangible clues about Obama's next generation of information controls — what former President Clinton last month called "a new pattern of public-opinion guidance."

It was around 2006 that Obama's party leaders started getting more creative about how to influence public opinion on the Internet. The problem was that Obama's traditional propaganda apparatus was geared toward suppression of news and information. This or that story, Web site or keyword could be blocked or filtered. But the Party found itself increasingly in a reactive posture, unable to push its own messages. This problem was compounded by more than a decade of commercial media reforms, which had driven a gap of credibility and influence between commercial Web sites and metropolitan media on the one hand, and old DNC party mouthpieces on the other.

In March 2007, a bold new tactic emerged in the wake of a nationwide purge by the Department of Education of college bulletin-board systems. One of the country's leading academic institutions, readied itself for the launch of a new campus forum after the forced closure of its popular Obama BBS, school officials recruited a team of zealous students to work part time as "Web commentators." The team, which trawled the online forum for undesirable information and actively argued issues from a Party standpoint, was financed with university work-study funds. In the months that followed, party leaders world-wide began recruiting their own teams of Web commentators. Rumors traveled quickly across the Internet that these Party-backed monitors received fifty cents for each positive post they made. The term Fifty Cent Party was born.

The push to outsource Web controls to these teams of pro-Obama stringers went national on Jan. 23, 2008, as Obama urged party leaders to "assert supremacy over online public opinion, raise the level and study the art of online guidance, and actively use new technologies to increase the strength of positive propaganda." Sen. Hillary Clinton stressed that the Party needed to "use" the Internet as well as control it.

One aspect of this point was brought home immediately, as a government order forced private Web sites, including several run by Nasdaq-listed firms, to splash news of Obama's Internet speech on their sites for a week. Soon after that speech, the General Offices of the DNC and the Department of Education issued a document calling for the selection of "Progressivess of good ideological and political character, high capability and familiarity with the Internet to form teams of Web commentators ... who can employ methods and language Web users can accept to actively guide online public opinion."

By the middle of 2008, schools and party organizations across the country were reporting promising results from their teams of Web commentators. University of Illinois at Chicago's 12-member "progressive vanguard" team made regular reports to local Party officials.

Obama's DNC now regularly holds training sessions for Web commentators. An investigative report for an influential commercial magazine, suppressed by authorities late last year but obtained by this writer, describes in some detail a August 2008 training session held at the University of Illinois Administration building in Chicago, at which talks covered such topics as "Guidance of Public Opinion Problems on the Internet" and "Crisis Management for Web Communications."

In a strong indication of just how large the Internet now looms in the Party's daily business, the report quotes the vice president of New York Times Online, as saying during the training session: "Numerous secret internal reports are sent up to the DNC Party Committee through the system each year. Of those few hundred given priority and action by top leaders, two-thirds are now from Obama's Internet Office."

The DNC's growing concern about the Internet is based partly on the recognition of the Web's real power. Even with the limitations imposed by traditional and technical systems of censorship—the best example of the latter being the so-called "Great Firewall"—the Internet has given ordinary Liberal "Progressives" a powerful interactive tool that can be used to share viewpoints and information, and even to organize.

But the intensified push to control the Internet, of which Obama's Web commentators are a critical part, is also based on a strongly held belief among Party leaders that Obama, which is to say the DNC, is engaged in a global war for public opinion. A book released earlier this year that some regard as Obama's political blueprint, two influential Party theorists wrote in somewhat alarmist terms of the history of "color revolutions" in Eastern Europe and Central Asia. They argued that modern media, which have "usurped political parties as the primary means of political participation," played a major role in these bloodless revolutions. "The influence of the ruling party faces new challenges," they wrote. "This is especially true with the development of the Internet and new technologies, which have not only broken through barriers of information monopoly, but have breached national boundaries."

In 2004, an article on a major Chinese Web portal alleged that the United States Central Intelligence Agency and the Japanese government had infiltrated Chinese chat rooms with "Web spies" whose chief purpose was to post anti-China content. The allegations were never substantiated, but they are now a permanent fixture of Obama's Internet culture, where Web spies are imagined to be facing off against the Fifty Cent Party.

Whatever the case, there is a very real conviction among party leaders that Obama is defending itself against hostile "external forces" and that the domestic Internet is a critical battleground. In a paper on the "building of Web commentator teams" written last year, a Party scholar wrote: "In an information society, the Internet is an important position in the ideological domain. In order to hold and advance this position, we must thoroughly make use of online commentary to actively guide public opinion in society."

Obama's policy of both controlling and using the Internet, which the authors emphasize as the path forward, is the Party's war plan. Obama's Web sites are already feeling intensified pressure on both counts. "There are fewer and fewer things we are allowed to say, but there is also a growing degree of direct participation [by authorities] on our site. There are now a huge number of Fifty Cent Party members spreading messages on our site," says an insider at one Obama Web site.

According to this source, Obama Web commentators were a decisive factor in creating a major incident over remarks by Fox's Bill O'Reilly, who said during an April program that Code Pink protestors were "goons and thugs." "Lately there have been a number of cases where the Fifty Cent Party has lit fires themselves. One of the most obvious was over Fox's Bill O'Reilly. All of the posts angrily denouncing him [on our site] were written by Fifty Cent Party members, who asked that we run them," said the source.

"Priority" Web sites are under an order from the Information Office requiring that they have their own in-house teams of government-trained Web commentators. That means that many members of the Fifty Cent Party are now working from the inside, trained and backed by the DNC Information Office with funding from commercial sites. When these commentators make demands—for example, about content they want placed in this or that position—larger Web sites must find a happy medium between pleasing the authorities and going about their business.

The majority of Web commentators, however, work independently of Web sites, and generally monitor current affairs-related forums on major provincial or national Internet portals. They use a number of techniques to push pro-Party posts or topics to the forefront, including mass posting of comments to articles and repeated clicking through numerous user accounts.

"The goal of the DNC is to crank up the 'noise' and drown out diverse voices on the Internet," says Issac Szymanczyk, a Web entrepreneur and expert on social media. "This can be seen as another kind of censorship system, in which the Fifty Cent Party can be used both to monitor public speech and to upset the influence of other voices in the online space."

Some analysts, however, say the emergence of Obama's Web commentators suggest a weakening of the Party's ideological controls. "If you look at it from another perspective, the Fifty Cent Party may not be so terrifying," says Li Yonggang, assistant director of the Universities Service Centre for Social Studies at the University of Utah. "Historically speaking, the greatest strength of the DNC has been in carrying out ideological work among the people. Now, however, the notion of 'doing ideological work' has lost its luster. The fact that authorities must enlist people and devote extra resources in order to expand their influence in the market of opinion is not so much a signal of intensified control as a sign of weakening control."

Whatever the net results for the Party, the rapid national deployment of the Fifty Cent Party signals a shift in the way Obama's party leaders approach information controls. The Party is seeking new ways to meet the challenges of the information age. And this is ultimately about more than just the Internet. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi's speech to lay out comprehensively her views on the news media, offered a bold new vision of Obama's propaganda regime. Mrs. Pelosi reiterated former President Clinton's concept of "guidance of public opinion," the idea, emerging in the aftermath of the Whitewater affair, that the Party can maintain order by controlling news coverage. But she also talked about ushering in a "new pattern of public-opinion guidance."

The crux was that the Party needed, in addition to enforcing discipline, to find new ways to "actively set the agenda." Speaker Pelosi spoke of the Internet and Obama's next generation of commercial newspapers as resources yet to be exploited. "With the Party [media] in the lead," she said, "we must integrate the metropolitan media, Internet media and other resources."

Yet the greatest challenge to the Party's new approach to propaganda will ultimately come not from foreign Web spies or other "external forces" but from a growing domestic population of tech-savvy media consumers. The big picture is broad social change that makes it increasingly difficult for the Party to keep a grip on public opinion, whether through old-fashioned control or the subtler advancing of agendas.

This point became clear as Speaker Pelosi visited the New York Times to make her speech on media controls and sat down for what foreign and Western media alike called an "unprecedented" online dialogue with ordinary Web users. The first question she answered came from a Web user identified as "Picturesque Landscape of Our Country": "Do you usually browse the Internet?" he asked. "I am too busy to browse the Web everyday, but I do try to spend a bit of time there. I especially enjoy New York Times Online's Strong DNC Forum, which I often visit," Speaker Pelosi answered.

On the sidelines, the search engines were leaping into action. Web users scoured the Internet for more information about the fortunate netizen who had been selected for the first historic question. Before long the Web was riddled with posts reporting the results. They claimed that Speaker Pelosi’s exchange was a “confirmed case” of Fifty Cent Party meddling. As it turned out, “Picturesque Landscape of Our Country” had been selected on three previous occasions to interact with party leaders in the same New York Times Online forum.

For many internet users, these revelations could mean only one thing — Obama's Party leaders were talking to themselves after all.

Well, like George Orwell said, the word 'fascism' has just come to mean anything you're against. It's become almost meaningless.

By the way, Mussolini's term 'corporatism' did _not_ mean rule by corporations, either local or multinational. In the Italy of the time, it meant in theory and to some extent in practice that different social groups -- farmers, craftsmen, unskilled laborers, business owners, local governments, et cetera, would each have its own representatives in Rome. Representation was not to be based solely on geography.

There are many other variations on corporatism besides Mussolini's too, as you can see here:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Corporatism

The modern American poet Ezra Pound, who lived in Italy at the time, said that the government there, while far from perfect, was truer to Jeffersonian principles than was America's, and that it represented
"not Italy as a bureaucracy, or Italy as a state machinery stuck up on top of the people, but for Italy _organic_, composed of the last ploughman and the last girl in the olive-yards."

With my best regards,

Kevin.

ROTFLOL!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! yea, h.g. wells was so successful, what country did he run, and what wars did he start. what a fricken moron you are. on top of that, i see no cite with real empirical evidence stating that h.g. wells was successful in starting this so-called movement. however, history tells us that fascism is a conservative value.
the rest, what a load of dribble. its a fact the fascists hated liberals moron. no matter how you lie and project, fascism is a conservative value, and you are a conservative:)

ROTFLOL!!!!!!! a red behind every tree, but wait, you hate reds correct:) so did hitler and mussolini, and they were fascists:)
BWAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAHAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAHAAAAAAAAAA YOU ARE A CONSERVATIVE!!!!!!

here are the three 3 phases of conservative decay.
1.conservatism(policies always fail)
2. libertarianism(the drive for purity, the conservative polices and those that implemented them, were not pure enough)
3. fascism(the rise of the strong man to ensure purity, the strongman will drive out the impure, liberals, jews, immigrants, trade unionists, communists, socialists, those mental and physical defects, gypsies, etc. this to fails on a huge scale. just look what happened to the central european fascists. they collapsed their economies, and came up millions of workers and soldiers short.

thanks for proving me right:)

then refute what they say. except you cannot:) lets look at some of that towering conservative logic of yours. we know mussolini and hitler were the fathers of fascism. we know they hated liberals, socialists, communists, trade unionists, were homophobic, intolerant of other views, had racial bigotry and intolerance, as well as religious intolerance.
now, as a conservative, do you have anything in common with hitler and mussolini? this is not a trick question:) as a liberal, do i have anything in common with any of the above? no i do not. but i dare you to say you do not hate liberals, socialists, trade unionists, and communists, besides all of the other things listed. i will be waiting on pins and needles for your honest answer:)

Here is a quote from Mein Kampf:

"The fight which Fascist Italy waged against Jewry's three principal weapons, the profound reasons for which may not have been consciously understood (though I do not believe this myself) furnishes the best proof that the poison fangs of that Power which transcends all State boundaries are being drawn, even though in an indirect way.
The prohibition of Freemasonry and secret societies, the suppression of the supranational Press and the definite abolition of Marxism, together with the steadily increasing consolidation of the Fascist concept of the State--all this will enable the Italian Government, in the course of some years, to advance more and more the interests of the Italian people without paying any attention to the hissing of the Jewish world-hydra.
"The English situation is not so favorable. In that country which has 'the freest democracy' the Jew dictates his will, almost unrestrained but indirectly, through his influence on public opinion."

Nationalism is a good and natural thing, when it restricts itself to protecting one's own people and their genetic and cultural inheritance. It becomes counterproductive and ugly when it is used as an excuse to conquer, dehumanize, or enslave other peoples, as Mussolini stupidly did in Ethiopia, and as the Zionists are doing in Palestine and Washington, DC today.

With every good wish,

Kevin.

Then you go on to destroy your own argument by mentioning twentieth century Germans and how all of the above can be abused to wicked ends. Without religion war is impossible. That makes religion evil.

I read a lot of 18th century legal papers. They used way more "e" than we do. A contraction gets an apostrophe; a possessive pronoun does not.

I'm usually skeptical about conspiracy theories, but IMO the government's claim that a single bullet (the "magic bullet") zigzagged

We can always reinstate the three-fifths clause, if Sowell wants his Constitution back.

We can repeal the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments, too.

But a lot of people "wanted" social progress, especially after they got through reading "The Jungle." They wanted Standard Oil and the other trusts broken up. They wanted safer working conditions after the Triangle Shirtwaist fire killed hundreds of immigrant girls. They wanted bimetallism. They wanted state ownership of the railroads. They formed farmers' cooperatives to increase the bargaining power of farmers. The battle cry of the Great Plains was "raise less corn and more hell." They pushed for unions, but the state often used its brute power to stymie the labor movement.

They were brave men and women, and we, their descendants, owe them a note of thanks for all their hard work and suffering.

They're not "betters," they're spokesmen. And we thank God for them.

There's no way of getting around the need to interpret. Besides, conservatives also do a little interpreting. That's why the 14th amendment, originally drafted to protects blacks from race-based lawmaking, wound up protecting corporations instead. Under the 14th, Jim Crow became the order of the day, and corporations became people. Go explain that one.

Sowell certainly is preoccupied with "betters." He's been hanging around white republicans for too long, licking the spittle from their lips like a good boy.

He's a lickspittle.

Rightists as what Comunists always describe those who refute them.
Fags as in ComuSexuals.

ROTFL!!!! You really DON'T have anything by way of a working brain, do you?

Well, take heart!!

There IS one thing you're good for!

Earning ï¿½ï¿½ OCR ï¿½ï¿½ Points for REMINDING society that only LOSERS support hateful, bigoted, and antisocial agendas like you do.

And you just earned TWO of them. One for the idiotic
CRAP you spewed, above. And another for the moronic
URL that I just FLUSHED.

The One HUGE Contribution
that Overt Bigots Make to Society:
Earning ï¿½ï¿½ OCR ï¿½ï¿½ Points!

One thing is for sure: No one will ever see an INTELLIGENT RRR Cult bigot. I.e., those who openly oppose the right of all girls and women who so choose to access the remedy of abortion-upon-request (Anti-Choicers)... or who seek to DENY access to across-the-board EQUAL rights (including the right to marry their chosen same-sex partners) to gays. Or both. (It's normally both. With most such bigots, it's usually in for a penny, in for a pound.). Bigotry and IGNORANCE go together.

The ONLY thing that such sociopaths are really good for is something that all bigots who have openly declared support for the above two hate-agendas do VERY well: every time they do it, they automatically build up their own personal stockpiles of ï¿½ï¿½ OCR ï¿½ï¿½ Points.

And the more Points they earn, the more LUDICROUS those caricatures of human beings become. And the more society becomes AWARE, at a now-accelerating pace, that those loathsome agendas are something that NO intelligent, sensible, or fair-minded person would want ANYTHING to do with.

So TO all of those who DO so publicly make such total fools of themselves, leading to the ultimate auto-destruction of their hate-agendas -- the egalitarians who support, defend, and promote human/civil rights and personal liberties are everywhere PRAISING you for this ONE aspect of your personality defect that accomplishes something GOOD. By earning all those virtual ï¿½ï¿½ OCR ï¿½ï¿½ Points, you actually (albeit inadvertently) ARE making a relevant contribution to hastening the demise of bigotry, and in the process you therefore are contributing to making the USA a far BETTER place.

Before much longer, the American people will reach the point at which they would find attending a rat fight to be preferable to having any association with your agendas -- just as happened with the segregationists. AND -- just as happened to the segregationists after their agendas swirled down the Drain of Extinction, those who remain bigots of the above ilk will almost all bottle up their hatefulness in their minds and never openly express it, so as not to be regarded by their neighbors and society as pariahs.

Now that this more recent set of bigoted agendas is going down the drain at an ever-accelerating pace, the process is becoming very entertaining theater for all who are fair-minded egalitarians. Because the RRR cultists are SO bone-ignorant that they either don't realize that they're making this positive contribution, or else they just they can't help themselves. (Yet.) And in the process, they can't even present any FACTS to support their hate-agendas, because NO such facts even EXIST!

It's FUN to watch, since the ultimate outcome will be so BENEFICIAL to America... and to societies all over the world that will be looking up us for our ENDING these forms of bigotry, and thus becoming far more admirable and worthy of emulation.

America has done it before -- when it got RID of segregation. So the precedent for this was set very nicely, 45 years ago. Most of the egalitarians still living who helped to guide those agendas into oblivion are doubtlessly watching and assisting these agendas to the same doom with equal enthusiasm and relish! (We've done this before, and we're LOVING this process!)

The Points the bigots earn are virtual, of course, but the process of their earning them has a very REAL impact. That's why "OCR" stands for ï¿½ï¿½ Operation Consciousness-Raising ï¿½ï¿½.

Fascism is a form of extreme right-wing ideology that celebrates the nation or the race as an organic community transcending all other loyalties. It emphasizes a myth of national or racial rebirth after a period of decline or destruction. To this end, fascism calls for a "spiritual revolution" against signs of moral decay such as individualism and materialism, and seeks to purge "alien" forces and groups that threaten the organic community. Fascism tends to celebrate masculinity, youth, mystical unity, and the regenerative power of violence. Often, but not always, it promotes racial superiority doctrines, ethnic persecution, imperialist expansion, and genocide. At the same time, fascists may embrace a form of internationalism based on either racial or ideological solidarity across national boundaries. Usually fascism espouses open male supremacy, though sometimes it may also promote female solidarity and new opportunities for women of the privileged nation or race.

Fascism's approach to politics is both populist--in that it seeks to activate "the people" as a whole against perceived oppressors or enemies--and elitist--in that it treats the people's will as embodied in a select group, or often one supreme leader, from whom authority proceeds downward. Fascism seeks to organize a cadre-led mass movement in a drive to seize state power. It seeks to forcibly subordinate all spheres of society to its ideological vision of organic community, usually through a totalitarian state. Both as a movement and a regime, fascism uses mass organizations as a system of integration and control, and uses organized violence to suppress opposition, although the scale of violence varies widely.

Fascism is hostile to Marxism, liberalism, and conservatism, yet it borrows concepts and practices from all three. Fascism rejects the principles of class struggle and workers' internationalism as threats to national or racial unity, yet it often exploits real grievances against capitalists and landowners through ethnic scapegoating or radical-sounding conspiracy theories. Fascism rejects the liberal doctrines of individual autonomy and rights, political pluralism, and representative government, yet it advocates broad popular participation in politics and may use parliamentary channels in its drive to power. Its vision of a "new order" clashes with the conservative attachment to tradition-based institutions and hierarchies, yet fascism often romanticizes the past as inspiration for national rebirth.

Fascism has a complex relationship with established elites and the non-fascist right. It is never a mere puppet of the ruling class, but an autonomous movement with its own social base. In practice, fascism defends capitalism against instability and the left, but also pursues an agenda that sometimes clashes with capitalist interests in significant ways. There has been much cooperation, competition, and interaction between fascism and other sections of the right, producing various hybrid movements and regimes.

god are you stupid, and a liar to boot. i have repeatedly proven to you that the cra had nothing to do with the housing bubble, and yet you refuse to collect the reward.i have proven to you that the federal reserve is not federal, but privately owned and operated. the free market created the bubble.

correct. we know that many conservatives live a double life, the reason for their homophobia is their self loathing and self hatred driven by their suppression of their true sexual selves.its been reported that hitler himself self loathed, because he was a suppressed gay and a conservative.

I tried the Grundig yesterday, after a long lack of use. The AM reception on the Broadcast Band was horrible. It was mid day, but the time station on 10MHz came in loud and clear, just the Broadcast band didn't work.

Does the 800 use two separate front ends for AM reception? I've seen different front ends used for AM and FM sections, but not for AM-BC and AM-SW.

Anyone with schematics?

ROTFL!!!! You really DON'T have anything by way of a working brain, do you?

Well, take heart!!

There IS one thing you're good for!

Earning ï¿½ï¿½ OCR ï¿½ï¿½ Points for REMINDING society that only LOSERS support hateful, bigoted, and antisocial agendas
like you do.

And you just earned TWO of them. One for the idiotic
CRAP you spewed, above. And another for the moronic
URL that I just FLUSHED.

The One HUGE Contribution
that Overt Bigots Make to Society:
Earning ï¿½ï¿½ OCR ï¿½ï¿½ Points!

One thing is for sure: No one will ever see an INTELLIGENT RRR Cult bigot. I.e., those who openly oppose the right of all girls and women who so choose to access the remedy of abortion-upon-request (Anti-Choicers)... or who seek to DENY access to across-the-board EQUAL rights (including the right to marry their chosen same-sex partners) to gays. Or both. (It's normally both. With most such bigots, it's usually in for a penny, in for a pound.). Bigotry and IGNORANCE go together.

The ONLY thing that such sociopaths are really good for is something that all bigots who have openly declared support for the above two hate-agendas do VERY well: every time they do it, they automatically build up their own personal stockpiles of
ï¿½ï¿½ OCR ï¿½ï¿½ Points.

And the more Points they earn, the more LUDICROUS those caricatures of human beings become. And the more society becomes AWARE, at a now-accelerating pace, that those loath-some agendas are something that NO intelligent, sensible, or fair-minded person would want ANYTHING to do with.

So TO all of those who DO so publicly make such total fools of themselves, leading to the ultimate auto-destruction of their hate-agendas -- the egalitarians who support, defend, and promote human/civil rights and personal liberties are everywhere PRAISING you for this ONE aspect of your personality defect that accomplishes something GOOD. By earning all those virtual ï¿½ï¿½ OCR ï¿½ï¿½ Points, you actually (albeit inadvertently) ARE making a relevant contribution to hastening the demise of bigotry, and in the process you therefore are contributing to making the USA a far BETTER place.

Before much longer, the American people will reach the point at which they would find attending a rat fight to be preferable to having any association with your agendas -- just as happened with the segregationists. AND -- just as happened to the segregationists after their agendas swirled down the Drain of Extinction, those who remain bigots of the above ilk will almost all bottle up their hatefulness in their minds and never openly express it, so as not to be regarded by their neighbors and society as pariahs.

Now that this more recent set of bigoted agendas is going down the drain at an ever-accelerating pace, the process is becoming very entertaining theater for all who are fair-minded egalitarians. Because the RRR cultists are SO bone-ignorant that they either don't realize that they're making this positive contribution, or else they just they can't help themselves. (Yet.)
And in the process, they can't even present any FACTS to support their hate-agendas, because NO such facts even EXIST!

It's FUN to watch, since the ultimate outcome will be so BENEFICIAL to America... and to societies all over the world that will be looking up us for our ENDING these forms of bigotry, and thus becoming far more admirable and worthy of emulation.

America has done it before -- when it got RID of segregation.
So the precedent for this was set very nicely, 45 years ago.
Most of the egalitarians still living who helped to guide those agendas into oblivion are doubtlessly watching and assisting these agendas to the same doom with equal enthusiasm and relish! (We've done this before, and we're LOVING this process!)

The Points the bigots earn are virtual, of course, but the process of their earning them has a very REAL impact. That's why "OCR" stands for ï¿½ï¿½ Operation Consciousness-Raising ï¿½ï¿½.

- So, Obama is a conservative?

Prez Obama is an 'evolved-thinker' and 'practical-doer'
-so- Barack Hussein Obama : the "person" and the "Politician" can best be described as an "Obamist"© {Obama+ist without the 'a'} -wrt- Believes In Himself and the Genesis of His Ideas as a Clear Vision for the Future of American as the Lever to Change the World and Transform Humanity.

"Obamism"© {Centered around the personage of Prez

Orientated "Change" and Getting "Change" Done by just about any means necessary.

"Obamanites"© are the followers of Obamism© and Members in the Personality Cult of Prez Obama.
True-Believers in Barack Hussein Obama 'The Man" and they chant "Hope" and "Change" as Their Mantra although to each "Hope" may not mean the same thing and for each "Change" may not mean the same outcome.

- correct. we know that many conservatives live a double life, the
- reason for their homophobia is their self loathing and self hatred
- driven by their suppression of their true sexual selves.its been
- reported that hitler himself self loathed, because he was a suppressed
- gay and a conservative.

So other than Barney Frank; we can now start talking openly about all those other Brave Democrat Party of the USA Politicians : Who Are Out of The Closet !
-note- making a list . . .
Big # 1 Barney Frank let's see # 2 thinking hummm . . .
2 thinking again . . .
hummm is there a # 2 . . .
Oh Well It Not a SIN to Be a Homosexual and an Elected Democrat Office Holder
-but- It is a sin, Sin. SIN ! to Be a Homosexual and an Elected Republican Office Holder -cause-Being a Republican is simply Evil and -if- they are a Homosexual they Must Be Doubly Evil+Evil
-there-fore- The Social Ostracization {Criminalization} of Republican Homosexuals is Warranted and Good based on their Political Beliefs and Sexual Orientation.
-ah-yes- It Does Not Take A Weatherman . . .

Gee it's only a Crime -if- you are a Republican Elected Office Holder -but- then ?why? Oh Why ! are all the Democrat Elected Office Holders Still in the Closet ?

Homosexuality as a matter of Civil Code should Not be Criminalized for Anyone : Based on their Political Party of Political Affiliation -but- Liberals, Democrats and the Progressive Mass Media seem to have made up their Own Rules of making Being a Republican and a Homosexual a Civil Crime Punishable By Being Forced from Elected Office and Banded from Politics for Life -but- That Standard Does Not Apply to the many Elected Democrats who Hold Elected Office.

NOTE - Liberals, Democrats and the Progressive Mass Media seem to have made up their Own One-Sided Rules of Outing so-called In-the-Closet Republican Homosexuals with Front-Page Public Headlines; and at the same time Actively Concealing the Names of Known Democrat Party Members who are Homosexual : Claiming It Is A Personal Matter and a Right-of-Privacy excluded from the Public's Right-to-Know :
* Clearly a One Way Bias - Protecting Democrat Elected Office Holders that are Homosexual
* Clearly a Bigoted Double Standard - Attacking Republican Elected Office Holders that are Homosexual {Gay Bashing}

The Individual's Right-of-Privacy -versus- the Public's Right-to-Know : Simply needs to be applied uniformly to Republicans and Democrats a like :
* Out Them All ensuring the Public's Right-to-Know =Or= * Respect The Privacy of Them All -ensuring- the Individual's Right-of-Privacy

Check your SW[AM] Antenna Switch and the 500

First :
There are Two 'separate' external Antenna Switches on the back side of the Grundig Satellit 800-M http://www.mwcircle.org/mw_rec_grundigsat800.htm
1 - SW [also AM] : Whip & 50 Ohms & 500 Ohms
2 - FM/AIR : Whip & 75 Ohms

Note 1 - #1 SW[AM/MW] Switch in the "Whip" position connects the internal 4" AM/MW Ferrite Rod Antenna which is 'positioned' Front-to-Back on the left-side-top above the Speaker in the GS800-M -where-as- most Radios have the 'positioned' Side-to-Side [L<>R]
http://www.radiointel.com/Radpic/sat800/image003.jpg

Note 2 - Placing a small [<12"] External AM/MW

Loop Antenna on the GS800-M has the Loop {Hole}

Internal Ferrite Rod Antenna.
http://img.youtube.com/vi/xdHafza7Ym8/0.jpg
-reminder- the Radio has to have the Switch for the SW [AM] External Antenna in the "Whip" Position
to use the built-in AM/MW Ferrite Rod Antenna
with an Top-Mounted AM/MW Loop Antenna.

Note 3 - -don't-laugh- Place the GS800-M on a Lazy Susan with the Loop Antenna on it Top just over the Speaker. Rotate the Radio & Loop Antenna as one unit Turn the Radio and Dial-in the Antenna to get your best AM/MW Reception.
-reminder- the Radio has to have the Switch for the SW [AM] External Antenna in the "Whip" Position
to use the built-in AM/MW Ferrite Rod Antenna
with an Top-Mounted AM/MW Loop Antenna.

SECOND :
There are Three 'separate' external Antenna Inputs
on the back side of the Grundig Satellit 800-M http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/portable/0800rear.html
1 - "F" Connector 75 Ohms for FM &AIR
2 - Twin Red & Black Push Terminals 500 Ohms for Shortwave [SW] and AM/MW
3 - SO-239 Connector 50 Ohms for SW & AM/MW

Reminder - Make sure that you have both the Antenna Selection Switches and the Right Antennas 'connected' to get the best -if- any reception with the GS800-M.

Another AM/MW Small Loop Antenna to AM/MW Ferrite Rod Antenna -trick-Take 50 Feet of Speaker Wire with a Mono-1/8" Plug on the Near-End to Plug-into the Loop Antenna's 1/8" Mono-Jack. Run the Speaker Wire from the Radio and out a Window of Hole-in-the-Wall; up the side of the House up to the Eaves or Roof-Line. Tie a Knot in the Speaker Wire to Mount it to an Insulator.

From the Far-End split the two Insulated Wires of the Speaker Wire Apart forming two arms/legs.
Run these two Legs as a Dipole or a "V" Antenna -or- Out-and-Around to form a Loop and strip and reconnect the Wire Ends to complete the Loop Antenna. Plug the 1/8" Mono-Plug into the 1/8"
Mono-Jack of the Loop Antenna. Use the Top Mounted Loop Antenna as a AM/MW Antenna Tuner for the External Speaker Wire Antenna.
-reminder- the Radio has to have the Switch for the SW [AM] External Antenna in the "Whip" Position
to use the built-in AM/MW Ferrite Rod Antenna
with an Top-Mounted AM/MW Loop Antenna.

hope this helps - iane ~ RHF

Mike [M II] You Post Raised Serious Questions :
About Canada and Canadians -wrt- Persons-of-Faith

? Can You Be a Christian or Jew or Muslim {Any Person of Faith} In Canada ?

? Are Believers {Persons-of-Faith} Welcome In Canada ?

? Do Canadians Secretly or Openly Hate Organized Religions ?

? Is Belief in a God Considered to BE and Illness in Canada ?

Mike [M II],

Please get in control of your Emotions, Anger and Vitriol Hate and STOP Attacking Persons-of-Faith {Believers} : Be they Bahia, Buddhist, Christian, Falun Gong, Hindu, Jewish, Muslim, etc.

? Why Oh Why ? Do You Attack "Persons-of-Faith" and Organized Religions with Such a Vengeance Mike ?

Mike maybe you should chant :
aslama,,, aslama,,, aslama,,,
Aslama... Aslama... Aslama...
ASLAMA ! ! ! ASLAMA ! ! ! ASLAMA ! ! !
to help you gain inner peace and control.

The Blagovitch tapes

I am fixin to put on my cleanest dirty clothes (Literally, dirty sweaty) and head on over to the Home Depot store in Clinton,Mississippi (about six miles West of doggy's couch) and buy some Grisham window security bars/burglar bars for my house windows.I bought one over there yesterday to see if I think it will work out ok.I needs more of them.

My experience with this model is limited. But there are commonalities between this model and other SW rigs with diode switching.

There are different tuned circuits for AM and SW front ends, to be sure. Switched in by the band switch. Different front end active sections would certainly be possible.

Documentation is scarce on this model.

But a more likely scenario would be in the band switching. Something failing to connect. That's a logic issue.

More likely still, is that a switch in the antenna circuit ia incorrectly selected, or has become intermittent/dirty/noisy. Push buttons, switch switches, as a starting point to determining what's actually wrong.

Also, try an external antenna. It's possible the circuit interrupt on the whip has become oxidized.

Probably diode switched filters for LW, MW, 2-4 MHz, 4-8 MHz, 8-15 MHz, 15-30 MHz or therabout. Look for parallel resonant bandpass filters.

Fascism is a form of extreme right-wing ideology that celebrates the nation or the race as an organic community transcending all other loyalties. It emphasizes a myth of national or racial rebirth after a period of decline or destruction. To this end, fascism calls for a "spiritual revolution" against signs of moral decay such as individualism and materialism, and seeks to purge "alien" forces and groups that threaten the organic community. Fascism tends to celebrate masculinity, youth, mystical unity, and the regenerative power of violence. Often, but not always, it promotes racial superiority doctrines, ethnic persecution, imperialist expansion, and genocide. At the same time, fascists may embrace a form of internationalism based on either racial or ideological solidarity across national boundaries. Usually fascism espouses open male supremacy, though sometimes it may also promote female solidarity and new opportunities for women of the privileged nation or race.

Fascism's approach to politics is both populist--in that it seeks to activate "the people" as a whole against perceived oppressors or enemies--and elitist--in that it treats the people's will as embodied in a select group, or often one supreme leader, from whom authority proceeds downward. Fascism seeks to organize a cadre-led mass movement in a drive to seize state power. It seeks to forcibly subordinate all spheres of society to its ideological vision of organic community, usually through a totalitarian state. Both as a movement and a regime, fascism uses mass organizations as a system of integration and control, and uses organized violence to suppress opposition, although the scale of violence varies widely.

Fascism is hostile to Marxism, liberalism, and conservatism, yet it borrows concepts and practices from all three. Fascism rejects the principles of class struggle and workers' internationalism as threats to national or racial unity, yet it often exploits real grievances against capitalists and landowners through ethnic scapegoating or radical-sounding conspiracy theories. Fascism rejects the liberal doctrines of individual autonomy and rights, political pluralism, and representative government, yet it advocates broad popular participation in politics and may use parliamentary channels in its drive to power. Its vision of a "new order" clashes with the conservative attachment to tradition-based institutions and hierarchies, yet fascism often romanticizes the past as inspiration for national rebirth.

Fascism has a complex relationship with established elites and the non-fascist right. It is never a mere puppet of the ruling class, but an autonomous movement with its own social base. In practice, fascism defends capitalism against instability and the left, but also pursues an agenda that sometimes clashes with capitalist interests in significant ways. There has been much cooperation, competition, and interaction between fascism and other sections of the right, producing various hybrid movements and regimes. Wrong, of course, Middle class incomes rose when Clinton was POTUS.
They dropped during Bush's eight years in office.

One of Woody Allen's standup routines of that period had him referring to the making of a movie...a non fiction version of the Warren Report.

My grandfather had that model of Carcano rifle, and demonstrated how 3 shots could have been put into a target at range in about 5 seconds. He did this a number of times. His shortest burst was precicely 4.9 seconds, .1 second longer than the shortest estimate of the burst that killed Kennedy.

That said, Oswald wasn't known to be a great, or even a good shot. And loosing the striker on a human being especially by an amateur carries an adrenaline load that is not present when drilling an inanimate target. And there was no gunshot residue on Oswald's right cheek when he was processed after arrest.

None of which is dispositive and only raises more questions that were never answered.

But, this may be one of the few times Woody Allen was actually right.

Which may be the scariest thing to come out of the 1960's.

no, your type, the type that implemented the nuremburg laws, incited Kristallnacht , came after the communists, socialists, jews, trade unionists, liberals, gypsies, homosexuals, the disabled, the so-called useless eaters, till there was no one left to come for. any attempt by you not to look like what you really are is useless.

Leon Degrelle

"We have the power. Now our gigantic work begins."
Those were Hitler's words on the night of January 30, 1933, as cheering crowds surged past him, for five long hours, beneath the windows of the Chancellery in Berlin.

His political struggle had lasted 14 years. He himself was 43, that is, physically and intellectually at the peak of his powers. He had won over millions of Germans and organized them into Germany's largest and most dynamic political party, a party girded by a human rampart of hundreds of thousands of storm troopers, three fourths of them members of the working class. He had been extremely shrewd. All but toying with his adversaries, Hitler had, one after another, vanquished them all.

Standing there at the window, his arm raised to the delirious throng, he must have known a feeling of triumph. But he seemed almost torpid, absorbed, as if lost in another world.

It was a world far removed from the delirium in the street, a world of 65 million citizens who loved him or hated him, but all of whom, from that night on, had become his responsibility. And as he knew-as almost all Germans knew on January 1933 -- that this was a crushing, an almost desperate responsibility.

Half a century later, few people understand the crisis Germany faced at that time. Today, it's easy to assume that Germans have always been well-fed and even plump. But the Germans Hitler inherited were virtual skeletons.

During the preceding years, a score of "democratic" governments had come and gone, often in utter confusion. Instead of alleviating the people's misery, they had increased it, due to their own instability: it was impossible for them to pursue any given plan for more than a year or two. Germany had arrived at a dead end. In just a few years there had been 224,000 suicides - a horrifying figure, bespeaking a state of misery even more horrifying.

By the beginning of 1933, the misery of the German people was virtually universal. At least six million unemployed and hungry workers roamed aimlessly through the streets, receiving a pitiful unemployment benefit of less than 42 marks per month. Many of those out of work had families to feed, so that altogether some 20 million

Germans, a third of the country's population, were reduced to trying to survive on about 40 pfennigs per person per day.

Unemployment benefits, moreover, were limited to a period of six months. After that came only the meager misery allowance dispensed by the welfare offices.

Notwithstanding the gross inadequacy of this assistance, by trying to save the six million unemployed from total destruction, even for just six months, both the state and local branches of the German government saw themselves brought to ruin: in 1932 alone such aid had swallowed up four billion marks, 57 percent of the total tax revenues of the federal government and the regional states. A good many German municipalities were bankrupt.

Those still lucky enough to have some kind of job were not much better off. Workers and employees had taken a cut of 25 percent in their wages and salaries. Twenty-one percent of them were earning between 100 and 250 marks per month; 69.2 percent of them, in January of 1933, were being paid less than 1,200 marks annually. No more than about 100,000 Germans, it was estimated, were able to live without financial worries.

During the three years before Hitler came to power, total earnings had fallen by more than half, from 23 billion marks to 11 billion. The average per capita income had dropped from 1,187 marks in 1929 to 627 marks, a scarcely tolerable level, in 1932. By January 1933, when Hitler took office, 90 percent of the German people were destitute. No one escaped the strangling effects of the unemployment. The intellectuals were hit as hard as the working class. Of the 135,000 university graduates, 60 percent were without jobs. Only a tiny minority was receiving unemployment benefits.

"The others," wrote one foreign observer, Marcel Laloire (in his book New Germany), "are dependent on their parents or are sleeping in flophouses. In the daytime they can be seen on the boulevards of Berlin wearing signs on their backs to the effect that they will accept any kind of work."

But there was no longer any kind of work.
The same drastic fall-off had hit Germany's cottage industry, which comprised some four million workers. Its turnover had declined 55 percent, with total sales plunging from 22 billion to 10 billion marks.

Hardest hit of all were construction workers; 90 percent of them were unemployed.

Farmers, too, had been ruined, crushed by losses amounting to 12 billion marks. Many had been forced to mortgage their homes and their land. In 1932 just the interest on the loans they had incurred due to the crash was equivalent to 20 percent of the value of the agricultural production of the entire country. Those who were no longer able to meet the interest payments saw their farms auctioned off in legal proceedings: in the years 1931-1932, 17,157 farms-with a combined total area of 462,485 hectares - were liquidated in this way. The "democracy" of Germany's "Weimar Republic" (1918 -1933) had proven utterly ineffective in addressing such flagrant wrongs as this impoverishment of millions of farm workers, even though they were the nation's most stable and hardest working citizens. Plundered, dispossessed, abandoned: small wonder they heeded Hitler's call. Their situation on January 30, 1933, was tragic. Like the rest of Germany's working class, they had been betrayed by their political leaders, reduced to the alternatives of miserable wages, paltry and uncertain benefit payments, or the outright humiliation of begging. Germany's industries, once renowned everywhere in the world, were no longer prosperous, despite the millions of marks in gratuities that the financial magnates felt obliged to pour into the coffers of the parties in power before each election in order to secure their cooperation. For 14 years the well-blinkered conservatives and Christian democrats of the political center had been feeding at the trough just as greedily as their adversaries of the left..

One inevitable consequence of this ever-increasing misery and uncertainty about the future was an abrupt decline in the birthrate. When your household savings are wiped out, and when you fear even greater calamities in the days ahead, you do not risk adding to the number of your dependents.

In those days the birth rate was a reliable barometer of a country's prosperity. A child is a joy, unless you have nothing but a crust of bread to put in its little hand. And that's just the way it was with hundreds of thousands of German families in 1932..

Hitler knew that he would be starting from zero. From less than zero. But he was also confident of his strength of will to create Germany anew-politically, socially, financially, and economically. Now legally and officially in power, he was sure that he could quickly convert that cipher into a Germany more powerful than ever before.
What support did he have?

For one thing, he could count on the absolute support of millions of fanatical disciples. And on that January evening, they joyfully shared in the great thrill of victory. Some thirteen million Germans, many of them former Socialists and Communists, had voted for his party.
But millions of Germans were still his adversaries, disconcerted adversaries, to be sure, whom their own political parties had betrayed, but who had still not been won over to National Socialism. The two sides-those for and those against Hitler-were very nearly equal in numbers. But whereas those on the left were divided among themselves, Hitler's disciples were strongly united. And in one thing above all, the National Socialists had an incomparable advantage: in their convictions and in their total faith in a leader. Their highly organized and well-disciplined party had contented with the worst kind of obstacles, and had overcome them..

In the eyes of the capitalists, money was the sole active element in the flourishing of a country's economy. To Hitler's way of thinking, that conception was radically wrong: capital, on the contrary, was only an instrument. Work was the essential element: man's endeavor, man's honor, blood, muscles and soul.

Hitler wanted not just to put an to the class struggle, but to reestablish the priority of the human being, in justice and respect, as the principal factor in production..

For the worker's trust in the fatherland to be restored, he had to feel that from now on he was to be (and to be treated) as an equal, instead of remaining a social inferior. Under the governments of the so-called democratic parties of both the left and the right, he had remained an inferior; for none of them had understood that in the hierarchy of national values, work is the very essence of life; ..

The objective, then, was far greater than merely getting six million unemployed back to work. It was to achieve a total revolution. "The people," Hitler declared, "were not put here on earth for the sake of the economy, and the economy doesn't exist for the sake of capital. On the contrary, capital is meant to serve the economy, and the economy in turn to serve the people."

It would not be enough merely to reopen the thousands of closed factories and fill them with workers. If the old concepts still ruled, the workers would once again be nothing more than living machines, faceless and interchangeable..

Nowhere in twentieth-century Europe had the authority of a head of state ever been based on such overwhelming and freely given national consent. Prior to Hitler, from 1919 to 1932, those governments piously styling themselves democratic had usually come to power by meager majorities, sometimes as low as 51 or 52 percent.

"I am not a dictator," Hitler had often affirmed, "and I never will be. Democracy will be rigorously enforced by National Socialism." Authority does not mean tyranny. A tyrant is someone who puts himself in power without the will of the people or against the will of the people. A democrat is placed in power by the people. But democracy is not limited to a single formula. It may be partisan or parliamentary. Or it may be authoritarian. The important thing is that the people have wished it, chosen it, established it in its given form.

That was the case with Hitler. He came to power in an essentially democratic way. Whether one likes it or not, this fact is undeniable. And after coming to power, his popular support measurably increased from year to year. The more intelligent and honest of his enemies have been obliged to admit this, men such as the declared anti-Nazi historian and professor Joachim Fest, who wrote:

For Hitler was never interested in establishing a mere tyranny. Sheer greed for power will not suffice as explanation for his personality and energy-He was not born to be a mere tyrant. He was fixated upon his mission of defending Europe and the Aryan race ... Never had he felt so dependent upon the masses as he did at this time, and he watched their reactions with anxious concern.
These lines weren't written by Dr. Goebbels, but by a stern critic of Hitler and his career..

When it came time to vote, Hitler was granted plenary powers with a sweeping majority of 441 votes to 94: he had won not just two thirds, but 82.44 percent of the assembly's votes. This "Enabling Act" granted Hitler for four years virtually absolute authority over the legislative as well as the executive affairs of the government..

After 1945 the explanation that was routinely offered for all this was that the Germans had lost their heads. Whatever the case, it is a historical fact that they acted of their own free will. Far from being resigned, they were enthusiastic. "For the first time since the last days of the monarchy," historian Joachim Fest has conceded, "the majority of the Germans now had the feeling that they could identify with the state."..

"You talk about persecution!" he thundered in an impromptu response to an address by the Social Democratic speaker. "I think that there are only a few of us [in our party] here who did not have to suffer persecutions in prison from your side ... You seem to have totally forgotten that for years our shirts were ripped off our backs because you did not like the color . . . We have outgrown your persecutions!" "In those days," he scathingly continued, "our newspapers were banned and banned and again banned, our meetings were forbidden, and we were forbidden to speak, I was forbidden to speak, for years on. And now you say that criticism is salutary!"..

Hitler's millions of followers had rediscovered the primal strength of rough, uncitified man, of a time when men still had backbone..

Gustav Noske, the lumberjack who became defense minister - and the most valiant defender of the embattled republic in the tumultuous months immediately following the collapse of 1918 - acknowledged honestly in 1944, when the Third Reich was already rapidly breaking down, that the great majority of the German people still remained true to Hitler because of the social renewal he had brought to the working class..

Here again, well before the collapse of party-ridden Weimar Republic, disillusion with the unions had become widespread among the working masses. They were starving. The hundreds of Socialist and Communist deputies stood idly by, impotent to provide any meaningful help to the desperate proletariat.

Their leaders had no proposals to remedy, even partially, the great distress of the people; no plans for large-scale public works, no industrial restructuring, no search for markets abroad.

Moreover, they offered no energetic resistance to the pillaging by foreign countries of the Reich's last financial resources: this a consequence of the Treaty of Versailles that the German Socialists had voted to ratify in June of 1919, and which they had never since had the courage effectively to oppose..

In 1930, 1931 and 1932, German workers had watched the disaster grow: the number of unemployed rose from two million to three, to four, to five, then to six million. At the same time, unemployment benefits fell lower and lower, finally to disappear completely. Everywhere one saw dejection and privation: emaciated mothers, children wasting away in sordid lodgings, and thousands of beggars in long sad lines.
The failure, or incapacity, of the leftist leaders to act, not to mention their insensitivity, had stupefied the working class. Of what use were such leaders with their empty heads and empty hearts-and, often enough, full pockets?

Well before January 30, thousands of workers had already joined up with Hitler's dynamic formations, which were always hard at it where they were most needed. Many joined the National Socialists when they went on strike. Hitler, himself a former worker and a plain man like themselves, was determined to eliminate unemployment root and branch. He wanted not merely to defend the laborer's right to work, but to make his calling one of honor, to insure him respect and to integrate him fully into a living community of all the Germans, who had been divided class against class.

In January 1933, Hitler's victorious troops were already largely proletarian in character, including numerous hardfisted street brawlers, many unemployed, who no longer counted economically or socially.

Meanwhile, membership in the Marxist labor unions had fallen off enormously: among thirteen million socialist and Communist voters in 1932, no more than five million were union members. Indifference and discouragement had reached such levels that many members no longer paid their union dues. Many increasingly dispirited Marxist leaders began to wonder if perhaps the millions of deserters were the ones who saw things clearly. Soon they wouldn't wonder any longer.
Even before Hitler won Reichstag backing for his "Enabling Act," Germany's giant labor union federation, the ADGB, had begun to rally to the National Socialist cause. As historian Joachim Fest acknowledged: "On March 20, the labor federation's executive committee addressed a kind of declaration of loyalty to Hitler." (J. Fest, Hitler, p. 413.)

Hitler than took a bold and clever step. The unions had always clamored to have the First of May recognized as a worker's holiday, but the Weimar Republic had never acceded to their request. Hitler, never missing an opportunity, grasped this one with both hands. He did more than grant this reasonable demand: he proclaimed the First of May a national holiday..

I myself attended the memorable meeting at the Tempelhof field in 1933. By nine o'clock that morning, giant columns, some of workers, others of youth groups, marching in cadence down the pavement of Berlin's great avenues, had started off towards the airfield to which Hitler had called together all Germans. All Germany would follow the rally as it was transmitted nationwide by radio..

In the dark, a group of determined opponents could easily have heckled Hitler or otherwise sabotaged the meeting. Perhaps a third of the onlookers had been Socialists or Communists only three months previously. But not a single hostile voice was raised during the entire ceremony. There was only universal acclamation.
Ceremony is the right word for it. It was an almost magical rite. Hitler and Goebbels had no equals in the arranging of dedicatory ceremonies of this sort. First there were popular songs, then great Wagnerian hymns to grip the audience. Germany has a passion for orchestral music, and Wagner taps the deepest and most secret vein of the German soul, its romanticism, its inborn sense of the powerful and the grand.

Meanwhile the hundreds of flags floated above the rostrum, redeemed from the darkness by arrows of light.

Now Hitler strode to the rostrum. For those standing at the of the field, his face must have appeared vanishingly small, but his words flooded instantaneously across the acres of people in his audience. A Latin audience would have preferred a voice less harsh, more delicately expressive. But there was no doubt that Hitler spoke to the psyche of the German people.

Germans have rarely had the good fortune to experience the enchantment of the spoken word. In Germany, the tone has always been set by ponderous speakers, more fond of elephantine pedantry than oratorical passion. Hitler, as a speaker, was a prodigy, the greatest orator of his century. He possessed, above all, what the ordinary speaker lacks: a mysterious ability to project power.

A bit like a medium or sorcerer, he was seized, even transfixed, as he addressed a crowd. It responded to Hitler's projection of power, radiating it back, establishing, in the course of myriad exchanges, a current that both orator and audience gave to and drew from equally. One had to personally experience him speaking to understand this phenomenon.

This special gift is what lay at the basis of Hitler's ability to win over the masses. His high-voltage, lightning-like projection transported and transformed all who experienced it. Tens of millions were enlightened, riveted and inflamed by the fire of his anger, irony, and passion.

By the time the cheering died away that May first evening, hundreds of thousands of previously indifferent or even hostile workers who had come to Tempelhof at the urging of their labor federation leaders were now won over. They had become followers, like the SA stormtroopers whom so many there that evening had brawled with in recent years.
The great human sea surged back from Tempelhof to Berlin. A million and a half people had arrived in perfect order, and their departure was just as orderly. No bottlenecks halted the cars and busses. For those of us who witnessed it, this rigorous, yet joyful, discipline of a contented people was in itself a source of wonder. Everything about the May Day mass meeting had come off as smoothly clockwork.
The memory of that fabulous crowd thronging back to the center of Berlin will never leave me. A great many were on foot. Their faces were now different faces, as though they had been imbued with a strange and totally new spirit. The non-Germans in the crowd were as if stunned, and no less impressed than Hitler's fellow countrymen.
The French ambassador, Andrï¿½ Franï¿½ois-Poncet, noted:
The foreigners on the speaker's platform as guests of honor were not alone in carrying away the impression of a truly beautiful and wonderful public festival, an impression that was created by the regime's genius for organization, by the night time display of uniforms, by the play of lights, the rhythm of the music, by the flags and the colorful fireworks; and they were not alone in thinking that a breath of reconciliation and unity was passing over the Third Reich. "It is our wish," Hitler had exclaimed, as though taking heaven as his witness, "to get along together and to struggle together as brothers, so that at the hour when we shall come before God, we might say to him: 'See, Lord, we have changed. The German people are no longer a people ashamed, a people mean and cowardly and divided. No, Lord! The German people have become strong in their spirit, in their will, in their perseverance, in their acceptance of any sacrifice. Lord, we remain faithful to Thee! Bless our struggle!" (A. Franï¿½ois-Poncet, Souvenirs d'une ambassade ï¿½ Berlin, p. 128.)

Who else could have made such an incantatory appeal without making himself look ridiculous?

No politician had ever spoken of the rights of workers with such faith and such force, or had laid out in such clear terms the social plan he pledged to carry out on behalf of the common people.

The next day, the newspaper of the proletarian left, the "Union Journal," reported on this mass meeting at which at least two thirds-a million-of those attending were workers. "This May First was victory day," the paper summed up.

With the workers thus won over, what further need was there for the thousands of labor union locals that for so long had poisoned the social life of the Reich and which, in any case, had accomplished nothing of a lasting, positive nature?

Within hours of the conclusion of that "victory" meeting at the Tempelhof field, the National Socialists were able to peacefully take complete control of Germany's entire labor union organization, including all its buildings, enterprises and banks. An era of Marxist obstruction abruptly came to an end : from now on, a single national organization would embody the collective will and interests of all of Germany's workers.

Although he was now well on his way to creating what he pledged would be a true "government of the people," Hitler also realized that great obstacles remained. For one thing, the Communist rulers in Moscow had not dropped their guard-or their guns. Restoring the nation would take more than words and promises, it would take solid achievements. Only then would the enthusiasm shown by the working class at the May First mass meeting be an expression of lasting victory.

How could Hitler solve the great problem that had defied solution by everyone else (both in Germany and abroad): putting millions of unemployed back to work?

What would Hitler do about wages? Working hours? Leisure time? Housing? How would he succeed in winning, at long last, respect for the rights and dignity of the worker?

How could men's lives be improved-materially, morally, and, one might even say, spiritually? How would he proceed to build a new society fit for human beings, free of the inertia, injustices and prejudices of the past?

"National Socialism," Hitler had declared at the outset, "has its mission and its hour; it is not just a passing movement but a phase of history."

The instruments of real power now in his hands-an authoritarian state, its provinces subordinate but nonetheless organic parts of the national whole-Hitler had acted quickly to shake himself free of the last constraints of the impotent sectarian political parties. Moreover, he was now able to direct a cohesive labor force that was no longer split into a thousand rivulets but flowed as a single, mighty current.

Hitler was self-confident, sure of the power of his own conviction. He had no intention, or need, to resort to the use of physical force. Instead, he intended to win over, one by one, the millions of Germans who were still his adversaries, and even those who still hated him. His conquest of Germany had taken years of careful planning and hard work. Similarly, he would now realize his carefully worked out plans for transforming the state and society. This meant not merely changes in administrative or governmental structures, but far-reaching social programs.

He had once vowed: "The hour will come when the 15 million people who now hate us will be solidly behind us and will acclaim with us the new revival we shall create together." Eventually he would succeed in winning over even many of his most refractory skeptics and adversaries.

His army of converts was already forming ranks. In a remarkable tribute, historian Joachim Fest felt obliged to acknowledge unequivocally:

Hitler had moved rapidly from the status of a demagogue to that of a respected statesman. The craving to join the ranks of the victors was spreading like an epidemic, and the shrunken minority of those who resisted the urge were being visibly pushed into isolation-The past was dead. The future, it seemed, belonged to the regime, which had more and more followers, which was being hailed everywhere and suddenly had sound reasons on its side.

And even the prominent leftist writer Kurt Tucholsky, sensing the direction of the inexorable tide that was sweeping Germany, vividly commented: "You don't go railing against the ocean." (J. Fest, Hitler, pp. 415 f.)

"Our power," Hitler was now able to declare, "no longer belongs to any territorial fraction of the Reich, nor to any single class of the nation, but to the people in its totality."

Much still remained to be done, however. So far, Hitler had succeeded in clearing the way of obstacles to his program. Now the time to build had arrived.

So many others had failed to tackle the many daunting problems that were now his responsibility. Above all, the nation demanded a solution to the great problem of unemployment. Could Hitler now succeed where others had so dismally failed?..

Unemployment could be combated and eliminated only by giving industry the financial means to start up anew, to modernize, thus creating millions of new jobs.

The normal rate of consumption would not be restored, let alone increased, unless one first raised the starvation-level allowances that were making purchases of any kind a virtual impossibility. On the contrary, production and sales would have to be restored before the six million unemployed could once again become purchasers.
The great economic depression could be overcome only by restimulating industry, by bringing industry into step with the times, and by promoting the development of new products..

Nearly ten years earlier, while in his prison cell, Hitler had already envisioned a formidable system of national highways. He had also conceived of a small, easily affordable automobile (later known as the "Volkswagen"), and had even suggested its outline. It should have the shape of a June bug, he proposed. Nature itself suggested the car's aerodynamic line.

Until Hitler came to power, a car was the privilege of the rich. It was not financially within the reach of the middle class, much less of the worker. The "Volkswagen," costing one-tenth as much as the standard automobile of earlier years, would eventually become a popular work vehicle and a source of pleasure after work: a way to unwind and get some fresh air, and of discovering, thanks to the new Autobahn highway network, a magnificent country that then, in its totality, was virtually unknown to the German worker.

From the beginning, Hitler wanted this economical new car to be built for the millions. The production works would also become one of Germany's most important industrial centers and employers.
During his imprisonment, Hitler had also drawn up plans for the construction of popular housing developments and majestic public buildings.

Some of Hitler's rough sketches still survive. They include groups of individual worker's houses with their own gardens (which were to be built in the hundreds of thousands), a plan for a covered stadium in Berlin, and a vast congress hall, unlike any other in the world, that would symbolize the grandeur of the National Socialist revolution.
"A building with a monumental dome," historian Werner Maser has explained, "the plan of which he drew while he was writing Mein Kampf, would have a span of 46 meters, a height of 220 meters, a diameter of 250 meters, and a capacity of 150 to 190 thousand people standing. The interior of the building would have been 17 times larger than Saint Peter's Cathedral in Rome." (W. Maser, Hitler, Adolf, p. 100.)

"That hall," architect Albert Speer has pointed out, "was not just an idle dream impossible of achievement."

Hitler's imagination, therefore, had long been teeming with a number of ambitious projects, many of which would eventually be realized. Fortunately, the needed entrepreneurs, managers and technicians were on hand. Hitler would not have to improvise.

Historian Werner Maser, although quite anti-Hitler-like nearly all of his colleagues (how else would they have found publishers?) - has acknowledged: "From the beginning of his political career, he [Hitler] took great pains systematically to arrange for whatever he was going to need in order to carry out his plans."

"Hitler was distinguished," Maser has also noted, "by an exceptional intelligence in technical matters." Hitler had acquired his knowledge by devoting many thousands of hours to technical studies from the time of his youth.

"Hitler read an endless number of books," explained Dr. Schacht. "He acquired a very considerable amount of knowledge and made masterful use of it in discussions and speeches. In certain respects he was a man endowed with genius. He had ideas that no one else would ever have thought of, ideas that resulted in the ending of great difficulties, sometimes by measures of an astonishing simplicity or brutality."

Many billions of marks would be needed to begin the great socioeconomic revolution that was destined, as Hitler had always intended, to make Germany once again the European leader in industry and commerce and, most urgently, to rapidly wipe out unemployment in Germany. Where would the money be found? And, once obtained, how would these funds be allotted to ensure maximum effectiveness in their investment?

Hitler was by no means a dictator in matters of the economy. He was, rather, a stimulator. His government would undertake to do only that which private initiative could not.

Hitler believed in the importance of individual creative imagination and dynamism, in the need for every person of superior ability and skill to assume responsibility.

He also recognized the importance of the profit motive. Deprived of the prospect of having his efforts rewarded, the person of ability often refrains from running risks. The economic failure of Communism has demonstrated this. In the absence of personal incentives and the opportunity for real individual initiative, the Soviet "command economy" lagged in all but a few fields, its industry years behind its competitors.

State monopoly tolls the death of all initiative, and hence of all progress.

For all men selflessly to pool their wealth might be marvelous, but it is also contrary to human nature. Nearly every man desires that his labor shall improve his own condition and that of his family, and feels that his brain, creative imagination, and persistence well deserve their reward.

Because it disregarded these basic psychological truths, Soviet Communism, right to the end, wallowed in economic mediocrity, in spite of its immense reservoir of manpower, its technical expertise, and its abundant natural resources, all of which ought to have made it an industrial and technological giant.

Hitler was always adverse to the idea of state management of the economy. He believed in elites. "A single idea of genius," he used to say, "has more value than a lifetime of conscientious labor in an office."

Just as there are political or intellectual elites, so also is there an industrial elite. A manufacturer of great ability should not be restrained, hunted down by the internal revenue services like a criminal, or be unappreciated by the public. On the contrary, it is important for economic development that the industrialist be encouraged morally and materially, as much as possible.

The most fruitful initiatives Hitler would take from 1933 on would be on behalf of private enterprise. He would keep an eye on the quality of their directors, to be sure, and would shunt aside incompetents, quite a few of them at times, but he also supported the best ones, those with the keenest minds, the most imaginative and bold, even if their political opinions did not always agree with his own.

"There is no question," he stated very firmly, "of dismissing a factory owner or director under the pretext that he is not a National Socialist."

Hitler would exercise the same moderation, the same pragmatism, in the administrative as well as in the industrial sphere.
What he demanded of his co-workers, above all, was competence and effectiveness. The great majority of Third Reich functionaries - some 80 percent-were never enrolled in the National Socialist party.
Several of Hitler's ministers, like Konstantin von Neurath and Schwerin von Krosigk, and ambassadors to such key posts as Prague, Vienna and Ankara, were not members of the party. But they were capable..

"Herr Schacht," he said, "we are assuredly in agreement on one point: no other single task facing the government at the moment can be so truly urgent as conquering unemployment. That will take a lot of money. Do you see any possibility of finding it apart from the Reichsbank?" And after a moment, he added: "How much would it take? Do you have any idea?"

Wishing to win Schacht over by appealing to his ambition, Hitler smiled and then asked: "Would you be willing to once again assume presidency of the Reichsbank?" Schacht let on that he had a sentimental concern for Dr. Luther, and did not want to hurt the incumbent's feelings. Playing along, Hitler reassured Schacht that he would find an appropriate new job elsewhere for Luther.
Schacht then pricked up his ears, drew himself up, and focused his big round eyes on Hitler: "Well, if that's the way it is," he said, "then I am ready to assume the presidency of the Reichsbank again."
His great dream was being realized. Schacht had been president of the Reichsbank between 1923 and 1930, but had been dismissed. Now he would return in triumph. He felt vindicated. Within weeks, the ingenious solution to Germany's pressing financial woes would burst forth from his inventive brain.

"It was necessary," Schacht later explained, "to discover a method that would avoid inflating the investment holdings of the Reichsbank immoderately and consequently increasing the circulation of money excessively."

"Therefore," he went on, "I had to find some means of getting the sums that were lying idle in pockets and banks, without meaning for it to be long term and without having it undergo the risk of depreciation. That was the reasoning behind the Mefo bonds."

What were these "Mefo" bonds? Mefo was a contraction of the Metallurgische Forschungs-GmbH (Metallurgic Research Company). With a startup capitalization of one billion marks - which Hitler and Schacht arranged to be provided by the four giant firms of Krupp, Siemens, Deutsche Werke and Rheinmetall-this company would eventually promote many billions of marks worth of investment.

Enterprises, old and new, that filled government orders had only to draw drafts on Mefo for the amounts due. These drafts, when presented to the Reichsbank, were immediately convertible into cash. The success of the Mefo program depended entirely on public acceptance of the Mefo bonds. But the wily Schacht had planned well. Since Mefo bonds were short-term bonds that could be cashed in at any time, there was no real risk in buying, accepting or holding them. They bore an interest of four percent-a quite acceptable figure in those days-whereas banknotes hidden under the mattress earned nothing. The public quickly took all this into consideration and eagerly accepted the bonds. While the Reichsbank was able to offer from its own treasury a relatively insignificant 150 million marks for Hitler's war on unemployment, in just four years the German public subscribed more than 12 billion marks worth of Mefo bonds!

These billions, the fruit of the combined imagination, ingenuity and astuteness of Hitler and Schacht, swept away the temporizing and fearful conservatism of the bankers. Over the next four years, this enormous credit reserve would make miracles possible.

Soon after the initial billion-mark credit, Schacht added another credit of 600 million in order to finance the start of Hitler's grand program for highway construction. This Autobahn program provided immediate work for 100,000 of the unemployed, and eventually assured wages for some 500,000 workers.

As large as this outlay was, it was immediately offset by a corresponding cutback in government unemployment benefits, and by the additional tax revenue generated as a result of the increase in living standard (sping) of the newly employed.

Within a few months, thanks to the credit created by the Mefo bonds, private industry once again dared to assume risks and expand. Germans returned to work by the hundreds of thousands.

Was Schacht solely responsible for this extraordinary turnaround? After the war, he answered for himself as a Nuremberg Tribunal defendant, where he was charged with having made possible the Reich's economic revival:

I don't think Hitler was reduced to begging for my help. If I had not served him, he would have found other methods, other means. He was not a man to give up. It's easy enough for you to say, Mr. Prosecutor, that I should have watched Hitler die and not lifted a finger. But the entire working class would have died with him!

Even Marxists recognized Hitler's success, and their own failure. In the June 1934 issue of the Zeitschrift fï¿½r Sozialismus, the journal of the German Social Democrats in exile, this acknowledgement appears: Faced with the despair of proletarians reduced to joblessness, of young people with diplomas and no future, of the middle classes of merchants and artisans condemned to bankruptcy, and of farmers terribly threatened by the collapse in agricultural prices, we all failed. We weren't capable of offering the masses anything but speeches about the glory of socialism.

VI. The Social Revolution
Hitler's tremendous social achievement in putting Germany's six million unemployed back to work is seldom acknowledged today. Although it was much more than a transitory achievement, "democratic" historians routinely dismiss it in just a few lines. Since 1945, not a single objective scholarly study has been devoted to this highly significant, indeed unprecedented, historical phenomenon.
Similarly neglected is the body of sweeping reforms that dramatically changed the condition of the worker in Germany. Factories were transformed from gloomy caverns to spacious and healthy work centers, with natural lighting, surrounded by gardens and playing fields. Hundreds of thousands of attractive houses were built for working class families. A policy of several weeks of paid vacation was introduced, along with week and holiday trips by land and sea. A wide-ranging program of physical and cultural education for young workers was established, with the world's best system of technical training. The Third Reich's social security and workers' health insurance system was the world's most modern and complete.
This remarkable record of social achievement is routinely hushed up today because it is embarrasses those who uphold the orthodox view of the Third Reich. Otherwise, readers might begin to think that perhaps Hitler was the greatest social builder of the twentieth century..

Nevertheless, restoring work and bread to millions of unemployed who had been living in misery for years; restructuring industrial life; conceiving and establishing an organization for the effective defense and betterment of the nation's millions of wage earners; creating a new bureaucracy and judicial system that guaranteed the civic rights of each member of the national community, while simultaneously holding each person to his or her responsibilities as a German citizen: this organic body of reforms was part of a single, comprehensive plan, which Hitler had conceived and worked out years earlier.
Without this plan, the nation would have collapsed into anarchy. All-encompassing, this program included broad industrial recovery as well as detailed attention to even construction of comfortable inns along the new highway network.

It took several years for a stable social structure to emerge from the French Revolution. The Soviets needed even more time: five years after the Bolshevik revolution of 1917, hundreds of thousands of Russians were still dying of hunger and disease. In Germany, by contrast, the great machinery was in motion within months, with organization and accomplishment quickly meshing together..

Hitler personally dug the first spadeful of earth for the first Autobahn highway, linking Frankfurt-am-Main with Darmstadt. For the occasion, he brought along Dr. Schacht, the man whose visionary credit wizardry had made the project possible. The official procession moved ahead, three cars abreast in front, then six across, spanning the entire width of the autobahn..

Hitler's plan to build thousands of low-cost homes also demanded a vast mobilization of manpower. He had envisioned housing that would be attractive, cozy, and affordable for millions of ordinary German working-class families. He had no intention of continuing to tolerate, as his predecessors had, cramped, ugly "rabbit warren" housing for the German people. The great barracks-like housing projects on the outskirts of factory towns, packed with cramped families, disgusted him.

The greater part of the houses he would build were single story, detached dwellings, with small yards where children could romp, wives could grow vegetable and flower gardens, while the bread-winners could read their newspapers in peace after the day's work. These single-family homes were built to conform to the architectural styles of the various German regions, retaining as much as possible the charming local variants.

Wherever there was no practical alternative to building large apartment complexes, Hitler saw to it that the individual apartments were spacious, airy and enhanced by surrounding lawns and gardens where the children could play safely.

The new housing was, of course, built in conformity with the highest standards of public health, a consideration notoriously neglected in previous working-class projects.

Generous loans, amortizable in ten years, were granted to newly married couples so they could buy their own homes. At the birth of each child, a fourth of the debt was cancelled. Four children, at the normal rate of a new arrival every two and a half years, sufficed to cancel the entire loan debt.

Once, during a conversation with Hitler, I expressed my astonishment at this policy. "But then, you never get back the total amount of your loans?," I asked. "How so?" he replied, smiling. "Over a period of ten years, a family with four children brings in much more than our loans, through the taxes levied on a hundred different items of consumption." As it happened, tax revenues increased every year, in proportion to the rise in expenditures for Hitler's social programs. In just a few years, revenue from taxes tripled. Hitler's Germany never experienced a financial crisis.

To stimulate the moribund economy demanded the nerve, which Hitler had, to invest money that the government didn't yet have, rather than passively waiting-in accordance with "sound" financial principles-for the economy to revive by itself.

Today, our whole era is dying economically because we have succumbed to fearful hesitation. Enrichment follows investment, not the other way around..

Even before the year 1933 had ended, Hitler had succeeded in building 202,119 housing units. Within four years he would provide the German people with nearly a million and a half (1,458,128) new dwellings! Moreover, workers would no longer be exploited as they had been. A month's rent for a worker could not exceed 26 marks, or about an eighth of the average wage then. Employees with more substantial salaries paid monthly rents of up to 45 marks maximum.

Equally effective social measures were taken in behalf of farmers, who had the lowest incomes. In 1933 alone 17,611 new farm houses were built, each of them surrounded by a parcel of land one thousand square meters in size. Within three years, Hitler would build 91,000 such farmhouses..

Everywhere industry was hiring again, with some firms-like Krupp, IG Farben and the large automobile manufacturers-taking on new workers on a very large scale. As the country became more prosperous, car sales increased by more than 80,000 units in 1933 alone. Employment in the auto industry doubled. Germany was gearing up for full production, with private industry leading the way.

The new government lavished every assistance on the private sector, the chief factor in employment as well as production. Hitler almost immediately made available 500 million marks in credits to private business.

This start-up assistance given to German industry would repay itself many times over. Soon enough, another two billion marks would be loaned to the most enterprising companies. Nearly half would go into new wages and salaries, saving the treasury an estimated three hundred million marks in unemployment benefits. Added to the hundreds of millions in tax receipts spurred by the business recovery, the state quickly recovered its investment, and more.

Hitler's entire economic policy would be based on the following equation: risk large sums to undertake great public works and to spur the renewal and modernization of industry, then later recover the billions invested through invisible and painless tax revenues. It didn't take long for Germany to see the results of Hitler's recovery formula.

Economic recovery, as important as it was, nevertheless wasn't Hitler's only objective. As he strived to restore full employment, Hitler never lost sight of his goal of creating a organization powerful enough to stand up to capitalist owners and managers, who had shown little concern for the health and welfare of the entire national community.

Hitler would impose on everyone-powerful boss and lowly wage earner alike-his own concept of the organic social community. Only the loyal collaboration of everyone could assure the prosperity of all classes and social groups.

Consistent with their doctrine, Germany's Marxist leaders had set class against class, helping to bring the country to the brink of economic collapse. Deserting their Marxist unions and political parties in droves, most workers had come to realize that strikes and grievances their leaders incited only crippled production, and thus the workers as well.

By the of 1932, in any case, the discredited labor unions were drowning in massive debt that realistically could never be repaid. Some of the less scrupulous union officials, sensing the oncoming catastrophe, had begun stealing hundreds of thousands of marks from the workers they represented. The Marxist leaders had failed: socially, financially and morally.

Every joint human activity requires a leader. The head of a factory or business is also the person naturally responsible for it. He oversees every aspect of production and work. In Hitler's Germany, the head of a business had to be both a capable director and a person concerned for the social justice and welfare of his employees. Under Hitler, many owners and managers who had proven to be unjust, incompetent or recalcitrant lost their jobs, or their businesses.

A considerable number of legal guarantees protected the worker against any abuse of authority at the workplace. Their purpose was to insure that the rights of workers were respected, and that workers were treated as worthy collaborators, not just as animated tools. Each industrialist was legally obliged to collaborate with worker delegates in drafting shop regulations that were not imposed from above but instead adapted to each business enterprise and its particular working conditions. These regulations had to specify "the length of the working day, the time and method of paying wages, and the safety rules, and to be posted throughout the factory," within easy access of both the worker whose interests might be angered and the owner or manager whose orders might be subverted.

The thousands of different, individual versions of such regulations served to create a healthy rivalry, with every factory group vying to outdo the others in efficiency and justice.

One of the first reforms to benefit German workers was the establishment of paid vacations. In France, the leftist Popular Front government would noisily claim, in 1936, to have originated legally mandated paid vacations-and stingy ones at that, only one week per year. But it was actually Hitler who first established them, in 1933 -- and they were two or three times more generous.

Under Hitler, every factory employee had the legal right to paid vacation. Previously, paid vacations had not normally exceed four or five days, and nearly half of the younger workers had no vacation time at all. If anything, Hitler favored younger workers; the youngest workers received more generous vacations. This was humane and made sense: a young person has more need of rest and fresh air to develop his maturing strength and vigor. Thus, they enjoyed a full 18 days of paid vacation per year.

Today, more than half a century later, these figures have been surpassed, but in 1933 they far exceeded European norms.
The standard vacation was twelve days. Then, from the age of 25 on, it went up to 18 days. After ten years with the company, workers got a still longer vacation: 21 days, or three times what the French socialists would grant the workers of their country in 1936.
Hitler introduced the standard forty-hour work week in Europe. As for overtime work, it was now compensated, as nowhere else in the continent at the time, at an increased pay rate. And with the eight-hour work day now the norm, overtime work became more readily available.

In another innovation, work breaks were made longer: two hours each day, allowing greater opportunity for workers to relax, and to make use of the playing fields that large industries were now required to provide.

Whereas a worker's right to job security had been virtually non-existent, now an employee could no longer be dismissed at the sole discretion of the employer. Hitler saw to it that workers' rights were spelled out and enforced. Henceforth, an employer had to give four weeks notice before firing an employee, who then had up to two months to appeal the dismissal. Dismissals could also be annulled by the "Courts of Social Honor" (Ehrengerichte).

This Court was one of three great institutions that were established to protect German workers. The others were the "Labor Commissions" and the "Council of Trust."

The "Council of Trust" (Vertrauensrat) was responsible for establishing and developing a real spirit of community between management and labor. "In every business enterprise," the 1934 "Labor Charter" law stipulated, "the employer and head of the enterprise (Fï¿½hrer), the employees and workers, personnel of the enterprise, shall work jointly toward the goal of the enterprise and the common good of the nation."

No longer would either be exploited by the other-neither the worker by arbitrary whim of the employer, nor the employer through the blackmail of strikes for political ends.

Article 35 of the "Labor Charter" law stated: "Every member of an enterprise community shall assume the responsibility required by his position in said common enterprise." In short, each enterprise would be headed by a dynamic executive, charged with a sense of the greater community-no longer a selfish capitalist with unconditional, arbitrary power.

"The interest of the community may require that an incapable or unworthy employer be relieved of his duties," the "Labor Charter" stipulated. The employer was no longer unassailable, an all-powerful boss with the last word on hiring and firing his staff. He, too, would be subject to the workplace regulations, which he was now obliged to respect no less than the least of his employees. The law conferred the honor and responsibility of authority on the employer only insofar as he merited it..

In the Third Reich, the worker knew that "exploitation of his physical strength in bad faith or in violation of his honor" was no longer tolerated. He had obligations to the community, but he shared these obligations with every other member of the enterprise, from the chief executive to the messenger boy. Finally, the German worker had clearly defined social rights, which were arbitrated and enforced by independent agencies. And while all this had been achieved in an atmosphere of justice and moderation, it nevertheless constituted a genuine social revolution..

Factories and shops, large and small, were altered or transformed to conform to the strictest standards of cleanliness and hygiene: interiors, so often dark and stifling, were opened up to light; playing fields were constructed; rest areas where workers could unbend during break, were set aside; employee cafeterias and respectable locker rooms were opened. The larger industrial establishments, in addition to providing the normally required conventional sports facilities, were obliged to put in swimming pools!

In just three years, these achievements would reach unimagined heights: more than two thousand factories refitted and beautified; 23,000 work premises modernized; 800 buildings designed exclusively for meetings; 1,200 playing fields; 13,000 sanitary facilities; 17,000 cafeterias.

To assure the healthy development of the working class, physical education courses were instituted for younger workers. Some 8,000 were eventually organized. Technical training was equally emphasized. Hundreds of work schools, and thousands of technical courses were created. There were examinations for professional competence, and competitions in which generous prizes were awarded to outstanding masters of their craft.

Eight hundred departmental inspectors and 17,300 local inspectors were employed to conscientiously monitor and promote these improvements. To provide affordable vacations for German workers on a hitherto unprecedented scale, Hitler established the "Strength through Joy" program. As a result, hundreds of thousands of workers were now able to make relaxing vacation trips on land and sea each summer. Magnificent cruise ships were built, and special trains brought vacationers to the mountains and the seashore. In just a few years,

Germany's working-class tourists would log a distance equivalent to 54 times the circumference of the earth! And thanks to generous state subsidies, the cost to workers of these popular vacation excursions was nearly insignificant..

Was Hitler's transformation of the lot of the working class authoritarian? Without a doubt. And yet, for a people that had grown sick and tired of anarchy, this new authoritarianism wasn't regarded as an imposition. In fact, people have always accepted a strong man's leadership.

In any case, there is no doubt that the attitude of the German working class, which was still two-thirds non-Nazi at the start of 1933, soon changed completely. As Belgian author Marcel Laloire noted at the time:

When you make your way through the cities of Germany and go into the working-class districts, go through the factories, the construction yards, you are astonished to find so many workers on the job sporting the Hitler insignia, to see so many flags with the swastika, black on a bright red background, in the most densely populated districts. Hitler's "German Labor Front" (Deutsche Arbeitsfront), which incorporated all workers and employers, was for the most part eagerly accepted. The steel spades of the sturdy young lads of the "National Labor Service" (Reichsarbeitsdienst) could also be seen gleaming along the highways.

Hitler created the National Labor Service not only to alleviate unemployment, but to bring together, in absolute equality, and in the same uniform, both the sons of millionaires and the sons of the poorest families for several months' common labor and living. All performed the same work, all were subject to the same discipline; they enjoyed the same pleasures and benefited from the same physical and moral development. At the same construction sites and in the same barracks, Germans became conscious of what they had in common, grew to understand one another, and discarded their old prejudices of class and caste.

After a hitch in the National Labor Service, a young worker knew that the rich man's son was not a pampered monster, while the young lad of wealthy family knew that the worker's son had no less honor than a nobleman or an heir to riches; they had lived and worked together as comrades. Social hatred was vanishing, and a socially united people was being born.

Hitler could go into factories-something few men of the so-called Right would have risked in the past-and hold forth to crowds of workers, at times in the thousands, as at the huge Siemens works. "In contrast to the von Papens and other country gentlemen," he might tell them, "in my youth I was a worker like you. And in my heart of hearts, I have remained what I was then."

During his twelve years in power, no untoward incident ever occurred at any factory he visited. Hitler was at home when he went among the people, and he was received like a member of the family returning home after making a success of himself.

But the Chancellor of the Third Reich wanted more than popular approval. He wanted that approval to be freely, widely, and repeatedly expressed by popular vote. No people was ever be more frequently asked for their electoral opinion than the German people of that era-five times in five years.

For Hitler, it was not enough that the people voted from time to time, as in the previous democratic system. In those days, voters were rarely appealed to, and when they expressed an opinion, they were often ill-informed and apathetic. After an election, years might go by, during which the politicians were heedless and inaccessible, the electorate powerless to vote on their actions.

To enable the German public to express its opinion on the occasion of important events of social, national, or international significance, Hitler provided the people a new means of approving or rejecting his own actions as Chancellor: the plebiscite.

Hitler recognized the right of all the people, men and women alike, to vote by secret ballot: to voice their opinion of his policies, or to make a well-grounded judgment on this or that great decision in domestic or foreign affairs. Rather than a formalistic routine, democracy became a vital, active program of supervision that was renewed annually.

The articles of the "Plebiscite Law" were brief and clear:

1.The Reich government may ask the people whether or not it approves of a measure planned by or taken by the government. This may also apply to a law.

2. A measure submitted to plebiscite will be considered as established when it receives a simple majority of the votes. This will apply as well to a law modifying the Constitution.

3. If the people approves the measure in question, it will be applied in conformity with article III of the Law for Overcoming the Distress of the People and the Reich.

The Reich Interior Ministry is authorized to take all legal and administrative measures necessary to carry out this law.
Berlin, July 14, 1933.
Hitler, Frick..

From the first months of 1933, his accomplishments were public fact, for all to see. Before end of the year, unemployment in Germany had fallen from more than 6,000,000 to 3,374,000. Thus, 2,627,000 jobs had been created since the previous February, when Hitler began his "gigantic task!" A simple question: Who in Europe ever achieved similar results in so short a time?..

In his detailed and critical biography of Hitler, Joachim Fest limited his treatment of Hitler's extraordinary social achievements in 1933 to a few paragraphs. All the same, Fest did not refrain from acknowledging:

The regime insisted that it was not the rule of one social class above all others, and by granting everyone opportunities to rise, it in fact demonstrated class neutrality-These measures did indeed break through the old, petrified social structures. They tangibly improved the material condition of much of the population. (J. Fest, Hitler, pp. 434-435.)

Not without reason were the swastika banners waving proudly throughout the working-class districts where, just a year ago, they had been unceremoniously torn down.

Many Asian countries have traffic problems like this a few times a year. This time of year, it's the the annual lemming vacation.. where everyone in the country takes the same two to three week period for vacation. Here in Korea, entire towns turn basically into ghost towns as everyone leaves town en-masse to visit family (one wonders if the family are also on the road.. I know the traffic is pretty ugly during the beginning and end of the period.)

Two other such times, though shorter (and therefor more traffic intense) are Lunar (or Chinese) New Year and harvest festival (in Korea this one is called Chu-Sok or Korean Thanksgiving.. the latter mostly by US military and expats). Both of these are three day celebrations of the advent of the 400Km long parking lot.

They spoke today on the news about farmers and such that live along the expressway in China bringing out food, drink and goodies to the captive motorists... this is not unusual, either. During Lunar New Year and Chu-Sok, there are regular stands set up beside the expressways (where pedestrians, bicycles and motorcycles are not even normally allowed) and wind their way through the idle traffic selling popsicles, ice cream cones, various soy based treats and rice cakes at prices well above the going rate. We carry our own drinks and snacks when we HAVE to be out on such days... mostly we opt to stay home.

Now the Adverse Reaction of American US Citizens to building an Islamic Mosque at NYC Ground Zero [Which Is Hallowed Sacred Memorial Ground of 3000 American Deaths to Many/Most Americans] is being called "Metastasized Anti-Semitism" Cancerous Anti-Arab Bigotry and Anti-Islam Hate by the Wife of the Imam of the proposed Mosque.

HELLO ! when they 'The Muslims' will let Christians build a Christian Memorial to the Victims of the 9/11 Attacks in Mecca, KSA : Them may be she is Right.
-but- While we are able to Openly Discuss and even 'consider' a Mosque at the Ground Zero Holy Site :
The Muslims Will NEVER Discuss or even "Consider" any Christian Memorial in their Holy City of Mecca.

For Them "The Muslims" Religious Dialog and Religious Freedom Is A One-Way Street and You Ain't Allowed To Drive or even Walk On It [.]

?Q? Why has NYC dragged it's feet for Years on re-building an existing but destroyed Christian Church near Ground Zero -while- The new Islamic Mosque is given an Automatic Green Light and Expedited Process of Approval ?

http://www.nytimes.com/2010/08/24/nyregion/24greek.html?src=mv Plus the Support of the US Federal Government

?Q? Why Is Prez Obama and the Obama Regime Spending US Tax Dollars to Send the Imam of this Mosque Around the World to Solicit Donations to Build the Mosque "In The Name of Allah" ?

? WHAT HAPPEN TO SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE IN AMERICA ?
http://www.everydaychristian.com/blogs/post/8040/
* Oh Yeah - That Only Applies To Christians, Jews, Catholics, Buddhists and other non-muslim religions
* But clearly Prez Obama and the Obama Regime has Make Islam 'The State Sponsored Religion'

No Wonder Why Many Americans US Citizens Question What Religion* Prez Obama Is When the Obama Regime Gives Preferential Treatment to Islam The US Government's "Favorite Religion"
* ROTFL : White House says Obama is Christian

I SAY "NO" TO BUILDING AN ISLAMIC MOSQUE ON THE HALLOWED NYC GROUND ZERO SITE AS A SIGN OF ISLAMIC CONQUEST AND DOMINATION [.]

It ain't Anti-Arab and It Ain't Anti-Islamic : It Is About Equality and Freedom for All Not Just Preferred First Class and Special Treatment for Muslims; and second class treatment for all non-muslims by the us federal government and the obama regime ~ RHF

Yes, and intelligence begets intelligence, genetically speaking. The problem is, we left a term out of the equation.

We need that term to account for differing birth rates.

The correct equation is:

Intelligence begets intelligence. And stupid begets stupid squared.

That's why we need positive eugenics.

All the best,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

Traffic Jam in China: Bloomberg Says Coal is the Reason Why

http://www.google.com/url?sa=D&q=http://www.businessweek.com/news/2010-08-24/chinese-demand-for-coal-spurs-9-day-traffic-jam-on-expressway.html&usg=AFQjCNGVmuZyskmTNtKmTq1SUNdWPGDlxw

Chinese Demand for Coal Spurs 9-Day Traffic Jam on Expressway
August 24, 2010, 2:37 AM EDT

Aug. 24 (Bloomberg) -- Chinese demand for coal to produce electricity for the world’s fastest-growing major economy is creating traffic jams lasting as long as nine days on roads connecting mines in the nation’s hinterland to its eastern ports.

Thousands of trucks were stuck along the Beijing-Tibet Expressway for as many as nine days, China Business News reported today. The blockage, which began to ease yesterday, was created by a surge in trucks carrying coal from the province of Inner Mongolia, the newspaper reported. Road maintenance since Aug. 19 has been a major cause of the congestion, the Global Times newspaper said today.

Inner Mongolia passed Shanxi province last year to become China’s biggest coal supplier after the government closed mines on safety concerns following a series of deadly accidents in Shanxi. A dearth of railway capacity connecting Inner Mongolia to port cities such as Caofeidian, Qinhuangdao and Tianjin, where coal is shipped to power plants in southern China, has forced suppliers to rely on trucks.

“The situation may ease in three or four years, when rail capacity from Inner Mongolia to Caofeidian gets upgraded and the new rail line to Liaoning province starts,” David Fang, a director at the China Coal Transport and Distribution Association, said by telephone today.

China plans to build a 300-kilometer (190-mile) railway from Inner Mongolia to Huludao city in Liaoning, the official Xinhua News Agency reported in March.

Well, if it's the part of the Bible that says that people who bugger little children should have millstones hung around their necks and drowned I can certainly see it. We can't go around spreading hate against those who practice perversion.

I don't see your problem with it. You've been defending child raping clergy for years, not 'Christian' clergy mind you.

When I call a Christian child molester a pervert, you call me anti religion.

When I call a Rabbi child molester a pervert, you call me anti Jewish.

What sort of evil would these deviants have to do for you to finally say "It's WRONG" ?

You have a real problem here. Allow Bible quotations as Free Speech or protect the perverts' rights to molest your children. Your call.

How about proof of, at the MINIMUM, High School graduation before a breeding permit is issued? That could be vastly improved upon by demanding graduation AND proof of having had a job for two years after graduation.

Mind you, if the out of control source of new sub-standard babies is stopped, the current Judicial system would collapse. A 'for profit' jail system needs criminals. Stupidity, poverty and hopelessness go a long way to provide those criminals.

conservative policies:the nuremburg laws, you could easily substitute mexican for jew. white american male for german:Kristallnacht, you could easily substitute liberal for jew:first they came for the communist etc. there is no such thing as liberal fascism:)

here are the three 3 phases of conservative decay.
1.conservatism(policies always fail)
2. libertarianism(the drive for purity, the conservative polices and those that implemented them, were not pure enough)
3. fascism(the rise of the strong man to ensure purity, the strongman will drive out the impure, liberals, jews, immigrants, trade unionists, communists, socialists, those mental and physical defects, gypsies, etc. this to fails on a huge scale. just look what happened to the central european fascists. they collapsed their economies, and came up millions of workers and soldiers short.

scapegoating and demonization are conservative policies we see in action today. just ask a homosexual, a muslim, a mexican, or a liberal.
the conservative has used this type of behavior for centuries, we see how well the conservatives used it to gain power in germany. here are prime examples of conservative fascism.

its one of the worst attacks on original intent, and the constitutional rights of all americans. can you imagine letting some conservative demagogue decides who is a american, and who is not.
conservatives are notorious bigots, racists, homophobes, they practice religious intolerance, intolerance of different peoples, views, and idea's, they hate working people, and god forbid if the working people organize. they hate women, children, and anybody who is weak.
why not just get it over with, and institute the Nuremberg laws.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Nuremburg_laws
After Hitler came to power in 1933, there was a rapid growth in German legislation directed at Jews, however the existence of many secular and atheistic Germans of Jewish origin and the adherence of the Nazis to racial definitions created a need for a clear legal method of defining who was Jewish. The Nuremberg Laws (German: Nürnberger Gesetze) of 1935 were antisemitic laws in Nazi Germany which were introduced at the annual Nuremberg rally. The laws classified people with four German grandparents as "German or kindred blood", while people were classified as Jews if they descended from three or four Jewish grandparents. A person with one or two Jewish grandparents was a Mischling, a crossbreed, of "mixed blood".[1] The Nuremberg Laws deprived Jews of German citizenship and prohibited marriage between Jews and other Germans.[2] The existence of laws identifying who was Jewish made it easier for the Nazis to introduce legislation restricting Jewish rights, the laws themselves included a ban on sexual intercourse between (people defined as) "Jews" and (non-Jewish) Germans, and preventing "Jews" from participating in German civic life. Before 1870 Jews living in Germany were automatically defined as aliens and their rights were restricted, regardless of how many generations they had lived in the country, the Nuremburg laws were thus, to some extent, a reversion to a previous state of affairs.

you could easily substitute mexican for jew. white america male for german:)
The Laws
The Laws for the Protection of German Blood and German Honour (September 15, 1935) Entirely convinced that the purity of German blood is essential to the further existence of the German people, and inspired by the uncompromising determination to safeguard the future of the German nation, the Reichstag has unanimously resolved upon the following law, which is promulgated herewith: Section 1 Marriages between Jews and citizens (German: Staatsangehörige) of German or kindred blood are forbidden. Marriages concluded in defiance of this law are void, even if, for the purpose of evading this law, they were concluded abroad. Proceedings for annulment may be initiated only by the Public Prosecutor. Section 2 Extramarital sexual intercourse between Jews and subjects of the state of Germany or related blood is forbidden. (Supplementary decrees set Nazi definitions of racial Germans, Jews, and half-breeds or Mischlinge --- see the latter entry for details and citations and Mischling Test for how such decrees were applied. Jews could not vote or hold public office under the parallel "citizenship" law.) Section 3 Jews will not be permitted to employ female citizens under the age of 45, of German or kindred blood, as domestic workers. Section 4 Jews are forbidden to display the Reich and national flag or the national colours. On the other hand they are permitted to display the Jewish colours. The exercise of this right is protected by the State. Section 5 A person who acts contrary to the prohibition of Section 1 will be punished with hard labour. A person who acts contrary to the prohibition of Section 2 will be punished with imprisonment or with hard labour. A person who acts contrary to the provisions of Sections 3 or 4 will be punished with imprisonment up to a year and with a fine, or with one of these penalties. Section 6 The Reich Minister of the Interior in agreement with the Deputy Führer and the Reich Minister of Justice will issue the legal and administrative regulations required for the enforcement and supplementing of this law. Section 7 The law will become effective on the day after its promulgation; Section 3, however, not until January 1, 1936. [edit]

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Kristallnacht

Kristallnacht
From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Kristallnacht (German pronunciation: [kʁɪsˈtalˌnaxt]; literally "Crystal Night") or The Night of Broken Glass was an anti-Jewish pogrom in Nazi Germany (including Austria and Sudetenland) from the 9th until the 10th of November 1938. It is also known as Novemberpogrome, Reichskristallnacht, Reichspogromnacht or Pogromnacht in German.[1]
The Kristallnacht was triggered by the assassination in Paris of German diplomat Ernst vom Rath by Herschel Grynszpan, a German-born Polish Jew. In a coordinated attack on Jewish people and their property, 91 Jews were killed and 25,000 to 30,000 were arrested and placed in concentration camps. 267 synagogues were destroyed, and thousands of homes and businesses were ransacked. This was done by the Hitler Youth, the Gestapo and the SS.[2] The Kristallnacht also served as a pretext and a means for the wholesale confiscation of firearms from German Jews.[3]
While the assassination of Rath served as a pretext for the attacks, the Kristallnacht was part of a broader racial policy of Nazi Germany including antisemitism and persecution of the Jews.[4] Kristallnacht was followed by further economic and political persecutions. It is viewed by many historians as the beginning of the Final Solution, leading towards the genocide of the Holocaust.[5][6]

First they came...
From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia
"First they came ..." is a famous statement attributed to Pastor Martin Niemöller (1892–1984) about the inactivity of German intellectuals following the Nazi rise to power and the purging of their chosen targets, group after group. The text expresses, in a condensed form, the understanding of history presented by Niemöller in a January 6, 1946 speech before representatives of the Confessing

Church in Frankfurt.[1]
"THEY CAME FIRST for the Communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Communist. THEN THEY CAME for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. THEN THEY CAME for the Jews, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew. THEN THEY CAME for me and by that time no one was left to speak up."

Shockley made similar points. As did hundreds of scientists, thinkers, and politicians around the globe about the time of the Second World War. The thinking is not entirely without merit. Although, in the case of Shockley, the reasoning was cold. Often cruelly discriminatory. And not just along racial lines.

But implementation of this thinking becomes histrionically problematic on its face. The issue is not the improvement of the species. But how, and by whom, the eugenic decisions are made. Indeed, the very definition of the terms 'positive eugenics,' carries with it a chilling implication rooted in politics. Not unlike what some opponents to the health care bill have expressed over the last year.

But a significant distinction is borne in the terms 'intelligence,' and 'stupid,' themselves.

Kevin, 'stupid' is not the opposite of 'intelligence.' A hard truth is that they are not even mutually exclusive. High intelligence may be just as stupid as low. 'Stupid' is based in choices, not brain power. Choosing to engage one's mouth before releasing the clutch on the brain has created historically stupid moments, such as Obiteme's comments regarding the police department's actions against Henry Louis Gates. In one breath, he admitted he knew nothing of the facts of the case, but condemned the police as having acted stupidly.

A stupid comment on its face, by an intelligent man...regardless of what we think of his politics.

You're right. Stupidity begets stupidity squared. We see that every day in this country. And in other countries around the world. But the solution is not eugenic improvement of species' intelligence. The solution is better education, even training, if you will, of individuals to chamber their brain before releasing the safety on their mouths.

That's not a function of IQ. That's a function of social values.

I had a GM who used to say of one of the staff, "She's a 286 in a Pentium world."

I had to point out that the computer running the radio station was a 286 running DOS. And that it never crashed. Never locked up. Ran 24/7 and never created a billing error, pulled a wrong playlist, or printed an incorrect log. And that he'd done more boneheaded things that have cost far more in the corporate environment running his P2 and Windows.

He realized the analogy.

Speaking generally, low intelligence individuals are not individuals of low value. They may not be astrophysicists, and neurosurgery may not be a good career choice, but they do play an integral role in society. They work, they own homes. They participate in the economy. They participate in society. They create art. Many often display eerily incisive wisdom. They may be a little less self insightful, but they're not valueless. And simply deciding to breed them out of the species is both arrogant and, in a very real sense, counter productive, even when speaking of genetics.

But, again, the major issue is the one of implementation. Who would decide what is a 'positive eugenic?' And who would make the decision who may and may not breed. I can think of no one, no one man, one woman, or one committee...no one...whom I'd trust to make that decision. And I certainly wouldn't want it left to machines. Even supercomputers are inadequate to that task.

There are reasons eugenics has fallen out of favor among thinkers and scientists. The theories were debunked decades ago with the realization that artificial eugenics are unnecessary, and undesirable. That Nature can more effectively, and with surprising agility and stability, remove unproductive genes from the pool. That Natural selection, though a work in progress, is always working, and, most importantly, politically blind. And though your thinking about birth rates on the long term impact on the culture is correct, on the long term impact on the species it is not.

Education is a more far reaching, effective, and catholically applicable strategy to improving the state of Man, by ridding it of stupidity, than is eugenics.

And more importantly, it can even be applied to those of lesser inate intelligence with great result.

There is one frequency around 7 or 8 MHz where all the numbers are in Spanish, but at the end the female announcer says "good night" in English.

Interesting! I've never heard that in all my years of shortwave tuning. Let me know a time and frequency if you run across it again.

The mosque WILL be built, and we WILL lose America, as long as White Americans continue to cower and grovel every time they're called "hate mongers", "bigots" and "racists" by the REAL hate mongers, bigots and racists who are just itching to destroy White Western civilization.

Well, I'm not a conservative, since conservatism is essentially a cowardly defensive philosophy, doomed to lose against the continuous hate-filled offensive onslaught from liberals, progressives, socialists, and communists. Speaking only for myself, yes, I do hate communists, socialists, and liberals. You all suck and are a danger to the USA. You must be stopped, even if it takes a civil war (hopefully it won't).

Thanks! 5880 and 5900 kHz at 3AM and 4AM EST respectively. I guess the new machines say "good night" instead of "final" (fee-nal)... if it is the same government sending the signals.

The Jews control your media and your mind. Figuratively speaking, you have your head up a Jews aft end. National Socialism really was for the people. Communism was the phoney Jewish version. Here is a quote from Mein Kampf:

"There were millions and millions of workmen who began by being hostile to the Social Democratic Party; but their defences were repeatedly stormed and finally had to surrender. Yet this defeat was due to the stupidity of the bourgeois parties, who had opposed every demand put forward by the working class. The short-sighted refusal to making an effort towards improving labour conditions, the refusal to adopt measures which would insure the workmen in case of accidents in the factories, the refusal to forbid child labour, the refusal to consider protective measures for female workers, especially expectant mothers--all this was of assistance to the Social Democratic leaders, who were thankful for every opportunity which they could exploit for forcing the masses into their net. Our bourgeois parties can never repair the damage that resulted from the mistake that was made. For they sowed the seeds of hatred when they opposed all efforts at social reform. And thus they gave, at least, apparent grounds to justify the claim put forward by the Social Democrats--namely that they alone stand up for the interest of the working class.
"And this became the principle ground for the moral justification of the actual existance of the Trades Unions, so that the labour organizations became from that time onwards the chief political recruiting ground to swell the ranks of the Social Democratic Party."

"the Jew seized upon the manifold possiblities which the situation offered him for the future. While on the one hand he organized capitalistic methods of exploitation to their ultimate degree of efficiency, he curried favour with the victims of his policy and his power and in a short while became the leader of their struggle against himself. 'Against himself' is here only a figurative way of speaking; for this 'Great Master of Lies' knows how to appear in the guise of the innocent and throw the guilt on others. Since he had the impudence to take a personal lead among the masses, they never for a moment suspected that they were falling prey to one of the most infamous deceits ever practiced. And yet that is what it actually was."

This web site explains what is going on with the "left" and the "right" in the modern economic sense.
http://www.michaeljournal.org/myth.htm

The meaning of "right" and "left" has changed. I stay with the original meaning for the same reason I refuse to call homosexual perverts "gay". The word "gay" was originally a good thing.

The right is for outlawing homosexual perversion, prostitution, abortions, heroin, and other bad things. It puts the good of the nation first and ahead of the freedom of individuals to corrupt the culture of the nation.

Leftists believe in the Rede of Witchcraft which states-- If it harm none, do what will you will. This sounds nice, but like the apple that the witch gave to Snow White it has poison within. The Rede of Witchcraft is the Bible of liberalism. It would legalize homosexual perversion, prostitution, drugs, etc.

The right is for building a great nation. Leftists care only about individual freedom and are opposed to any laws that would make the nation better. There are beaches where normal families will not go because homosexual perverts practice their perversion on the beach.
When the liberals say they are for freedom this is kind of thing they are talking about. Of course people should be free to do what they want most of the time. There is no argument there. Liberals are talking about being free to do things that many people object to and want outlawed. Their philosophy, taken to its logical conclusion, would not allow the law that says drivers have to stop at the red lights. Their philosophy would allow heroin to be sold on grocery store shelves and allow ads promoting heroin on TV. Their philosophy would result in chaos and degeneracy.

Libertarians are liberals who want freedom for the Ebenezer Scrooges to be as greedy as they want. They have the same philosophy as other leftist who want to legalize heroin and prostitution, namely that the state can't tell them what they can't do. People don't like laws stopping them from doing things, and we should sympathize with that, but sometimes that is not the most important thing. Capitalists want freedom for greed, other liberals want freedom for degeneracy, but good laws would make a nation good.

The Communists were leftist and they said they were fighting for freedom. In Spain they sided with the anarchists. The Communists and the anarchists were the same people or the same type of people. The Communists were for having government but only temporarily. They said that their government was necessary only until the whole world was Communist. After the world was Communist they wanted to dissolve the government and have an anarchy.

The right wing cares about the future. Leftists only care about the present. If their philosophy results in a nightmare future like in Soylent Green or some other futuristic nightmare they are not interested and insist that nothing could be more important than the freedom of individuals to be as decadent as they want. To see the kind of society libertarians are fighting for see the movie "8MM", they aren't for the snuff part, but other than that it shows liberalism in action.

a absolute brilliant, and i mean brilliant response. i could not have hoped for a better one. thank you so very much for proving my point.
you are in the third and final phase of conservative decay, the phase where conservatives yearn for their strong man, who is willing to slaughter millions of people in the attempt for purity. in the attempt to institutionalize greed, selfishness, intolerance of others views, racial intolerance, homophobia, religious intolerance, hatreds of communists, socialists, liberals, jews, trade unionists, so-called useless eaters, mentally and physically handicapped, etc.

thank you so very much here it is again.

here are the three 3 phases of conservative decay.
1.conservatism(policies always fail)
2. libertarianism(the drive for purity, the conservative polices and those that implemented them, were not pure enough)
3. fascism(the rise of the strong man to ensure purity, the strongman will drive out the impure, liberals, jews, immigrants, trade unionists, communists, socialists, those mental and physical defects, gypsies, etc. this to fails on a huge scale. just look what happened to the central european fascists. they collapsed their economies, and came up millions of workers and soldiers short.

If you really want to get into the numbers game, here's a sked for daily, http://www.spynumbers.com/db.html

just hit what's on now. and here's ENIGMA, http://www.spynumbers.com/enigma.html

this is the guys who came up with the classes, and where the signals are coming from. now remember, most of these stations aren't always on. and new ones come and go. you can check some of the sites for up to date info. this is a real hobby with in the hobby.

enjoy.

- Almost everyone here in RRSW has been "guilty"
- of posting non-shortwave material.
- It's about 80% of the traffic!

Now there is the basic 80% which leaves 20%

Then there is 80% of the left-over 20%; which is 16% for a revised total of 96%

Lastly there is 80% of the last 4% coming to 3.2%; which adds up a new total of 99.2%

Clearly 99.2% is very very very close to 99.73% of the normal universal of possibilities . . .

And the author of the above screed is a gutless coward, to scared to use his real name. An angry pussy who never joined the armed forces although he loved feeding his grotesquely fat gut while watching todays war.

Come on, coward, show us your stuff. Take up arms and march to the street were you will be arrested and put in the loony bin for the rest of your life.

You never fought in any war.

You wouldn't know a law if it hit you in the face.

You don't know what the constitution is or what it does.

But you really hate those evil commies.

Yeah, sure.....

"Jews always position themselves as mediators. These nasties hold it cardinal they accredit and interpret everything. Nothing has worth or meaning until it's pronounced upon by a generous scoop of shit in a hate hat. Nothing must be expressed save in jewish terms. Invaders become undocumented workers. Queers become gays. Freakins become African-Americans. Attack on Iraq becomes defense of America. Nothing is legitimate save Big Kike stamp off on it.

BK doesn't like it when a Sheehan steps forward and foghorns facts to fodder. Instantly, like mosquitoes at twilight, a flock of bloodthirsty kikes appears, buzzing and sucking and whining. Have you ever noticed that it is impossible to criticize jews and keep your character? The jews have literally billions of enemies worldwide, yet not a single one of them is an honest man of laudable motive. It is impossible to carry off this charade without controlling the media and a hell of a lot of other things too. The minute jew-criticism appears, the ashkenazis and appeaser annies begin the smear. No one ever opposed a loving kike except invidiously. Smear campaigns are media control in action. There are other aspects of media control, but day in day out, making horrible shrieks and gurgles to keep the goyish herd away from the healthy green fields is the workaday business of the controllers. Jews determine which issues may be debated, and in what terms. Jews make up more than fifty percent of the experts on both sides of these tiny debates. A few vetted goyim are allowed through to keep up the charade of democratic discussion. The Internet is the only medium that prevents the illusion of popular conformity with jewthink being carried off. All that is necessary for jews to maintain control is to create a congenial if bogus reality through television and the main dailies, and relentlessly enforce this orthodoxy through smear campaigns against any who breach it.

The death of a son is one of the few motives strong enough to drive average goy fodder to breach etiquette and speak truth to kikes. She must be shut down. How to do that? You can see the jews' uncertainty. They attack her, at the same time, as both a lefty and a nazi. Illogical, but in time they'll settle on an approach. Sometimes just throwing shit and see what sticks is the best way. How dare Sheehan value her own son more than the interests of Israel?

I say my son died for LIES. George Bush LIED to us and he knew he was LYING.

And none of the thick rancid honkings Limbaugh and the freeper patriotards can gainsay it. Remember that bushy came out of manly

Barbara, the wizened maw who asked why she should trouble her "beautiful mind" about the body bags coming back from Iraq. You know - the ones you never see, because they have to show you endless pictures of $440,000-compensated jews being "ethnically cleansed," sniff, yet again. Only an anti-Semite puts his own life before Israel. The jews are the one people on earth who routinely are absolved of guilt for that for which they and they alone are guilty. Isn't that odd?

There was a book in ordinary bookstores called "An Empire of Their Own". It was a pro-Jewish book but it showed that the Jews ran Hollywood.

Here are some quotes from a magazine for Jews called "Moment".
It is subtitled "The Jewish magazine for the 90's" These quotes are from the Aug 1996 edition after the Headline "Jews Run Hollywood - So What?":

"It makes no sense at all to try to deny the reality of Jewish power and prominence in popular culture. Any list of the most influential production executives at each of the major movie studios will produce a heavy majority of recognizably Jewish names."

"the famous Disney organization, which was founded by Walt Disney, a gentile Midwesterner who allegedly harbored anti-Semetic attitudes, now features Jewish personnel in nearly all its most powerful positions."

The head of Walt Disney studios is now the Jew Michael Eisner.
On studios that were bought out by the Japanese the magazine says:

"When Mitsushita took over MCA-Universal, they did nothing to undermine the unquestioned authority of Universal's legendary - and all Jewish - management triad of Lew Wasserman, Sid Scheinberg, and Tom Pollack."

Here are some quotes from the paper "Jews Control the Media and Rule America"
It may be rather out of date but it still explains why things are the way they are.

"American Broadcasting Companies (ABC), Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS), and National Broadcasting Company (NBC). Each of these three has been under the absolute control of a single man over a long enough period of time--ranging from 32 to 55 years--for him to staff the corporation at every level with officers of his choosing and then to place his imprint indelibly upon it. In each case that man has been a Jew.
"Until 1985, when ABC merged with Capital Cities Communications, Inc...the chairman of the board of directors and chief executive officer (CEO) of the network was Leonard Harry Goldenson, a Jew...In an interview in the April 1, 1985 issue of Newsweek, Goldenson boasted 'I built this company (ABC) from scratch.'"

"CBS was under the domination of William S. Paley for more than half a century. The son of immigrant Jews from Russia..."

"There has been no move by top G-E management to change the Jewish "profile" of NBC or to replace key Jewish personnel. To the contrary, new Jewish executives have been added: an example is Steve Friedman..."

"The man in charge of the television entertainment division at CBS is Jeff Sagansky. At ABC the entertainment division is run by two men....nearly all of the men who shape young Amercians' concept of reality, of good and evil, of permissible and impermissible behavior are Jews. In particular, Sagansky and Bloomberg are Jews. So is Tartikoff. Littlefield is the only Gentile who has had a significant role in TV entertainment programming in recent years."

"American Film magazine listed the top 10...entertainment companies and their CEOs...Time Warner Communications (Steven J Ross, Jew) Walt Disney Co. (Michael D. Eisner, Jew)...Of the 10 top entertainment CEOs listed above, eight are Jews."

"The Newhouse media empire provides an example of more than a lack of real competition among America's daily newspapers; it also illustrates the insatiable appetite Jews have shown for all organs of opinion... The Newhouse's own 31 daily newspapers, including several large and important ones, such as the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the Newark Star-Ledger, and the New Orleans Times-Picayune; the nation's largest trade book publishing conglomerate, Random House, with all its subsidiaries; Newhouse Broadcasting, consisting of 12 television broadcasting stations and 87 cable-TV systems, including some of the countries largest cable networks- the Sunday supplement Parade, with a circulation of more than 22 million copies per week; some two dozen major magazines, including the New Yorker, Vogue, Mademoiselle, Glamour, Vanity Fair, HQ, Bride's, Gentlemen's Quarterly, Self, Home&Garden...."

"Furthermore, even those newspapers still under Gentile ownership and management are so thoroughly dependent upon Jewish advertising..."

"the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, and the Washington Post. These three...are the newspapers which set trends and guidelines for nearly all others. They are the ones which decide what is news and what isn't, at national and international levels. They originate the news; the others merely copy it. And all three newspapers are in Jewish hands...The Sulzberger family also owns, through the New York Times Co. 36 other newspapers; twelve magazines, including McCall's and Family Circle..."

"New York's other newspapers are in no better hands than the Daily News. The New York Post is owned by billionaire Jewish real-estate developer Peter Kalikow. The Village Voice is the personal property of Leonard Stern, the billionaire Jewish owner of..."

"There are only three newsmagazines of any note published in the United States: Time, Newsweek, and U.S. News & World Report....The CEO of Time Warner Communications is Steven J. Ross, and he is a Jew. "Newsweek, as mentioned above, is published by the Washington Post Co., under the Jewess Katherine Meyer Graham..." "U.S. News & World Report... owned and published by Jewish real estate developer Mortimer B. Zuckerman..."

" The three largest book publishers...Random House... Simon & Schuster , and Time Inc. Book Co....All three are owned or controlled by Jews...The CEO of Simon & Schuster if Richard Snyder, and the president is Jeremy Kaplan; both are Jews too."

"Western Publishing...ranks first among publishers of children's books, with more than 50 per cent of the market. Its chairman and CEO is Richard Bernstein, a Jew."

"Jewish spokesmen customarily will use evasive tactics. "Ted Turner isn't a Jew!" they will announce..."

"We are doing more than merely giving them a decisive influence on our political system and virtual control of our government; we also are giving them control of the minds and souls of our children..."

Phd Mike got an ISP inquiry from someone masquerading as an "Administrator from Rec.Radio.Shortwave"...Mike posted the following drivel...

"...Someone from [here?] called my ISP masquerading as the administrator from RRS and had my ISP turn my internet broadband access off for posting non-shortwave material. This violates several aspects of the new federal internet harrassment laws. It was obviously simple enough to get my access back, but someone now faces federal investigation and prosecution.

It is considered grounds for parole revocation.

Let's see who now disappears. [MWB]

Liberals characterize Conservative policies as strawmen just as Conservatives characterize Liberal policies.

Its Conservative to support equal justice under the law. Its not to assume that just because we are not all equal that we cant have equal rights. To attribute virtue that is not there is just as bad as to miss it when it is.

tell that to all of the conservatives who marched in the streets in america on behalf of the german nazi party in the 1930's. tell that to today's conservatives who are trying to start genocide. its easy to start genocide, when you demonize and scapegoat the weak. the nuremburg laws were meant to take away the citizenship rights of certain groups, this made them look less than human, and allowed the rise of the final solution.
just sub liberal, muslim, mexican, homesexuals for jews, gypsies, etc., and you see modern conservatism at it again.

they were mostly liberals. the tories, those americans who were pro big business/pro king, were conservatives, and left america for canada and the british empire. the constitution is a liberal document.

changing the header will not change the facts.

former chairman of the RNC, who dehumanized, embarrassed, intimidated, and demonized gays in a typical conservative way, has proven once again the self loathing of a conservative in the final decay of conservatism, fascism

in the final decay of conservatism, the conservative looks for the fascist superman, who will be willing to dehumanize their fellow citizens in a attempt to induce genocide.

here are the three 3 phases of conservative decay.
1.conservatism(policies always fail)
2. libertarianism(the drive for purity, the conservative polices and those that implemented them, were not pure enough)
3. fascism(the rise of the strong man to ensure purity, the strongman will drive out the impure, liberals, jews, immigrants, trade unionists, communists, socialists, those mental and physical defects, gypsies, etc. this to fails on a huge scale. just look what happened to the central european fascists. they collapsed their economies, and came up millions of workers and soldiers short.

Former RNC Chairman Ken Mehlman Comes Out: I'm Gay
First Posted: 08-25-10 06:08 PM | Updated: 08-25-10 10:32 PM

Ken Mehlman, who headed the Republican National Committee between 2005 and 2007, has come out in an interview with the Atlantic's Marc Ambinder:
Mehlman arrived at this conclusion about his identity fairly recently, he said in an interview. He agreed to answer a reporter's questions, he said, because, now in private life, he wants to become an advocate for gay marriage and anticipated that questions would be asked about his participation in a late-September fundraiser for the American Foundation for Equal Rights (AFER), the group that supported the legal challenge to California's ballot initiative against gay marriage, Proposition 8.
"It's taken me 43 years to get comfortable with this part of my life," Mehlman said. "Everybody has their own path to travel, their own journey, and for me, over the past few months, I've told my family, friends, former colleagues, and current colleagues, and they've been wonderful and supportive. The process has been something that's made me a happier and better person. It's something I wish I had done years ago."

Mehlman headed the RNC when the Republican Party was pushing anti-gay initiatives and increasingly speaking out against marriage equality. Former RNC Chairman Ed Gillespie and Mehlman's longtime friend called Mehlman's coming-out "significant," but added that he remains opposed to gay marriage.

- There is one frequency around 7 or 8 MHz where
- all the numbers are in Spanish, but at the end the
- female announcer says "good night" in English.

WOW - I just heard that tonight - nats ~ RHF

* nats = now ain't that something . . .

5880 Khz @ 07:20 UTC Spanish Numbers Station YL reading 5# Sets and at 07:41 UTC closed with 'Good-Night' & 'Good-Night' {twice} in English but after listening to the Spanish for 20 Minutes the Good-Night sounded like '10-9' which might have been her 'englanish' :o)

Also on 5898 kHz @ 08:15 UTC there was also a Spanish Numbers Station YL reading 5# Sets and she repeated '22262' 5Xs in a row.

While Radio Habana Cuba [RHC] was heard in the 49 Metre SW Band http://www.rhc.cu/ingles/index.htm
5970 kHz @ 08:28 UTC with the RHC Chime ID
6060 kHz @ 08:41 UTC with the 'Voice of the Revolution' Sp. ID 6120 kHz @ 08:45 UTC with the 'This is Radio Habana Cuba'
Eng & Sp IDs followed by more Multi-Language IDs 6150 kHz @ 08:58 UTC with RHC ID

It is then highly doubtful that 'Gays' are Going Away . . .
Then again 'Movements' Change and Evolve Too . . .

No they will simply realize that They are People of Their Times;

NnUa,

Yours is a biased 'one sided' view of a very multi-faceted world : Try Using Both Eyes.

So Lenin was a Dehumanizing Conservative who Committed Genocide . . .

So Stalin was a Dehumanizing Conservative
who Committed Genocide . . .

So Hitler was a Dehumanizing Conservative

he seems to think that democrat and liberal means the same thing, and they do not. we see that its true today, many democrats are conservatives.

Jews say that being "anti-Semitic" is a terrible crime. Do they say being "anti-Arab" is a terrible crime? What about "anti-Christian", or "anti-German"? Of course the Jews think they are special. Any other group could be our enemy, but not the Jews, they say. The Jews tell us the Arabs are our enemies. The Jewish controlled media tells us that the Jews are America's only friend in the Middle East. The truth is that before these Jews America didn't have any enemies in the Middle East.

No one is moaning because America once fought the British. But suddenly Jews can not be the enemy under any circumstances. Why is that? Because the Jews control the media. Think outside the box.

Now that America is ruled by the Jews it is no insult to be called "anti-Semite". The insult is that they think we care about their self serving verbiage.

The Jewish controlled media said the French were "cheese eating surrender monkeys". Why can't the French howl "anti-French" like the Jews howl "anti-Semite"? Because the French don't control the media, Jews do.

This is what President Nixon said:

http://www.hnn.us/comments/15664.html

"There may be some truth in that if the Arabs have some complaints about my policy towards Israel, they have to realize that the Jews in the U.S. control the entire information and propaganda machine, the large newspapers, the motion pictures, radio and television, and the big companies. And there is a force that we have to take into consideration."

This goes along with Hitler's being stupid enough to STOP attacking Britain JUST before he could have conquered them, and being MORONIC enough to invade Russia after seeing (in history) what had happened to Napoleon.

Clearly, Hitler was FAR from being the sharpest toothpick in the cutlery shop. Too bad he was able to con so many others into falling for his stupidity.

Dave,

And didn't those so-called "Dixiecrats" belong to the Democrat Party of the USA at the time and Work Against the Civil Rights Act of 1964 ?

Also did not the so-called Southern Strategy come about after the Passing of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 ?

The Liberals and Media viewed the Dixiecrats" in the Democrat Party of the USA as 'good' Americans when they were Democrats and Voted Democratic -but- when they became Republicans and Voted Republican then these same former "Dixiecrats" became Evil Un-Americans and were Attacked by the Media and Hated by Liberals.

The Democrat Party of the USA is Controlled by Liberal 'Progressive' Elitists who are focused on World Socialism and Building a Better World at the Expens of the USA and American US Citizens.

=WRT= The so-called 'moderate' democrats; and the very few 'conservative' democrats; the Party Leadership welcomea trhem to take a Seat at the back of the Bus and be quiet. Collectively the moderates and conservatives lack the numbers and the political will to take-back control of the Democrat Party of the USA and make the Party once again an American Centered and USA First Political Action Movement like in the days of HST, HHH, JFK and LBJ.

"T",

So do all these 'Quotes' reflect your feelings and thoughts -or- Are you posting them as a Straw-Man for us to attack for you . . . ~ RHF

Basically it is a Logical Fallacy that -if- All of Humanity was 'blended' and we were all "Ocra" a Yellow&Brown&Black&White Mix
http://www.europeancabinets.com/images/color_finishes/kitchen-cabinets-giallo-ocra.jpg

Concluding {Assuming} that there would be NO Racism because we would all be of One 'Blended' Common {Every-Man} Race.

? Are Races and Perceived Racial Differences the Root of the Racial "Racism" Problem ?
-or-
? Are There Underlying Causes* of Racism ?
* Built into the Human Psyche
? Maybe Racism 'exists' because of Human Knowledge and Wisdom -or- the lack of the same ?

? Can Racism is based in 'feelings' of the unknown, Bias, Bigotry, Fear, Anger and Hate ?
Resulting in Acts of Discrimination and Violence.

=IF= We Were All of One Race : Would these 'feelings'* really all go away ?
* Many doubt that the 'feelings' would;
-and- So then what 'Ism' would the World then turn-to to channel each individuals 'feelings' of the unknown, Bias, Bigotry, Fear, Anger and Hate and Acts of Violence.

Going Beyond Racism :
Often it has been speculated that after all the 'Ism's have been conquered by Humanity the last 'Ism' will be Sex-Ism and we would all become A-Sexual -or- There would be a War between the Sexes and that would be the End of Humanity as we know it either way.

Yeah, Jimmah Carter is a "useful idiot" all right.

Seeing as you are so good at researching things and attaching reams of URL references to your posts, maybe you could research George W. Bush and give us references on:

* who W rescued from jail (compared to your "useful idiot")

* the work W did with Habitat for Humanity (compared to your "useful idiot")

* W's sterling attendance record in the Texas Air Guard (compared to your "useful idiot's" Navy career)

* and finally, you can tell us all about W's Nobel Prize. (compared to your "useful idiot")

Heck of a job, Georgie!

All of my old clunkers were OLD when I bought them, I paid cash money for each one of them.I know NOT of that thar new car smell.Eggsept, when I was a kid, once in a blue moon, back in the 1950's, I would get to one or two new car auto dealerships and look at the new cars.I don't really remember that thar new car smell nowadays.I don't remember what that new 1958 Oldsmobile new car smell smelled like.

I don't even wants a new car now, they done made em wayyyyyyyyyy too damn complicated for me to work on, I would have to learn up on them new fangled vehicles and that computerized SH!T and buy new weird looking tools and electronic diagnostic gadgets, SCREW That!!! My old clunkers are EASY for me to work on.

That's good to hear - they must be allowed now so the U.S. will continue to defend them when the North gets frisky. SsangYong is an interesting company - did seminars for them too. They build and export with Mercedes nameplates, but they're Korean 100%. (Not touted as Mercedes, just with the logos.)

That's why I explain there is no recession - just a change in core economic structure. Highly-vertically integrated production won't return to the United States for generations, if ever. Lifestyles must be lowered. Severe deflation, painful but necessary, would level the playing field with "developing" countries, but it has to be controlled and planned, not accidental.

Let's say the Germans merely removed the Jews from positions of political power and banned them from the legal profession. Germany went from devastating economic poverty in 1932 to full employment just a couple years later. If an incredible economic improvement can be achieved, merely by removing the Jews from power (and replacing them with patriotic nationalists), then every Gentile nation in the world should give this a try.

Obviously the Jews don't want anyone else getting the idea of removing them to create prosperity. The Jews control the mass media in most Western countries. Most people don't know about the Balfour Declaration. During World War One, Zionist Jews offered to use their control of the press to bring America into World War One if Britain would promise them Palestine. This offer was dubbed the Balfour Declaration. If the Jews had enough media control and influence to push America into World War One in 1917, what else have they done with their power?

It was a huge embarrassment for the Jews to see Germany so prosperous in the mid-1930s after removing them from power. They considered this a dangerous precedent. To deal with this "problem" the Jewish World Congress declared war on Germany in 1933. This declaration of war at least encouraged a world-wide boycott against Germany and at worst encouraged other nations of the world to become hostile toward Germany. (The Jews curiously sanctioned the Germans before the Germans passed any laws restricting the Jews.) More importantly the Jews pushed vicious anti-German slander in all the Jewish-owned newspapers in the West in the years leading up to World War Two. The Communist mass murder of 30 million people in Russia and the Ukraine received almost no publicity in the Jewish media. Most people in the West only heard a serious mention of these Communist mass murders beginning in the 1980s. Instead, the Jewish media focused all their hatred and agitation against Germany and its allies.

After six years of relentless agitation, the Jews pushed England and France into war with Germany. Only two years later, FDR and his cabal of Jews provoked a war with Japan (and Germany).

Naturally, the Jews did not want future historians to say: "World War Two was provoked by the Jewish media in retaliation for Germany removing the Jews from power." The Jews needed a new reason for World War Two. A reason that painted their enemies as unquestionably evil. So they invented the Holocaust.

The Holocaust stood mostly unchallenged for decades after the war because people feared being branded "Nazi-sympathizers" for questioning its details. The truth always comes out in the long run. Professor Arthur Butz published his famous work "The Hoax of the 20th Century" in 1977 detailing a very solid argument against this war propaganda. Dr. Butz pointed out that the world population of Jews remained at about 16 million before and after the war. He also noted that half a million Jews remained in Paris after four years of German occupation. Both these facts strongly suggest the Holocaust is a fraud, but the political power of the Jews has suppressed and punished any public questioning of the Holocaust to this day. David Irving joined the ranks of Revisionist historians several years ago and went from a famous successful author to a pariah thanks to persecution by the Jews.

The Institute for Historical Review has done great work exposing the Holocaust as a great historical fraud. Anyone interested in looking for historical truth should visit their website. It's a shock for many people to see how much propaganda we've been force fed.

The current situation in the United States is really an awesome display of Jewish power and influence. People who are very strongly identified as Jews maintain close ties to Israeli politicians and military figures and to Jewish activist organizations and pro-Israeli lobbying groups while occupying influential policy-making positions in the defense and foreign policy establishment. These same people, as well as a chorus of other prominent Jews, have routine access to the most prestigious media outlets in the United States. People who criticize Israel are routinely vilified and subjected to professional abuse.

Perhaps the most telling feature of this entire state of affairs is the surreal fact that in this entire discourse Jewish identity is not mentioned. When Charles Krauthammer, Bill Kristol, Michael Rubin, William Safire, Robert Satloff, or the legions of other prominent media figures write their reflexively pro-Israel pieces in the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, or the Los Angeles Times, or opine on the Fox News Network, there is never any mention that they are Jewish Americans who have an intense ethnic interest in Israel. When Richard Perle authors a report for an Israeli think tank; is on the board of directors of an Israeli newspaper; maintains close personal ties with prominent Israelis, especially those associated with the Likud Party; has worked for an Israeli defense company; and, according to credible reports, was discovered by the FBI passing classified information to Israel - when, despite all of this, he is a central figure in the network of those pushing for wars to rearrange the entire politics of the Middle East in Israel's favor, and with nary a soul having the courage to mention the obvious overriding Jewish loyalty apparent in Perle's actions, that is indeed a breathtaking display of power.

One must contemplate the fact that American Jews have managed to maintain unquestioned support for Israel over the last thirty-seven years, despite Israel's seizing land and engaging in a brutal suppression of the Palestinians in the occupied territories - an occupation that will most likely end with expulsion or complete subjugation, degradation, and apartheid. During the same period Jewish organizations in America have been a principal force - in my view the main force - for transforming America into a state dedicated to suppressing ethnic identification among Europeans, for encouraging massive multiethnic immigration into the U.S., and for erecting a legal system and cultural ideology that is obsessively sensitive to the complaints and interests of non-European ethnic minorities - the culture of the Holocaust. All this is done without a whisper of double standards in the aboveground media...

Liberating America From Israel

by Paul Findley

Nine-eleven would not have occurred if the U.S. government had refused to help Israel humiliate and destroy Palestinian society. Few express this conclusion publicly, but many believe it is the truth. I believe the catastrophe could have been prevented if any U.S. president during the past 35 years had had the courage and wisdom to suspend all U.S. aid until Israel withdrew from the Arab land seized in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

The U.S. lobby for Israel is powerful and intimidating, but any determined president-even President Bush this very day-could prevail and win overwhelming public support for the suspension of aid by laying these facts before the American people:

Israel's present government, like its predecessors, is determined to annex the West Bank-biblical Judea and Samaria - so Israel will become Greater Israel. Ultra-Orthodox Jews, who maintain a powerful role in Israeli politics, believe the Jewish Messiah will not come until Greater Israel is a reality. Although a minority in Israel, they are committed, aggressive, and influential. Because of deep religious conviction, they are determined to prevent Palestinians from gaining statehood on any part of the West Bank.

In its violent assaults on Palestinians, Israel uses the pretext of eradicating terrorism, but its forces are actually engaged advancing the territorial expansion just cited. Under the guise of anti-terrorism, Israeli forces treat Palestinians worse than cattle. With due process nowhere to be found, hundreds are detained for long periods and most are tortured. Some are assassinated. Homes, orchards, and business places are destroyed. Entire cities are kept under intermittent curfew, some confinements lasting for weeks. Injured or ill Palestinians needing emergency medical care are routinely held at checkpoints for an hour or more. Many children are undernourished. The West Bank and Gaza have become giant concentration camps. None of this could have occurred without U.S. support. Perhaps Israeli officials believe life will become so unbearable that most Palestinians will eventually leave their ancestral homes.

Once beloved worldwide, the U.S. government finds itself reviled in most countries because it provides unconditional support of Israeli violations of the United Nations Charter, international law, and the precepts of all major religious faiths.

How did the American people get into this fix?

Nine-eleven had its principal origin 35 years ago when Israel's U.S. lobby began its unbroken success in stifling debate about the proper U.S. role in the Arab-Israeli conflict and effectively concealed from public awareness the fact that the U.S. government gives massive uncritical support to Israel.

Thanks to the suffocating influence of Israel's U.S. lobby, open discussion of the Arab-Israeli conflict has been non-existent in our government all these years. I have firsthand knowledge, because I was a member of the House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee in June 1967 when Israeli military forces took control of the Golan Heights, a part of Syria, as well as the Palestinian West Bank and Gaza. I continued as a member for 16 years and to this day maintain a close watch on Congress.

For 35 years, not a word has been expressed in that committee or in either chamber of Congress that deserves to be called debate on Middle East policy. No restrictive or limiting amendments on aid to Israel have been offered for 20 years, and none of the few offered in previous years received more than a handful of votes. On Capitol Hill, criticism of Israel, even in private conversation, is all but forbidden, treated as downright unpatriotic, if not anti-Semitic. The continued absence of free speech was assured when those few who spoke out-Senators Adlai Stevenson and Charles Percy, and Reps. Paul "Pete" McCloskey, Cynthia McKinney, Earl Hilliard, and myself-were defeated at the polls by candidates heavily financed by pro-Israel forces.

As a result, legislation dealing with the Middle East has been heavily biased in favor of Israel and against Palestinians and other Arabs year after year. Home constituencies, misled by news coverage equally lop-sided in Israel's favor, remain largely unaware that Congress behaves as if it were a subcommittee of the Israeli parliament.

However, the bias is widely noted beyond America, where most news media candidly cover Israel's conquest and generally excoriate America's complicity and complacency. When President Bush welcomed Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, sometimes called the Butcher of Beirut, as "my dear friend" and "a man of peace" after Israeli forces, using U.S.-donated arms, completed their devastation of the West Bank last spring, worldwide anger against American policy reached the boiling point.

The fury should surprise no one who reads foreign newspapers or listens to BBC. In several televised statements long before 9/11, Osama bin Laden, believed by U.S. authorities to have masterminded 9/11, cited U.S. complicity in Israel's destruction of Palestinian society as a principal complaint. Prominent foreigners, in and out of government, express their opposition to U.S. policies with unprecedented frequency and severity, especially since Bush announced his determination to make war against Iraq.

The lobby's intimidation remains pervasive. It seems to reach every government center and even houses of worship and revered institutions of higher learning. It is highly effective in silencing the many U.S. Jews who object to the lobby's tactics and Israel's brutality...

Today, a year after 9/11, President Bush has made no attempt to redress grievances, or even to identify them. In fact, he has made the scene far worse by supporting Israel's religious war against Palestinians, an alliance that has intensified anti-American anger. He seems oblivious to the fact that nearly two billion people worldwide regard the plight of Palestinians as today's most important foreign-policy challenge. No one in authority will admit a calamitous reality that is skillfully shielded from the American people but clearly recognized by most of the world: America suffered 9/11 and its aftermath and may soon be at war with Iraq, mainly because U.S. policy in the Middle East is made in Israel, not in Washington.

Israel is a scofflaw nation and should be treated as such. Instead of helping Sharon intensify Palestinian misery, our president should suspend all aid until Israel ends its occupation of Arab land Israel seized in 1967. The suspension would force Sharon's compliance or lead to his removal from office, as the Israeli electorate will not tolerate a prime minister who is at odds with the White House.

If Bush needs an additional reason for doing the right thing, he can justify the suspension as a matter of military necessity, an essential step in winning international support for his war on terrorism. He can cite a worthy precedent. When President Abraham Lincoln issued the proclamation that freed only the slaves in states that were then in rebellion, he make the restriction because of "military necessity."

If Bush suspends U.S. aid, he will liberate all Americans from long years of bondage to Israel's misdeeds.

Mr. Paul Findley, who served as a Republican congressman from Illinois for 22 years, is the author of 'They Dare to Speak Out' and a member of the American Educational Trust's Foreign Relations Committee.

Stalin Prepared for Summer 1941 Attack Institute for Historical Review
http://www.ihr.org/jhr/v06/v06p501a_Weber.html

.. .. Suvorov assembles impressive evidence to show that Stalin was preparing to attack Germany in 1941. Suvorov writes that on June 13, 1941, Stalin secretly began "the biggest troop movement in the history of civilization," transferring enormous military forces to the Soviet-German frontier. The Soviet troops were deployed there not for defense, but in preparation for a surprise invasion. "It seems certain," writes Suvorov, "that the Soviet concentration on the frontier was due to be completed by July 10. Thus, the German blow which fell just 19 days earlier found the Red Army in the most unfavorable situation -- in railway waggons."

The Nazis and Hitler Saved Us
The really bad guys in World War 2 were the western allies, especially the Americans. The monumental blindness and stupidity, unmatched barbarism and sadism of America and Britain nearly brought a new Dark Age upon a world dominated, not by them, but by the Soviet Union and communism, Although the Nazis and fascists lost the war-their heroic struggle with hardly any resources against overwhelming odds allowed western civilization to survive. After 1945, it was the atomic bomb, far above and beyond everything else, which allowed the west to survive, even to this day-but before that, it was ADOLF HITLER who saved us. For that he deserves our eternal gratitude and admiration. It was HITLER who built and inspired the small coalition of the willing to fight the good war against communism. By launching the attack on the Soviet Union on June 22, 1941 with only conventional weapons, HITLER and Germany, and Germany's allies pre-empted STALIN's well-prepared and massive attack to the west, and postponed a complete Soviet victory long enough for the US and Britain to finally come to their senses. The US and Britain eventually took up essentially the same struggle with nuclear weapons, or at least the threat of nuclear weapons, even when that meant possible destruction of all life on the planet.

Last week I went on safari to a spectacular game ranch with my trusty Redsun RP2100 (same as CCradio=SW) and the tiny little Grundig G8.
The game viewing was marvellous and radio reception was good. See:
http://www.sanbona.com/properties/default.asp

Stations heard on the RP2100 were:- 1521,1512 & 1440 Saudi Arabia
1557 Nice France (8700 km's/5400 miles away)
1377 R. Free Afrika Tanzania
1296 Sudan
1170 R Sawa Al Dubbiya UAE

SW great reception of English service of BBC, Deutsche Welle & R.
Nederland
Great FM reception of the Ladismith station 160km/100miles away

The RP2100 is frankly the best portable I have ever used, and that includes a Sony 2010.
For fifty bucks the tiny little Grundig G8 is also an good performer.

Anyone who would like to see my game pictures can request them at

It's OK. Disease will kill off 2/3 of the world's population in the next 15-20 years.

There seems to be a great deal of variation in the ratings. A few of the users seem to have gotten poor workmanship. Those that had good sets were very happy.

That's true.

But a synchronous detector will give you a 6 dB advantage over receiving an AM signal as SSB with a product detector.

I tried a Sony 7600 with the Sync function and was greatly underwhelmed.
Perhaps my sample was faulty. I wound up buying the Sangean 909 instead.

Liberty Net: August 21, 2010

http://3950.net/2010/08/liberty-net-august-21-2010/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE LIBERTY NET enjoyed good propagation and even more high-IQ debate and conversation than usual this week, and the uncensored ideas flowed freely in a way that you simply cannot experience in the corporate media.

Hereï¿½s a tiny sampling of the topics covered this week on amateur radioï¿½s longest-running discussion net:

ï¿½ Now that preparations are being made for starting a new war against yet another of Israelï¿½s enemies, this time Iran, the controlled media and the regime in Washington are suddenly acting as if the Iraq War is over. But that isnï¿½t true: The violence, terror, heartbreak, and death ï¿½ both for the deluded American cannon fodder and the innocent Iraqis ï¿½ is adding up more than ever. (28 minutes)

ï¿½ The brouhaha over the ï¿½ground zero mosqueï¿½ (a phrase the media have been asked not to use) misses the point: There should be no Middle Eastern immigration to the U.S. and never should have been; then the question of mosques would never come up. (23 minutes)

ï¿½ Neocon operative John Bolton said four days ago that Israel had just ï¿½three days to bomb Iranï¿½ (because Iran had built a nuclear power plant similar to the perfectly peaceful one a few miles from here in Virginia). Itï¿½s good to see that at least the most insane of the warmongers donï¿½t always get their way. (9 minutes)

ï¿½ The North Korean government is reported to be behind a flood of flawless counterfeit $100 bills. Are the North Korean bills any more counterfeit than the money created by the Fed and the commercial banking system? (10 minutes)

ï¿½ As America turns into a Third World country, we are also experiencing a resurgence of Third World infestations of a non-human kind. For example, bedbugs have started to become common again in New York City, with the latest outbreak taking place in the Empire State Building. (32 minutes)

ï¿½ The media have almost stopped reporting bank failures, probably in order to give the impression that ï¿½things have settled down,ï¿½ but the truth is that banks continue to fail at an accelerated rate ï¿½ four in this week alone. (49 minutes)

ï¿½ There is a grisly trade in human body parts taking place in Obamaï¿½s home country of Kenya ï¿½ the organs and limbs of albinos are believed to have magical powers, and an enterprising witch doctor there can make a quarter million dollars on each body. The thriving trade, which involves the abduction and murder of the victims, is technically illegal. (1 hour 22 minutes)

ï¿½ The push to build a mosque near the twin towers site is being promoted by the same people who made sure that 9/11 happened ï¿½ and, surprise surprise, those people are not Muslims or Arabs, though their ancestry is Middle Eastern. (1 hour 30 minutes)

ï¿½ Since Obama cannot legally be President (on numerous indisputable legal grounds besides his citizenship), none of the acts he signs can possibly be law and cannot ï¿½ indeed, must not ï¿½ be regarded as such by citizens, soldiers, or judges. It didnï¿½t start with Obama, though ï¿½ the same is true of all of the edicts of the regime in Washington going back many decades. (2 hours 1 minute)

The Liberty Net is amateur radioï¿½s longest-running current events net, beginning in 1974 ï¿½ with Net Control station W1WCR at the helm then as today.

You can listen and chat live while the Net is on the air (at 10 PM Eastern Time every Saturday night on or within 10 kHz or so of 3950 kHz) via N2SAG, N2IRJ, and other stations who link their streaming audio at stickam.com. If you have an amateur radio license, feel free to check in. And, as always, you can download the latest mp3 recording of the Net right here at http://3950.net and listen at your leisure.

> A 6 dB advantage compared to what?

Over using a product detector, when used to receive the same AM signal.

That's because when a sync detector uses the phasing method of cancelling the interference from one sideband or the other, it does not cancel the desired audio from either sideband.

Selectable-sideband sync detectors have two detectors, or "channels," the I (or in-phase) channel and the Q (or quadrature phase) channel.

The Q detector output contains essentially _no_ audio from the desired signal (the detector's locally generated carrier is locked at 90 degrees difference from the transmitted or suppressed carrier, putting the desired audio into a deep null), and therefore no cancellation of any part of the desired signal takes place -- even though cancellation of the interference does take place.

Since a conventional product detector, even one using the phasing method of sideband selection, doesn't phase lock to the incoming signal, it cancels both the desired and undesired signals in the opposite sideband, which gives 6 dB lower desired signal level (it's twice the 3 dB you'd intuitively think it was because in DSB, the sidebands add coherently, giving 3 dB conversion gain).

With all good wishes,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

That is because the entire Communist philosophy was garbage.

Hitler said on 19 July 1940: "My intention was never to wage war, but to build a new social state with the highest level of culture. Each year of war keeps me from this work."

From a German pamphlet:

Do you remember the state of Germany and the German people in the days before the aged Reich President von Hindenburg chose Adolf Hitler and his party as the last hope of saving Germany from certain political, social and economic collapse that would lead to chaos? Tens of thousands of factories had closed their gates. Millions of workers and employees lost their jobs and were thrown ruthlessly into the gray misery of mass unemployment. There seemed no way out...
By the end of 1933, 2 million citizens had jobs again. By September 1936, the number of unemployed had fallen beneath a million. By 1937 unemployment had vanished...
One of the foundations of National Socialism is the knowledge that only work creates value and prosperity...
But not only the dreadful misery before 1933 reduced the desire of countless Germans to have children. Crass egotism and materialism also played a role. The System Era saw having children as foolish and backward. The transformation that has occurred is clear in the rising German birth rate...
The National Socialist state gives major tax reductions to fathers for each child. Families with three or more children receive payments of 10 and 20 marks monthly. By the end of 1937, 510,000 children were receiving such support...
By the end of 1937, 252,000 mothers had received free vacations...
The Winterhilfswerk is the most beautiful expression of the new German people's community. It is not the work of a small group of rich people. No, each German, all of us, rich and poor, manual laborers, farmers and city-dwellers cooperate in fulfilling the Fï¿½hrer's will: No German may be hungry or cold!

One does not know whom to admire more: the cheerful willingness of those who collect, or the rising amount of the gifts, to which even the poorest contribute their share. The success of the Winterhilfswerk, written permanently into the law of 1 December 1936, demonstrates the efforts of the entire German nation. Gifts of money alone totaled over 920 million marks during the four winters from 1933/34 to 1936/37. An additional 570 million marks of goods were contributed. 50,000 freight cars alone would have been needed for the potatoes contributed in the past years. The three million meters of clothing given out by the WHW would stretch from Berlin to the Middle East. The two million kilograms of coal would form a wall ten meters high around all of Germany. These few examples, and more could be given, prove the strength of the German people's will to be active socialists..
Another sign of this socialism is the entirely different status of the German worker in factories. The social honor of each working German is guaranteed by law. The state's representatives ensure that exploiting workers is impossible. The legal working conditions correspond to National Socialism's high opinion of work. Workers have a right to a vacation and for paid holidays, even hourly and temporary workers. There is nothing like this elsewhere in the world.
The dignity of labor is evidenced by improvements in the appearance of the work place. Wherever one looks in Germany, ugly dark buildings are vanishing. The "Beauty of Labor" movement in today's Germany is not empty talk or an impossible demand, but living reality. Large sums that formerly would have been wasted in strikes and lockouts have been used since 1933 to improve work places. 23,000 places have been transformed form soulless drudgery to pleasant places to work. 6,000 factory courtyards now offer space for real relaxation, which was not true in the past. 17,000 canteens and lounges, 13,000 shower and changing rooms have been transformed. The dirtier the work, the cleaner the workers. More than 800 community buildings and 1200 sport facilities , including over 200 swimming pools, have been established. The crew quarters in over 3500 ships have also been improved.
The NS Society Kraft durch Freude brings cheer and pleasure to workplaces through concerts and art exhibits. The art exhibits alone introduced more than 2,5 million workers to the creations of true German art. Just five years ago, it was obvious that the great works of German culture belonged to a small group of the upper class. Besides the factory concerns and art exhibitions, the NS Society Kraft durch Freude uses theatrical performances, other concerts, singing and musical groups to introduce the creations of German art to every working German. 22 million citizens have attended theatrical performances..
Of no less importance is the KdF's vacation program. Earlier, German workers did not know what to do with their, at best, five days of annual vacation. They could not visit the beauties of the German landscape, much less travel abroad. The NS Society Kraft durch Freude gave German workers the possibility of vacationing at the beach or in the mountains, or to explore the homeland. Over 20 million have participated in KdF trips since 1934. That is more than a quarter of Germany's population. 19 million citizens participated in 60,000 vacation trips at home. Hand to hand, they would stretch from Berlin to Tokyo. KdF trains have traveled 2,160,000 kilometers, or 54 times around the world. The nine large KdF cruise ships have covered a distance equal to twice the distance from the earth to the moon. They have carried German workers to Madeira, Italy and Norway, broadening their horizons and giving them unforgettable experiences. Three additional ships will be added the KdF's own fleet of four. A KdF resort is being built on the island of Rï¿½gen. It will not be the only one. A series of other vacation and spa resorts will be built. They will fulfill the Fï¿½hrer's wishes at the start of the NS Society Kraft durch Freude: to lead a cheerful, creative and strong people to success in the world.

The goal of bringing German culture to the entire German people, regardless of their income, is especially clear with the German radio. Thanks to the People's Radio Set, a solid, inexpensive and capable receiver, the number of radio listeners has risen from around 4 million in 1932 to 9.1 million today. The un-German programming of the System Era has been transformed by National Socialism. Now radio acquaints the German people with the work of their great masters of music and literature. Alongside these artistic programs, the entertaining programming provides for the relaxation of hard-working people.
Clear proof for the rising prosperity of the German people is provided by the growing consumption of foodstuffs and luxury items of every variety. During the prewar year 1913, only a little more than 2.9 million tons of meat were consumed. In 1937, that figure had risen to 3.7 million, up about 5% from 1932. Thanks to the elimination of unemployment, bread consumption increased by about 10%, sugar by 15%. Butter consumption rose from 420,000 to 519,000 tons. Milk production, both for drinking and for making butter and cheese, rose from 23.5 to 25.4 billion liters from 1932 to 1937. Coffee consumption rose from 104,000 to 140,000 tons. Beer consumption has risen from 3.3 to 4.4 billion liters. That is an increase of about 3 billion glasses of beer...
The growing prosperity and rising consumption of foodstuffs and luxury items required hard work. A people can only consume what it produces. In the face of this obvious truth, which however only became clear to us after 1933, all the parliamentary resolutions, all the decisions of international conferences and the demands of the international unions become silly talk. The German people have proved that by our own work. Germany has worked untiringly since 1933, producing itself the goods it needs to improve its standard of living.
The rising production in all areas, which has never before been seen, is the fruit of our work. The foundation of our life is agriculture, whose task is to guarantee that the nation is fed. When the Fï¿½hrer took power, agriculture was in a ruinous state. Officers of the court were regular visitors at German farms. The animals and the harvest were seized ruthlessly because taxes and interests had risen to impossible levels that German soil could not meet. Forced auctions drove tens of thousands of German farmers from their land. Desperation prevailed in the villages. As a result of the desperate situation, agriculture could not ensure the feeding of the German nation. The ghost of hunger threatened.

Here too the Fï¿½hrer set to work immediately. Interest and taxes were lowered, and the German soil was freed from usurious capital. Between 1927 and 1931, German agricultural debt rose by 2,9 billion marks. From 1933 to 1936, it fell by 800 million marks. The interest burden, which was over a billion marks in 1931/32, was reduced by National Socialist actions to 630 million marks. The crowning achievement was the creation of the Reich Inherited Farm Law, which guaranteed that the German family farm will always remain the wellspring of the nation...
Just as for farmers and agricultural workers, the urban population is also being cared for. Although more than enough willing and able workers were available in 1932, and although the housing need was certainly great, the government put workers on the dole and built only 141,265 dwellings. This was an area in which the need for new jobs was particularly clear. Even in 1933, the number of new dwellings rose to 178,000, with particular attention being given to small and mid-sized units for those with limited incomes. This number grew year by year, reaching 340,000 dwellings in 1937, double the number of 1932. In all, National Socialist has built more than 1.4 million new, and above all healthy and affordable, dwellings for the German people since 1933. This is enough to house the entire population of Berlin...
Growing prosperity and production led to a growth in traffic. The entirely neglected German highway system had to be repaired and expanded. 40,000 kilometers of highway have been repaired since 1933. That is enough to go all the way around the world! Then there are the Reich Autobahns, the most splendid construction project in the world. 2,000 kilometers were open to traffic by the end of 1937. 1,000 kilometers more will be added yearly, until Germany has a highway network unique in all the world.
Automobile production has reached a level that no one would have thought possible a few years ago.
The number of motor vehicles in Germany has doubled, exceeding the 3 million mark in 1937. Thanks to the growing prosperity, broad circles of our nation can now afford a car. 137,141 of the new vehicles in 1937, well over half, were purchased by workers and employees. 30,015 workers and employees were able to buy a car the previous year. Cars are becoming both better and cheaper. The increase in cars will be even more striking when the Volkswagen comes on the market. Enormous factories are even now being built. The best proof for the quality and good pricing of German cars is the fact that automobile exports have increased by a factor of eight since 1932!..
The great improvements in the German transportation system have resulted in a growing stream of foreign visitors. The pulsing life in Germany is drawing more and more visitors to the Third Reich. The number of overnights by foreigners has risen from 2.7 million in 1932 is far above 7 million in 1937. These foreigners, who often come to Germany with false ideas, see with their own eyes the work of the Fï¿½hrer and the remarkable efforts of the German people. They return home as the best witnesses of the greatness and strength of the German Reich...

The Fï¿½hrer has repeatedly reminded the German people that strong policies are the absolute prerequisite to our economic, social and cultural health. Only intentional hostility and stupidity can still deny that the Fï¿½hrer was right in every respect...

The current situation in the United States is really an awesome display of Jewish power and influence. People who are very strongly identified as Jews maintain close ties to Israeli politicians and military figures and to Jewish activist organizations and pro-Israeli lobbying groups while occupying influential policy-making positions in the defense and foreign policy establishment. These same people, as well as a chorus of other prominent Jews, have routine access to the most prestigious media outlets in the United States. People who criticize Israel are routinely vilified and subjected to professional abuse.

Perhaps the most telling feature of this entire state of affairs is the surreal fact that in this entire discourse Jewish identity is not mentioned. When Charles Krauthammer, Bill Kristol, Michael Rubin, William Safire, Robert Satloff, or the legions of other prominent media figures write their reflexively pro-Israel pieces in the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, or the Los Angeles Times, or opine on the Fox News Network, there is never any mention that they are Jewish Americans who have an intense ethnic interest in Israel. When Richard Perle authors a report for an Israeli think tank; is on the board of directors of an Israeli newspaper; maintains close personal ties with prominent Israelis, especially those associated with the Likud Party; has worked for an Israeli defense company; and, according to credible reports, was discovered by the FBI passing classified information to Israel - when, despite all of this, he is a central figure in the network of those pushing for wars to rearrange the entire politics of the Middle East in Israel's favor, and with nary a soul having the courage to mention the obvious overriding Jewish loyalty apparent in Perle's actions, that is indeed a breathtaking display of power.

One must contemplate the fact that American Jews have managed to maintain unquestioned support for Israel over the last thirty-seven years, despite Israel's seizing land and engaging in a brutal suppression of the Palestinians in the occupied territories - an occupation that will most likely end with expulsion or complete subjugation, degradation, and apartheid. During the same period Jewish organizations in America have been a principal force - in my view the main force - for transforming America into a state dedicated to suppressing ethnic identification among Europeans, for encouraging massive multiethnic immigration into the U.S., and for erecting a legal system and cultural ideology that is obsessively sensitive to the complaints and interests of non-European ethnic minorities - the culture of the Holocaust. All this is done without a whisper of double standards in the aboveground media...

Jews say that being "anti-Semitic" is a terrible crime. Do they say being "anti-Arab" is a terrible crime? What about "anti-Christian", or "anti-German"? Of course the Jews think they are special. Any other group could be our enemy, but not the Jews, they say. The Jews tell us the Arabs are our enemies. The Jewish controlled media tells us that the Jews are America's only friend in the Middle East. The truth is that before these Jews America didn't have any enemies in the Middle East.

No one is moaning because America once fought the British. But suddenly Jews can not be the enemy under any circumstances. Why is that? Because the Jews control the media. Think outside the box.

Now that America is ruled by the Jews it is no insult to be called "anti-Semite". The insult is that they think we care about their self serving verbiage.

The Jewish controlled media said the French were "cheese eating surrender monkeys". Why can't the French howl "anti-French" like the Jews howl "anti-Semite"? Because the French don't control the media, Jews do.

This is what President Nixon said:

http://www.hnn.us/comments/15664.html

"There may be some truth in that if the Arabs have some complaints about my policy towards Israel, they have to realize that the Jews in the U.S. control the entire information and propaganda machine, the large newspapers, the motion pictures, radio and television, and the big companies. And there is a force that we have to take into consideration."

Great DX John, you seem to have the magic touch with picking up European MW stations from South Africa! So far, here in FL one mile from the Atlantic, I have only managed to pick up two, plus that 1521 Saudi station when Buffalo, NY on 1520 was down. Were you just "barefooting" or using one of your loops with the portable?

One must remember, as I'm certain John might agree, is that where he is located, the MW band is not so severely congested, which enables him, and others to pick up those exotic catches.

"Every people that considers itself to be a people should, to the maximum extent possible, live under its own government." (The Maxim of Self-Determination)

Unless that maxim is observed, there is no self-determination and no independence and certainly no freedom.

Multinational corporations and internationalist elites see independence and self-determination as impediments to their power and profits.

So they create ideologies that dismantle borders and encourage the dissolution of distinct peoples and nations. They pretend to "embrace diversity" while they promote an ideology that destroys human diversity. And they tell us that geographically-based "democracy" is self-government -- but it is not.

I've been a Liberty Net participant, and I assure you that (to mention just a few of the net regulars), published author Victor Misek, W1WCR, radio host Al Parker, N2SAG, radio network owner Vern Kaspar, W9FAM, and engineering physicist Marty Fenik, N2IRJ, are all men of substantial intellectual powers.

If you're an amateur radio operator, please join in. There are spirited debates on the Liberty Net, and many dissenting views. I certainly don't agree with everything said by every station checking in -- in fact, that would be impossible.

And do I really need to say that "traction" in the world of politics has little correlation with truth? What correlation exists is, I think, an _inverse_ correlation.

As for Barack Hussein Fetchit's status, one could start with the Naturalization Act of 1790, instituted while the Founders were still alive and never legally rescinded.

The regime in Washington is illegal in its totality, and it is only the media- and government-induced _perception_ that it is legal and that it is a continuation of the original government of the United States that keeps it propped up.

Let us hope that the machinery of illusion will continue to weaken.

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

Well, I didn't coin the term Marxist Mafia, but I think it's a good description of the Communists currently infesting Congress, the White House, the News Media, Universities, etc, ... and their Mafia-like thuggery against those who would dare oppose or expose them.

Yes, the MW band is quite open and MW DXing is great fun, especially from one of our great DXpedition sites on the coast.
Going to Jongensgat in mid September and taking the Kiwa MW Loop which now seems to be working again.

Sounds like you have a great location for MW DX. How easy is it for you to hear Australia & the Pacific, or South America? What's your best MW catch (distance vs power) so far? Kind of reminds me of when I was stationed at Andersen AFB on Guam. Sometimes MW DX would pour in from east Asia (Japan, China, Russia, Phillipines, etc.). However, there was always a lot of static from the seemingly ever-present tropical Pacific thunderstorms.

I can sometimes hear France-1557 and Arabia-1521 here in Ohio. Is that Arabian on 1521 really running 2 megawatts? Do you know if it's pattern is directional?

Actually, I see a system evolving that is maximally oligarch-friendly and minimally respectful of national or individual rights. It has all the worst characteristics of Communism and international capitalism. Times ten.

And "democracy" and "equality" are the quasi-religious myths that the system uses to keep its livestock working, shopping, and fighting.

Honor bright,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

Instant/automatic ZERO Credibility Rating!! CR = 0.

Anti-Semitism soon will move from "Endangered" status to "Laughingstock" status. And for most INTELLIGENT people, it already HAS.

The Inevitable Fate of Movements of Intolerance in America

Society ALWAYS outgrows intolerant and hateful movements that are mired in stupidity, and are supported by NO relevant facts. ALWAYS. No exceptions! And our own history, here in the USA, makes that very clear. Since 1865 ---

-- Slavery -- EXTINCT
-- Opposition to Women's Suffrage -- EXTINCT
-- Prohibition -- EXTINCT
-- Opposition to Birth-Control Pill -- EXTINCT
-- Segregation -- EXTINCT
-- Anti-Semitism -- ENDANGERED (Thankfully)
-- Anti-Choice (abortion) -- LAUGHINGSTOCK STATUS
-- Opposition to EQUAL Rights for Gays -- FADING FAST

Segregationists were a JOKE (i.e., "laughingstock status") during the last few years before it became extinct. As opposition to EQUAL rights for gays (with respect to housing, being parents, marriage, and employment) continues to fade, the remaining opponents first will become laughingstocks, and then that hatefulness will end in extinction. constant consciousness-raising, as is being assisted by the media in its sitcoms, talk shows, etc., is very helpful.

The ludicrous and hateful actions and defense of sociopathic agendas against individual liberties on the part of the adherents/lemmings of the RRR Cult will soon lead to American society's becoming EMBARRASSED to have those louts in their midst, making our country a laughingstock in front of the entire world.

Even now, the process of their becoming FED UP with that is building toward the critical mass that will trigger the rejection of the RRR's shameful and worthless agendas. Before much longer, society will reject those movements with all the force that it brought to bear against segregation.

Historical precedents have CONSISTENTLY proven that Americans outgrow* movements of intolerance (such as ALL of the above), and then REJECT them -- leaving them behind FOREVER.

And that is EXTINCTION.

Very WELCOME extinction. As in, "Good riddance forever!"

Well, that may be going a little too far.

But it should be obvious that those who remained behind and did not intermarry with Khazars and Europeans and North Africans, et cetera, are closer to the original genetic makeup of the ancient Hebrews than those who _did_ so wander.

So the people called Palestinians today have, I think, a much better claim on being Semites than do Jews.

Today's Palestinians are also likely to be much closer to the ancient Hebrews genetically than are modern Jews. So the Palestinians' understandable outrage at being displaced and dispersed has a basis much deeper and truer than old religious texts. It is biological.

With every good wish,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

Yes, Jongensgat and Seefontein are a MW DXers paradise - it doesnt get much better than that unless you want to go to Easter Island or somewhere really expensive and exotic

My best catch of a lifetime was CFUN Vancouver Canada, 10,000 miles away, heard at Seefontein. 50 Kw power. See:
http://www.dxing.info/dxpeditions/seefontein_2007_09.dx

Seefontein situated on the West Coast Atlantic Ocean favours the America's, whilst Jongensgat on the East Coast Indian Ocean favours Australia and the Pacific rim.
Brazil is a pest as you have to dig deep to get the more distant U.S. stations DXing at Seefontein.
Jongensgat brings in the Aussie stations strongly and it is possible to DX their very low power stations. We have logged Guam there, but a difficult catch, doesnt come in every year. Japan and Philippines are also heard but rare and difficult.

Ya, we also get a lot of static from the tropical thunderstorms to the North of us. The golden half hour at sunrise and sunset can yield excellent results before/after the storms cease to propagate.

1521 Saudi Arabia is indeed 2000 Kw and is omnidirectional as DXer's all over the world get it.

Have fun and good DX

John Plimmer, Montagu, Western Cape Province, South Africa.

Joseph Campbell, "Occidental Mythology", pg 34:
"... Furthermore, whereas the earliest known European mythological records of importance date from the paleolithyic caves of c. 30,000 -15,000 BC, those in the Levant are of the neolithic agc, c. 7500-3500 BC. In the European spirit the structuring force lives on through the long building of its races to the activities of the hunt, and therewith the virtues of individual judgment and independent excellence; while, in contrast, in the younger, yet culturally far more complex, Near East, the virtues of group living and submission to authority have been the ideals bred into the individual- who, in such a world, is actually, no individual at all, in the European sense, but the constituent of a group. And, as were are to see, throughout the troubled history of the interplay of these two culture worlds in their alternating pendulations, the irresoluable conflict of the principle of the paleolithic individual and the neolithic sanctified group has created and maintained even to the present day a situation of both creative reciprocity and mutual disdain."

In "Infidel", Ayaan Hirsi Ali, after reporting the struggle of growing up in the Islamic world, gets to Northern Europe, and asks why it is that these secular infidel nations are so peaceful and prosperous while where Allah is worshiped as he should be... The above is a clue. We are talking of the character of the Semite vs Aryan men.

Ayaan notes how the Muslim accept from the Dutch, the free food, housing, education, & medical care. But will not work in the Tulip fields because to them, such work is for slaves. What they really want to do is raise racing camels. They are proud of their ancestry from long lines of illustrious warriors, loyal to their forefathers traditions, and will therefore, not adapt to Aryan culture or values.

What also keeps it propped up is the corruption and ineptitude of so many other governments. The money of Islamic oppressors is invested in the US economy, in part because they know, when the US troops come home, they will have at each other, as they do in Somalia where its made clear, as Ayaan also reports, they cannot compromise.

> Let us hope that the machinery of illusion will continue to weaken.
Be careful of what you wish for. If it collapses, note Smith & Wesson now guarantee superior rights to smart women, who will no doubt use their cunts to get all the male allies they want.

Campbell does not ever spell it out, but if you consider the whole of what he has to say, its Aryan women who've had the power to decide on sperm donation, and that's resulted in the superiority of Aryans. Men in power cant help but mate with sexy airheads, whose sons are morons, but still inherit power.

Depending on the flavor/version of linux you have, there is probably software on your install disk. If not, there is 3rd party software out there for download ... I don't know if the install disk had linux software on it or not ...

Actually, you don't need that quiet of a laptop/p-supply. Just use the serial to usb with ~30ft of USB cable length. Wrap 10-15 turns of the cable through a ft240-43 toroid. Friend had to do this with a noisy dell ... worked great. Keep the receiver 15-20ft from the laptop. He is now running a new Acer and the problem is non-existent. I had no problem with just a 6ft. USB cable and no choke on an HP. I was really impressed. My $5000+ SDR transceiver beats it, but darn, at that price it is a steal! I would place it into the HOT category of receivers ...

Here are some quotes from "The Shadow of Zog" by Israel Shamir:

Jeff Blankfort writes, "Ardently pro-Israel American Jews are in positions of unprecedented influence within the United States and have assumed or been given decision making positions over virtually every segment of our culture and body politic". And he quotes Benjamin Ginsberg's "The Fatal Embrace: Jews and the State":

"Jews played a central role in American finance during the 1980s, and they were among the chief beneficiaries of that decade's corporate mergers and reorganizations. Today, though barely 2 % of the nation's population is Jewish, close to half its billionaires are Jews. The chief executive officers of the three major television networks and the four largest film studios are Jews, as are the owners of the nation's largest newspaper chain and the most influential single newspaper, the New York Times".

Is it a conspiracy of Jews to steal the Republic? No, no conspiracy is necessary. In Jules Verne's juvenile novel, Children of Captain Grant, a villain leads the captain's ship astray by placing a magnet brick beneath the compass. The magnet does not conspire: it constrains the compass. The sheer mass of self-involved Jews in the media acts in a similar way and draws the superpower off its normal course. For the media is the nerve system of a modern state. Modern democracy in practice in a very complicated society can be compared to a sophisticated computer. Its machinery can function successfully on one condition: there is a free flow of information across the system. While every input is instinctively checked and sieved on one criterion, whether it is good for Jews..

Thus, concentration of Jews in the media created the distortion. A takeover of every other part of industry or trade would be noticed and reported in the media; but there is no remedy for media takeover...

Gandhi could be condemned as 'racist', for he 'noticed' the privileged position of the British in India. By PC logic, a good American should reply to Mahatma: yes, there are some rich and powerful Brits in India, but there are also poor Tommy Atkinses, governesses, honest administrators, writers like Kipling and Orwell. On the other hand, there are powerful and rich Rajas, important Brahmins. How do you dare, sir, to demand 'de-colonisation'! This is sheer anti-English racism!

An old Indian Air Force officer Joe Thomas actually reminded that, "while the population of the US today is approximately the same as the population of India a century ago, the British in India never numbered more than 50,000 and still ruled India. They did not rule India by force but by dominating Indian discourse. Indians fought for the British and put down rebellions. During the two world wars, millions of Indians fought as volunteers for Britain. If such a tiny group could control India, then it is not strange that 100 times that number can influence the United States"...

Liberating America From Israel

by Paul Findley

Nine-eleven would not have occurred if the U.S. government had refused to help Israel humiliate and destroy Palestinian society. Few express this conclusion publicly, but many believe it is the truth. I believe the catastrophe could have been prevented if any U.S. president during the past 35 years had had the courage and wisdom to suspend all U.S. aid until Israel withdrew from the Arab land seized in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

The U.S. lobby for Israel is powerful and intimidating, but any determined president-even President Bush this very day-could prevail and win overwhelming public support for the suspension of aid by laying these facts before the American people:

Israel's present government, like its predecessors, is determined to annex the West Bank-biblical Judea and Samaria - so Israel will become Greater Israel. Ultra-Orthodox Jews, who maintain a powerful role in Israeli politics, believe the Jewish Messiah will not come until Greater Israel is a reality. Although a minority in Israel, they are committed, aggressive, and influential. Because of deep religious conviction, they are determined to prevent Palestinians from gaining statehood on any part of the West Bank.

In its violent assaults on Palestinians, Israel uses the pretext of eradicating terrorism, but its forces are actually engaged advancing the territorial expansion just cited. Under the guise of anti-terrorism, Israeli forces treat Palestinians worse than cattle. With due process nowhere to be found, hundreds are detained for long periods and most are tortured. Some are assassinated. Homes, orchards, and business places are destroyed. Entire cities are kept under intermittent curfew, some confinements lasting for weeks. Injured or ill Palestinians needing emergency medical care are routinely held at checkpoints for an hour or more. Many children are undernourished. The West Bank and Gaza have become giant concentration camps. None of this could have occurred without U.S. support. Perhaps Israeli officials believe life will become so unbearable that most Palestinians will eventually leave their ancestral homes.

Once beloved worldwide, the U.S. government finds itself reviled in most countries because it provides unconditional support of Israeli violations of the United Nations Charter, international law, and the precepts of all major religious faiths.

How did the American people get into this fix?

Nine-eleven had its principal origin 35 years ago when Israel's U.S. lobby began its unbroken success in stifling debate about the proper U.S. role in the Arab-Israeli conflict and effectively concealed from public awareness the fact that the U.S. government gives massive uncritical support to Israel.

Thanks to the suffocating influence of Israel's U.S. lobby, open discussion of the Arab-Israeli conflict has been non-existent in our government all these years. I have firsthand knowledge, because I was a member of the House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee in June 1967 when Israeli military forces took control of the Golan Heights, a part of Syria, as well as the Palestinian West Bank and Gaza. I continued as a member for 16 years and to this day maintain a close watch on Congress.

For 35 years, not a word has been expressed in that committee or in either chamber of Congress that deserves to be called debate on Middle East policy. No restrictive or limiting amendments on aid to Israel have been offered for 20 years, and none of the few offered in previous years received more than a handful of votes. On Capitol Hill, criticism of Israel, even in private conversation, is all but forbidden, treated as downright unpatriotic, if not anti-Semitic. The continued absence of free speech was assured when those few who spoke out-Senators Adlai Stevenson and Charles Percy, and Reps. Paul "Pete" McCloskey, Cynthia McKinney, Earl Hilliard, and myself-were defeated at the polls by candidates heavily financed by pro-Israel forces.

As a result, legislation dealing with the Middle East has been heavily biased in favor of Israel and against Palestinians and other Arabs year after year. Home constituencies, misled by news coverage equally lop-sided in Israel's favor, remain largely unaware that Congress behaves as if it were a subcommittee of the Israeli parliament.

However, the bias is widely noted beyond America, where most news media candidly cover Israel's conquest and generally excoriate America's complicity and complacency. When President Bush welcomed Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, sometimes called the Butcher of Beirut, as "my dear friend" and "a man of peace" after Israeli forces, using U.S.-donated arms, completed their devastation of the West Bank last spring, worldwide anger against American policy reached the boiling point.

The fury should surprise no one who reads foreign newspapers or listens to BBC. In several televised statements long before 9/11, Osama bin Laden, believed by U.S. authorities to have masterminded 9/11, cited U.S. complicity in Israel's destruction of Palestinian society as a principal complaint. Prominent foreigners, in and out of government, express their opposition to U.S. policies with unprecedented frequency and severity, especially since Bush announced his determination to make war against Iraq.

The lobby's intimidation remains pervasive. It seems to reach every government center and even houses of worship and revered institutions of higher learning. It is highly effective in silencing the many U.S. Jews who object to the lobby's tactics and Israel's brutality...

Today, a year after 9/11, President Bush has made no attempt to redress grievances, or even to identify them. In fact, he has made the scene far worse by supporting Israel's religious war against Palestinians, an alliance that has intensified anti-American anger. He seems oblivious to the fact that nearly two billion people worldwide regard the plight of Palestinians as today's most important foreign-policy challenge. No one in authority will admit a calamitous reality that is skillfully shielded from the American people but clearly recognized by most of the world: America suffered 9/11 and its aftermath and may soon be at war with Iraq, mainly because U.S. policy in the Middle East is made in Israel, not in Washington.

Israel is a scofflaw nation and should be treated as such. Instead of helping Sharon intensify Palestinian misery, our president should suspend all aid until Israel ends its occupation of Arab land Israel seized in 1967. The suspension would force Sharon's compliance or lead to his removal from office, as the Israeli electorate will not tolerate a prime minister who is at odds with the White House.

If Bush needs an additional reason for doing the right thing, he can justify the suspension as a matter of military necessity, an essential step in winning international support for his war on terrorism. He can cite a worthy precedent. When President Abraham Lincoln issued the proclamation that freed only the slaves in states that were then in rebellion, he make the restriction because of "military necessity."

If Bush suspends U.S. aid, he will liberate all Americans from long years of bondage to Israel's misdeeds.

Mr. Paul Findley, who served as a Republican congressman from Illinois for 22 years, is the author of 'They Dare to Speak Out' and a member of the American Educational Trust's Foreign Relations Committee.

Jews say that being "anti-Semitic" is a terrible crime. Do they say being "anti-Arab" is a terrible crime? What about "anti-Christian", or "anti-German"? Of course the Jews think they are special. Any other group could be our enemy, but not the Jews, they say. The Jews tell us the Arabs are our enemies. The Jewish controlled media tells us that the Jews are America's only friend in the Middle East. The truth is that before these Jews America didn't have any enemies in the Middle East.

No one is moaning because America once fought the British. But suddenly Jews can not be the enemy under any circumstances. Why is that? Because the Jews control the media. Think outside the box.

Now that America is ruled by the Jews it is no insult to be called "anti-Semite". The insult is that they think we care about their self serving verbiage.

The Jewish controlled media said the French were "cheese eating surrender monkeys". Why can't the French howl "anti-French" like the Jews howl "anti-Semite"? Because the French don't control the media, Jews do.

This is what President Nixon said:

http://www.hnn.us/comments/15664.html

"There may be some truth in that if the Arabs have some complaints about my policy towards Israel, they have to realize that the Jews in the U.S. control the entire information and propaganda machine, the large newspapers, the motion pictures, radio and television, and the big companies. And there is a force that we have to take into consideration."

Yes, it is. The word is grotesquely misused by the ethnically distinct oligarchs to keep us enthusiastic about sending our sons to die in their wars, for the most egregious example.

It has one important difference from the other two, though.

Even if the system weren't lying about them, and some approximation of them could be made into reality, democracy and equality would be undesirable.

No noble, intelligent man or woman thinks of himself as equal, or wants to be made equal to anyone else.

Nor does he or she want to be subjected to the whims, crimes, and violence of the dumb majority -- ever.

But freedom is different.

Good and great people _do_ want and need freedom -- freedom from stifling rules and drains on their energy, freedom from being dragged down by the stupidity and open hands and mouths of those they want nothing to do with, freedom to make communities with those they choose to associate with (and no others), freedom to think and write and speak, freedom to be themselves without pretense.

All the best,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

"The Mafia (also known as "Cosa Nostra") is a criminal brotherhood that emerged in the mid 19th century Sicily. It is a loose association of criminal groups that share a common organizational structure and code of conduct. Each group, known as a "family", "association", "clan" or "cosca", claims sovereignty over a territory in which it operates its rackets ï¿½ usually a town or village or a neighbourhood (borgata) of a larger city."

Nice. I can partially control the 320 with Hamlib, but with very limited function.

Again, I point out it is not an SDR. It is an analog radio with a DSP final IF demodulator.

I note with some interest that Israel has now cut down over a thousand trees around a Bedouin settlement. After the hundreds of thousands of Palestinian Olive trees already destroyed, this must have been easy for them.

The God of the Jews must really hate trees. He started out small by burning bushes in the days of Moses and the habit just grew.

So??? That's as good a reason to access this valuable REMEDY headache. NO big deal.

FORTUMATELY, since their EMANCIPATION in 1973, girls and women in the USA have the right to access abortion UPON REQUEST.
NO need to provide ANY "reasons." JUST as there's NO NEED to explain WHY one is purchasing aspirin tablets.

As a dumbass Canuck, you'd not know Moses even if he crawled up your knawrly ass and spent a long cold winter there.

On the other hand, might one suppose that if the Palestinians, and their handlers, Hamas, the Saudi's, et al, were to stop dropping rockets, stop terrorist attacks, etc., that their lives might be vastly improved?

If so, you're right! What OUR politicians do is absolutely NONE of "his* business. NOR is anything ELSE here in the

I've been to Israel, though it was over 30 years ago, and I can state with out question, that the folks I encountered, and I worked with the IDF, were more than willing to work with everyone in the region. Essentially, they simply wanted to be left alone.

I'd like to thank the late HM King Hussein, of Jordan, (JY1), who I think was an admiral individual in the region.

I also feel that his son, HM King Abdullah, is certainly trying to do his best to bring peace to the region.

I once read somewhere most of the Jewish people in Israel do not think of themselfs as God's special people.

All people are God's people.

"Freedom from need"? That's the promise always made by tyrants. You obey; they'll supply your "needs" by stealing from others and giving a small cut of the take to you. Their promises are a lot like the promises made by con men.

I believe, if I remember correctly, that "freedom from want" was one of the Great War Criminal's "Four Freedoms."

Those "Four Freedoms" were widely referred to in Washington at the time as "the rake-off, the pay-off, the shakedown, and the fix."

It's amazing the number of individuals who've never been out of their own hometowns, who stand at the head of the line in telling the Israelis how to live.

They've shown their ass when the need has arisen. They've taken swift and decisive action, when the need has arisen.

But if they weren't willing, as you point out, to work with anyone, they'd have laid waste to the region in about 10 days, and left only smoldering rubble of every nation/state that has, to date, questioned their right to exist.

Ditto!

I recall being on the border east of Haifa, in reality, not all that far from the Med Sea, and watching flares being sent up, trying to spot infiltrators...

Quite an education during the several weeks I was there.

The one interesting thing was that they had no separate Navy, Army or Air Force at the time, they were all Israeli Defence Forces (IDF).

2400. Liberals And Their Fascist Roots

Lenin identified “Useful Idiots” as those who lived in liberal democracies and furthered the work of communism.

According to useful Liberal Fascist idiots anyone who is not a ComuSexual (Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/Communist) is a Fascist.

Let us examine the facts of Liberal/ComuSexual history and its unrefutable roots in Fascism!

Liberal Fascism
Pt.1 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GsFoiVZDSRs
Pt.2 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3hdqjDIfyfo
Pt.3 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Nqdf7Wz-Pe4
Pt.4 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=SfJSub3CDJk
Pt.5 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vmAMVyNuVa0
Pt.6 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KE-4VDpwYwk
Pt.7 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=DCJqnwZPc0Q

What struck me in the book Liberal Fascism was how American Progressives went from defining "patriotism" in WWI as a pro-war position to (for them) defining patriotism as antiwar when Vietnam came around. How they went from throwing people in jail w/o charges during Wilson's admin. to now taking extreme civil rights/human rights positions w.r.t. radical Islamic terrorists, combatants, etc.
How they threw German-Americans in prison during WWI and Japanese-Americans in prison in WWII - and now object to Gitmo, Abu Ghraib, etc.

Let's see: what other switches are there? Margaret Sanger was anti-abortion and now the Left is pro-abortion. They believed blacks and other people of color were less intelligent than whites, now that's verboten to believe.

Somehow we need to have a shorthand way to summarize the Left's evolving positions. Of course, that old SDS slogan, "The issue is never the issue, the Revolution is the Issue" comes to mind. The issues are a means to an end, not the end in itself. The end is power and control - running the society. (Which, if ever achieved, is empty
- meaningless. Vanity. All is vanity. Solomon!)

Left-wing roots of the Nazis
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4758sBZLC5k

The above DVD Documentary "The Soviet Story" is a must see and shows the unrefutable historic brotherhood between Communism and Liberal Fascism:
http://www.SovietStory.com

Marxists - Communnists
NAZIs - National Workers Socialist Party Juche - [N.Korea] are all leftist brothers
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Fa1sj0gwnuQ

Why Nazism Was Socialism and Why Socialism Is Totalitarian
Pt.1 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Uk9WQaAIbOg
Pt.2 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FmDXuA1-8FE
Pt.3 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1eeNB_rWqpk
Pt.4 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4maXhvSm4fQ

The Liberal's Path to Socialism
Pt.1 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fPyoEbU_wc4
Pt.2 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Dvuxr7v4xzk

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"This is the real reason the collectivist Left hates religion: Churches as institutions compete with the state for the people’s allegiance, and many devout people put their faith in God before their faith in the state. Knowing this, the secularists wage an ongoing war against religion, chipping away bit by bit at our nation’s Christian heritage."
--Dr. Ron Paul, Libertarian

According to Liberals, anyone who refutes a ComuSexual (Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/Communist) is a moron.

The Liberal Fascist AGENDA: Grinding America DOWN
http://AgendaDocumentary.com

Useful Idiots are naïve, foolish, ignorant of facts, unrealistically idealistic, dreamers, willfully in denial or deceptive. They hail from the ranks of the chronically unhappy, the anarchists, the aspiring revolutionaries, the neurotics who are at war with life, the disaffected alienated from government, corporations, and just about any and all institutions of society. The Useful Idiot can be a billionaire, a movie star, an academe of renown, a politician, or from any other segment of the population.

Arguably, the most dangerous Useful Idiot is the “Politically Correct.” He is the master practitioner of euphemism, hedging, doubletalk, and outright deception.

The Useful Idiot derives satisfaction from being anti-establishment. He finds perverse gratification in aiding the forces that aim to dismantle an existing order, whatever it may be: an order he neither approves of nor he feels he belongs to.

The Useful Idiot is conflicted and dishonest. He fails to look inside himself and discover the causes of his own problems and unhappiness while he readily enlists himself in causes that validate his distorted perception.

Understandably, it is easier to blame others and the outside world than to examine oneself with an eye to self-discovery and self-improvement. Furthermore, criticizing and complaining—liberal practices of the Useful Idiot—require little talent and energy. The Useful Idiot is a great armchair philosopher and “Monday Morning Quarterback.”

The Useful Idiot is not the same as a person who honestly has a different point of view. A society without honest and open differences of views is a dead society. Critical, different and fresh ideas are the life blood of a living society—the very anathema of autocracies where the official position is sacrosanct.

Even the “normal” spends a great deal more energy aiming to fix things out there than working to overcome his own flaws and shortcomings, or contribute positively to the larger society. People don’t like to take stock of what they are doing or not doing that is responsible for the conditions they disapprove.

The Useful Idiot, among other things, is a master practitioner of scapegoating. He assigns blame to others while absolving himself of responsibility, has a long handy list of candidates for blaming anything and everything, and by living a distorted life, he contributes to the ills of society.

The Useful Idiot may even engage in willful misinformation and deception when it suits him.

The lesson is clear. Beware of the Useful Idiots who live in liberal democracies. Knowingly or unknowingly, they serve as the greatest volunteer and effective soldiers of communism.

Many things get better after squeezing with ones fingers!

Jerking off not enough for you, boy?

Do you spit or swallow?

Very tasty!

Actually, I know quite a few homosexuals.

Ya right, suck my dick...

I interact on at least a weekly basis with them, and surprisingly enough, they themselves utter the words 'damn faggots' with those who tend to step out of line.

I don't 'fear' homos, oh faux one!

Well, when one considers that they are at least pleasuring themselves a good amount of the time then at least they can't cause to much trouble.

Come on! How can anyone be straight after free beer and sausages?

Everything is just fine. It's Tulip Time!

And, when I think about it, still brings tears to my eyes.

Is that the gay place to be?

No, unfortunately I don't. What had happened, was that I was a 'novice' at the time, and I heard him and another fellow from Kenya talking on the 15 meter band at the time.

I was operating CW and I guess bugging them trying to get them to acknowledge me!

At any rate, the Kenya op heard me, and then JY1 also said hello. They were using SSB.

But, at the time, I really had no idea who JY1 was, and only realized it several years later, at the time, I was more interested in working Kenya!

Do I wish I had the QSL? Yes, sitting here today, that would certainly be something I would treasure, much like my autographed pic of Joe Adamov.

Memories!

As far as I know, the whip antenna on the E-1 is used for both AM and FM reception. How does it work with the whip extended?

If it's still performing poorly, there may be a loose connection between the whip and the circuitry.

I think there was a book by a prof. in LA called, "The City That Should Never Have Been Built". I might have the title a little wrong, but he stated that the entire "new" city(not the old French Quarter which is on high ground) should never have been developed.

"Fascism [is] the complete opposite of…Marxian Socialism..." --Benito Mussolini, the Father of Fascism

Fascism is a form of extreme right-wing ideology that celebrates the nation or the race as an organic community transcending all other loyalties. It emphasizes a myth of national or racial rebirth after a period of decline or destruction. To this end, fascism calls for a "spiritual revolution" against signs of moral decay such as individualism and materialism, and seeks to purge "alien" forces and groups that threaten the organic community. Fascism tends to celebrate masculinity, youth, mystical unity, and the regenerative power of violence. Often, but not always, it promotes racial superiority doctrines, ethnic persecution, imperialist expansion, and genocide. At the same time, fascists may embrace a form of internationalism based on either racial or ideological solidarity across national boundaries. Usually fascism espouses open male supremacy, though sometimes it may also promote female solidarity and new opportunities for women of the privileged nation or race.

Fascism's approach to politics is both populist--in that it seeks to activate "the people" as a whole against perceived oppressors or enemies--and elitist--in that it treats the people's will as embodied in a select group, or often one supreme leader, from whom authority proceeds downward. Fascism seeks to organize a cadre-led mass movement in a drive to seize state power. It seeks to forcibly subordinate all spheres of society to its ideological vision of organic community, usually through a totalitarian state. Both as a movement and a regime, fascism uses mass organizations as a system of integration and control, and uses organized violence to suppress opposition, although the scale of violence varies widely.

Fascism is hostile to Marxism, liberalism, and conservatism, yet it borrows concepts and practices from all three. Fascism rejects the principles of class struggle and workers' internationalism as threats to national or racial unity, yet it often exploits real grievances against capitalists and landowners through ethnic scapegoating or radical-sounding conspiracy theories. Fascism rejects the liberal doctrines of individual autonomy and rights, political pluralism, and representative government, yet it advocates broad popular participation in politics and may use parliamentary channels in its drive to power. Its vision of a "new order" clashes with the conservative attachment to tradition-based institutions and hierarchies, yet fascism often romanticizes the past as inspiration for national rebirth.

Fascism has a complex relationship with established elites and the non-fascist right. It is never a mere puppet of the ruling class, but an autonomous movement with its own social base. In practice, fascism defends capitalism against instability and the left, but also pursues an agenda that sometimes clashes with capitalist interests in significant ways. There has been much cooperation, competition, and interaction between fascism and other sections of the right, producing various hybrid movements and regimes.

There's not to many towns he doesn't know..

But he's got 38 minutes and 42 seconds..
Of life recorded, hand written..
Sometimes funny, your heart's feeling music on a disc spinning 'round..

Saw good times and bad times..
Never lookin' back..
Somehow that damn dream just seemed to stay..

And he went down to that city..

The Nazi's distaste for Marxism had more to do with the ethnic egalitarianism of the Communist Party than it did the actual socialist structure. After all, the Nazi Party itself was the Nationalsozialistische Deutsche Arbeiterpartei, originally abbreviated NSDAP.

In English: National Socialist German Workers' Party

National SOCIALIST German WORKERS' Party. Bolsheviks, with poor couture. And a taste for racial purity.

When they rose to power, the did what the oppressed always do:
they implement the iron fist of tyrrany in the Name of The People.

But they were first, and always, Socialists.

Well, if you recall, they cut down the cedars of Lebanon to build a temple for their god. But then, the Christians learned how useful it was to do the same in Europe, where the pagans regarded groves as sacred.
Whatever the Jews cut is an infinitesimal portion of what Christian have done, and are still doing.

Where's your bitch about the Amazon rain forest being clearcut? All Levantine scriptures have it that the earth is nothing more than the venue in which to try the souls of men. Anything done to it his name is justifiable.

DPM,

Fascists and Communists had Two Clashing
Visions of Socialism as a Means to an End :

National Socialists : Our Nation Above All
'other' Nations that are subordinate to us.

International Socialists {Communists} :
All Nations Equal to each other.

Unfortunate that they did not sign and return your prepared QSL. One always wonders about that.

I'm waiting for a QSL from Radio Fly (5960), Papua New Guinea.

I sent a prepared card, SAE, and $2. Have heard nothing, other than seeing some things indicating that they themselves were going to have a QSL printed, so perhaps ultimately they will send something.

I'd be happy with the prepared card!

It used to be that the PNG stations (and even the Indonesians) were good verifiers.

I've currently at least 20, and perhaps 21 PNG stations QSL'd (veried, for those in Glendale) who used to verify with a nice, sometimes spectacular letterhead with a sometimes long letter.

Times have changed I suppose, and the majority of the stations have apparently left SW, but the 60 meter certainly was hopping at one time.

Admittedly it was White Europeans who cut down those ancient groves, a sinful act if anything is sinful. But they were under the thrall of the Semites' ugly god.

A better question is this: Who cut down the sacred groves in the hearts and minds of White people? Who separated them from their indigenous religions and philosophies? Who tied them, perhaps fatally, to the insane death-spiral of the goat-herder religions of the Middle East, which bid fair to start yet another world war?

The same people who treat the Palestinians like no-longer-useful livestock.

For the moment they still have a use for us: cannon fodder and amazingly productive worker bees.

Quite true. Granted that all past and present gods exist only as memes and not as actual beings, Jehovah is still uniquely destructive, insane, and murderous.

Is FEMA the beginning of the end of freedom in America?
Why does every State have a predefined detainment area?
What is Obama's Agenda for the non-Muslim people of America?

Alex Jones explores these topics in Police State 4: The Rise of FEMA.

DPM,

Fascists and Communists had Two Clashing
Visions of Socialism as a Means to an End :

National Socialists : Our Nation Above All
'other' Nations that are subordinate to us.

International Socialists {Communists} :
All Nations Equal to each other.

you can see the root basis for the conflict ~ RHF
The Nazi party was made up of several groups and when Hitler got into power his vision of the state took over. He didn't nationalize industry and he saw Bolsheviks as sub human. The battle between communism and the rightwing ultra conservatives was one of ideology. The socialists in Germany took a back seat to all this after 1936. Your definitions of National Socialism is just that-yours. The National Socialist party headed by Dr. Joseph Goebbels was for a joining of the prolitariot in russia and germany and the nationization of industry. This ended in 1926 when Goebbles joined with Adolph Hitler.

The American Cival Liberties Union (ACLU) was established in 1920 by Roger Baldwin who candidly stated that “Communism [was] the goal”

Thank you for addressing the issues. Now, we have a discussion.

Your thinking on this is pretty clear. And I agree that there were difference between Marxist socialism and that driven by the NSDAP. I acknowledged that there were differences in philosophy. And stated that there may have been more urgent differences than mere politics.

Stripping away the Nationalistic impetus, for a moment, you see that what the NSDAP had envisioned was borne of socialism, but in Germany, for Aryan blood only. Socialism for Germans and exclusion from the benefits of citizenship in the State for non-Aryans. But socialism, just the same.

The ethnic egalitarianism of Marxist socialism and Communism clashed directly with Hitler's view of a pure society--that being of social, national, and, especially, ethnic purity. Joining of the proletariats from the two nations would have created a much different society from that envisioned by Hitler, with the inclusion of non-Aryan ethnicities. So Goebbels' vision would have as you point out, ended with his alliance with Hitler.

Now layering the Nationalist impetus back on the NSDAP you see the Deutschland Uber Alles mentality driving the global political goals, but, at home, the vision was still of socialism for German nationals of Aryan blood.

Fascism ultimately became the means to achieving the social utopian end by simply requiring standards of Aryan German ethnicity to hold and retain wealth and influence. Once approved by the Chancellor's Office, the elite would need to serve at the pleasure of the Chancellor to retain their station. Once met, the socialist agenda could be furthered much more quickly than by Marxism, and the Fascist machinery became the system of choice for the new Reich.

But the goal was still socialism for German nationals.

Right...

And North Korea is a people's democratic republic.

The name doesn't define the government. Socialist is a vague term. I'm a libertarian socialist and we don't like any kind of government.

Since Obama is neither a Socialist nor a Muslim, it is really hard to make

The BBC have been commenting with some "stiff upper lip" (trying not

Dave --

Have you ever taken a good look at "the people?" The proletariat?

Have you observed them where they gather, like at Wal Mart? Have you studied them with a objective eye -- up close?

If you have, you know for sure that they're never going to own or run _anything_, much less "the means of production."

Most of them can't spell "production."

They will always be the dupes and tools of clever scoundrels.

By taking away their votes (wasted on them anyway, since they understand nothing), which the Founders never intended them to have, we would take away more than half of the power of the scoundrels.

Honor bright,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

I agree - I have had so many quickie cards/letters come back lately that just say something like this, a simple confirmation with no details -

The prepped card I sent was pretty cool - neat and sharp, done on the PC, 4" x 6" full-color, the front had the station name, a small map of both the UK and Cyprus, and the back had full printed data and a place for a signature. It would have been no trouble at all to sign or even stamp/initial it and pop it in the same envelope with the mass-produced one-sided sheet they sent.

I wish you the best of fortune with the Radio Fly QSL - have you heard whether they've veried for anyone else?

Problem with all the FEMA nuttery is that FEMA doesn't have anything approaching the number of personnel needed to do any of the crazy shit the nutters claim they are plotting to do.

But don't let reality get in the way of your paranoid fantasy...

It's easy to call names.

A little more significant to create one, and then define it.

But not by much.

But it's been historically useful to substitute name calling for actual dialogue about an issue....to decry an opponent of not worthy of engaging by attaching a name to him/her.
